

Implementation

Institutional culture has a marvelous way of perpetuating beliefs, values, skills, and habits of mind. In order for these to change, there must be multiple personal experiences where action and reflection feed each other in recursive waves of increasing understanding. Reflection should occur on the individual level as well as the corporate level.