Arthur Whitefield Spalding Papers

Collection 10

Biographical Information

Arthur Whitefield Spalding (spelled "Spaulding" with a "u" until 1916) was closely connected with the Seventh-day Adventist church throughout his life. It was the year that he was born, 1877, that his parents joined the church. Just before his eleventh birthday, his family moved to Battle Creek where he worked for several church leaders. At the age of 14, he was secretary to R. M. Kilgore and later secretary to J. H. and W. K. Kellogg at Battle Creek Sanitarium, and secretary to President E. A. Sutherland at Battle Creek College. As an educator, Arthur Spalding headed the department of English and supervised small fruit farming at Emmanuel Missionary College from 1903 to 1906. He taught in and directed elementary and secondary schools in Wisconsin and the South. In 1910 he co-founded Fletcher Institute in North Carolina.

A writer throughout his life, he produced his first book, A Man of Valor, while teaching at Emmanuel Missionary College. As secretary to Ellen White in 1913 he wrote Men of the Mountain under her employ. He has contributed many articles for church publications and books familiar to Adventist readers such as Golden Treasury of Bible Stories and Origin and History of Seventh-day Adventists.

For Nineteen years (1922-1941) Arthur Spalding served as founder and full-time secretary of the Home Commission of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists--writing and lecturing extensively on the home. His wife Maud Wolcott Spalding (whom he had married in 1899) developed programs and material for preschool children, especially in the area of nature study. See Babes and Cradles (Adventist Heritage Center, PZ8.3 .S773B3) and boxes 11 and 12 of this collection.

Spalding died December 15, 1953, near Collegedale, Tennessee. See A Fire in My Bones (Adventist Heritage Center BX6158.9 .S68M3) for a biography by his children.

Scope

The Arthur Whitefield Spalding Papers were placed in the Adventist Heritage Center in the James White Library, Andrews University, in June 1960 by Arthur Spalding's children--Ronald W. Spalding, M.D., and Elizabeth Spalding McFadden of Gobles, Michigan. The papers contain correspondence, manuscripts, and articles collected by Arthur Spalding. Of particular interest are materials dealing with the Seventh-day Adventist General Conference Home Commission (which Spalding founded and directed from 1922 to 1941) and Spalding's correspondence dealing with the writing of Origin and History of Seventh-day Adventists.
