

While a few of Paul’s leading themes, especially justification by faith, are noticeably absent and the treatment of others is not comprehensive, what we have here is a remarkable collection of articles dealing mainly with the spiritual life. What is impressive about this collection is the bringing together of good scholarship and Christian devotion. In a way these articles are simply an elaboration of the Pauline emphasis to be “imitators of Christ.” Though basically a Catholic book, one will hardly be aware of this fact.

Andrews University

Sakae Kubo