Awards Offered: Social Entrepreneurs Recognized

Social Entrepreneurs Recognized Civic Ventures: The Purpose Prize

The Purpose Prize, administered by Civic Ventures, provides awards to people over 60 who are taking on society's biggest challenges. The prize recognizes those with the passion and experience to discover new opportunities, create new programs, and make lasting change. Five awards of $100,000 and five awards of $50,000 will be given to exceptional individuals who are channeling their creativity and talent to address critical social problems at the local, regional, national, or international level. The winners may be working in public, private, nonprofit, or for-profit organizations devoted to tackling the hardest challenges of our time: homelessness, social justice and human rights, violence, poverty and hunger, health, education, and the environment, to name a few. Nominees must be legal residents of the U.S. who have initiated important innovations in an encore career. The nomination deadline is March 31, 2011. Visit the Purpose Prize website to learn more about the nomination process.

ABOUT THE PRIZE

The Purpose Prize®, now in its fifth year, is the nation’s only large-scale investment in people over 60 who are combining their passion and experience for social good. The Prize awards up to $100,000 each to 10 people in encore careers creating new ways to solve tough social problems.

The Prize was created in 2005 by Civic Ventures with funding from the John Templeton Foundation and The Atlantic Philanthropies to showcase the value of experience and disprove notions that innovation is the sole province of the young. It’s for those with the passion to make change and the experience to know how to do it. Find out more about sponsorships.

At the United Way Annual Meeting and Recognition Luncheon held on Thursday, Jan. 13, at Lake Michigan College in Benton Harbor, Mich., representatives from Andrews University were surprised to learn they were accepting a Live United Award for the University’s work in a funded partner evaluation project. The award was accepted by Dave Faehner, vice president for University Advancement, and Curtis VanderWaal, chair of the Department of Social Work and director of the Center for Community Impact Research, a branch of the Institute for Prevention of Addictions (IPA).

The United Way of Southwest Michigan offers annual funding to 42 local agencies in addition to providing funding to multiple other projects and programs throughout Berrien County. Programs are focused on improving lives in four areas: education, basic needs, health and income generation. This is accomplished through agency partnerships and programs, for example the After School Program through the Boys & Girls Club or Supper Sacks through Senior Nutrition Services.

Since January 2010, Andrews University has been working to help the United Way track their program outcomes and create a community report card. VanderWaal says he and Duane McBride, director of the IPA and chair of the Department of Behavioral Sciences, were asked "to determine the extent to which the United Way funded partners were meeting their impact goals for the community."

According to the United Way, the community report card will offer donors a better way to know just what their donated dollars are doing in the community. The evaluation is being led by VanderWaal, who is closely collaborating with faculty and graduate students in the Departments of Social Work and Behavioral Sciences to conduct the data collection and evaluation.

"We are essentially helping the United Way to develop an evaluation capacity," says VanderWaal.

Graduate student support for the project evaluation is critical. Working in teams, students visit the United Way funded programs and work with the program’s leaders to identify goals and desired outcomes. Students then identify an evaluation tool, sometimes custom-designing a tool tailored to the program’s needs. After collecting and analyzing the information, a report is presented to both the agency and United Way. The project will continue and expand in 2011.

According to Anna Murphy, president of the United Way of Southwest Michigan, ensuring a better sense of understanding of United Way’s work and impact on the community helps with fund-raising.

"The Live United Award is given to an individual or company that exemplifies Give, Advocate and Volunteer. Curt and his team at Andrews are a vital resource for United Way and our evaluation project, enabling United Way to build a system that will demonstrate long-term impact of its funding decisions," says Murphy. "Along with his team, his students are also involved with United Way funded partners to help each of them build capacity and strengthen the work they do. In addition, Curt and his team provide many additional hours and resources in-kind."

Since 1985, the Institute for Prevention of Addictions (IPA) has been working to reduce and prevent alcohol and drug dependence through research and education. In response to a recent trend of projects involving community-based evaluations, VanderWaal helped establish this new branch of the IPA: the Center for Community Impact Research.

On January 18, 2011, at the annual meeting of the Berrien County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, the Andrews University Dairy walked away with the majority of the awards for milk production in 2010. Among them were the prestigious “High Herd in Butterfat” and “High Herd in Milk” with an average of 26,803 pounds (3,117 gallons) of milk per cow last year. The dairy also won the “High Cow in Milk Production” with Cow #2354 producing 38,044 pounds (4,424 gallons) of milk last year. They also won most of the awards for milk production by cows in different age categories.

The majority of the 800 cows at the Andrews University Dairy are black and white Holsteins but there are a number of red and white Holsteins and a few other breeds—Jerseys, Jersey-crosses and Brown Swiss. The calves born at the dairy stay here until they go to the farm at Indiana Academy when they are about 4–5 months old. They return to the dairy shortly before they have their first calf at two-years-old. Altogether there are about 1,500 cattle owned by Andrews University.

The dairy employs eight full-time staff (several of whom also teach agriculture classes) and 45–50 students on a part-time basis each year. The students were able to earn a total of more than $168,000 toward their tuition and school expenses last year.

Alayne Thorpe has been appointed as dean of Distance Education for Andrews University. Concurrently, she is also serving as the interim president of Griggs University, whose ownership was transferred to Andrews University in November 2010. Upon the physical move of Griggs University to the Andrews campus, Thorpe’s role will become solely focused on being the dean of Distance Education at Andrews.

For the past 30 years, Thorpe has served in a variety of capacities for Griggs University, beginning as a course developer/editor, soon taking on a director-level role and spending much of her career with Griggs as senior vice president for education. Owned and operated by the Seventh-day Adventist Church and headquartered in Silver Spring, Md. since 1909, Griggs University has provided values-based distance education to students around the world from preschool through college and graduate levels.

Thorpe is a triple alum of the University of Maryland. She holds bachelor (1977) and master (1980) degrees in English and a PhD in Modern British Literature (1987).

Following completion of her undergraduate studies, Thorpe began teaching high school English at Montgomery Blair High School. During this time, she worked with the University of Maryland and the Maryland State Writing Commission to design new models for teaching writing in the state.

Thorpe began her 30-plus year career in 1980 at what was then known as Home Study International and today is known as Griggs University. As a course developer/editor, she evaluated completed courses; changed existing content to improve courses; and worked with teachers to design new courses to employ best practices.

In 1985, she became director of High School and College Programs for Griggs. All college and high school programs were under her supervision, in addition to having oversight on curriculum development and instructional design plans.

In 1989, Thorpe was appointed senior vice president for education at Griggs University. In that role, she had supervision over all educational programs including management of curriculum development. Thorpe was integral in establishing and updating academic standards, policies and procedures, as well as maintaining state, regional and national accreditations at all levels. Since 1988, she has also served as a part-time adjunct professor in English and education for both undergraduate and graduate levels at Washington Adventist University, University of Maryland and University of Maryland University College.

Thorpe holds a number of professional memberships including the National Council of Teachers of English; Modern Language Association; International Society for Technology in Education; and Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development. She serves on the Education Standards Committee and the task force on International Affiliations for the Distance Education and Training Council; is a member for the State of Maryland’s task force on homeschooling; and on the North America Division Curriculum Committee, to name a few.

News and Announcements from the Seminary Dean’s Office

"Nature and revelation alike testify of God’s love. Our Father in heaven is the source of life, of wisdom, and of joy. Look at the wonderful and beautiful things of nature. Think of their marvelous adaptation to the needs and happiness, not only of man, but of all living creatures. The sunshine and the rain, that gladden and refresh the earth, the hills and seas and plains, all speak to us of the Creator’s love. It is God who supplies the daily needs of all His creatures.” (Ellen G. White, Steps to Christ, p. 9)

Students Serve with Sunday Projects

Date: February 14, 2011

Phone: 269-471-3211

The Andrews University Office of Campus Ministries has created a new outreach program for students this school year. Inspired by Jesus’ words, “The Son of Man did not come to be served, but to serve...” Sunday Projects provides both community service and evangelistic opportunities in the local community and neighboring towns. The ministry focuses on practical needs and participates in hands-on activities, ranging from children’s ministries to providing food baskets and even an occasional painting job, every other Sunday.

With the help of Debra Panozzo, Berrien County Michigan’s adult and family volunteer coordinator, Sunday Projects has assisted local thrift stores, churches and families in need since the beginning of the 2010–2011 school year. During one of the first projects, students organized the children’s program at the First Presbyterian Church in Benton Harbor, Mich.

“We finally have people that are willing to tell the stories of the Bible to our children!” exclaimed the church pastor, who was so impressed with the group she has invited them to lead the children’s program twice a month.

The experience was also touching for University students and has inspired several to lead out in the program ever since. “It is very obvious that these kids have never heard many well-known Bible stories such as Jonah and Noah’s Ark, so it is a cool feeling to walk away each Sunday knowing that something has been accomplished,” says University student Amanda Corea. Amanda, an international community development and modern languages major, looks forward to Sunday Projects week after week for the satisfaction of knowing that “what we do affects people.”

“We are all children of God and should work together more often as such,” she says. “We would get so much more accomplished as a Christian community!”

Another favorite project took place over the Thanksgiving holiday. With the help of the Berrien Springs Spanish Seventh-day Adventist Church outreach team and a Pathfinder group from the Benton Harbor Spanish Seventh-day Adventist Church, Sunday Projects organized and delivered food baskets to local families in need. They called the project “The Thanksgiving Bag Give Away” and handed out not only groceries and holiday treats, but also Bibles.
Sunday Projects is growing and continues to spread the gospel through acts of service in the community. Your prayers would be appreciated for this ministry. To get involved or learn more, visit the Sunday Projects Facebook page by typing “Sunday Projects” in the search box or by e-mailing sundayprojects@andrews.edu.
After a semester of writing, photographing, editing and designing, Envision magazine's winter/spring 2011 issue is finished and available. The magazine, created and designed exclusively by Andrews University students, features inspiring stories as well as various articles, poetry, photography and art work. This is the second issue of the magazine.

"This magazine is a showcase of Christian collegiate youth," says Debbie Michel, associate professor at the Department of Communication and Envision editor-in-chief. "There’s so much talent in the community that needs to be seen. But on a spiritual level, the talent that the stories are encased in serves as an attractive vessel for the testimonies and the gospel."

Sponsored by the Department of Communication, the Christian collegiate lifestyle magazine was officially released on Thursday, Feb. 3. The current issue includes topics like paying for graduate school, decorating dorm rooms, surviving the winter blues and even recipes for preparing vegan meals.

Ideas for this issue of Envision began to take shape at the beginning of the school year. Students from Michel's Beginning Media Writing class came up with story ideas and served as writers and section editors throughout the fall semester. The class collaborated with students from Advanced Studio Photography, Educational Psychology and InDesign courses as well as student volunteers who offered to be models and stylists.

What makes Envision so unique is its direct focus on the student. "The magazine is designed for students and made by people just like them," says Glenn Roper, Envision managing editor. "The advice is real and it has topics that go far beyond what you may typically find in any magazine." Roper, a senior communication major, also worked on the first Envision issue released during the 2009–2010 school year.

The magazine also gives practical experience to a host of communication, photography and journalism majors looking for real-life opportunities in the field. Christine Lairson, a journalism and English major, served as an Envision section editor/writer. She says, "It truly is an extraordinary opportunity for students at Andrews to get practical experience and add a little something to their resumes."

Lairson is currently interning at Glamour Magazine in New York City and claims her experience with Envision is helping her realize her dream of becoming a magazine editor someday.

Envision is available for sale at the Andrews Bookstore, Gazebo, Apple Valley, Harding's and the local Adventist Book Center. The third issue, which is already in the early stages of production, is scheduled for release in the fall. The Andrews University Department of Communication plans to publish a new issue each semester. They are looking for writers, photographers, graphic designers, stylists, models and anyone who "wants a fun magazine production experience."

To become involved and/or learn more about Envision, visit www.envisionmagazine.com or e-mail Debbie Michel at dmichel@andrews.edu.

Andrews University students to develop county campus plan

Berrien officials expect project to be completed in June.

By TOM MOOR Tribune Staff Writer

ST. JOSEPH -- It is a perfect match.

Berrien County needed a master plan for its proposed 48-acre county campus in Benton Township, and Andrews University architecture students needed the experience.

Those two factors blended together this week when County Administrator Bill Wolf announced The School of Architecture at Andrews University and Berrien County will enter into a memorandum of understanding, which will allow the students to begin developing a plan this month with a target completion date of June.

Wolf, who discussed the details Thursday at a Berrien County Board of Commissioners' administrative committee meeting, described the agreement as a win-win. The resolution will go before the whole board for vote next week.

"It seems like a cost-effective way to get this done," he said. "It's a nice collaboration with the local university." The county voted 9-2 in August to purchase the land for $759,000.

The property, on Napier and South Euclid avenues across from Lake Michigan College, could be home to the county's animal control facility, jail, health department and juvenile center. Some of the individual projects are still up to 20 years away and may include the future administrative building, court-house and Sheriff's Department.

Andrews will assist the county in the following areas:

Develop a written program identifying the facilities, approximate sizes and parking/site requirements.

Conduct a site analysis consisting of environmental, physical and cultural attributes. Identify the location of all the proposed facilities, external points of entry, internal vehicular and pedestrian circulation, parking and open/green space.

Conduct a preliminary description of infrastructure, drainage and a centralized power plant.

Create an illustration of architectural visual quality and patterns for the form and appearance of the facilities, and develop a plan for phased implementation.

The students will present sufficient detail to allow the county to solicit architectural proposal for a new animal shelter, which is being proposed as the first building at the site. It could break ground later.
This year.

"They need practical learning experience, and this will do it," District 7 Commissioner Debra Panozzo said. Berrien County, in turn, will organize meetings with department leaders to gather information about the facility and provide periodic reviews and feedback of the project's progress. The county would provide maps or site documents that could prove helpful.

The county will also pay Andrews $3,600 to offset the costs of the community service and student internship programs. Because the master plan is being conducted as part of an academic program, a professional fee is not being charged.

Wolf said Andrews is not out to compete with the private sector, and added the county will pass the project off to private engineers once the master plan is complete.

Also on Thursday, the board unanimously approved a 1 percent raise for Wolf, effective Jan. 1. The resolution states the raise is consistent with the increase the board of commissioners afforded the non-union employees and other appointed officials of the county in 2011. The board in December approved Wolf's contract one year, through 2013.

Wolf became administrator in January 2005.
No other Christian artist at work today is better suited to sing about life’s journey than Sandi Patty.

Regarded as “The Voice” of contemporary Christian music, Patty will be in concert at the Howard Performing Arts Center on the campus of Andrews University at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 19 as part of the “Howard Center Presents…” for the 2010-2011 season.

“I am grateful for the many opportunities God has given in my life and for how he has allowed me to spread my wings,” said Patty. “Singing is my way to tell my story of hope, life and love.”

Her dynamic soprano voice and soaring range is on display in her most recent album, “Songs for the Journey,” and her chart-topping hits, including “Morning Like This,” “I’ve Just Seen Jesus” and “More than Wonderful.”

Scrapbooking in Berrien Springs
Sunday, Feb. 27
1-5 p.m., PMC Commons

Scrapbooking is a hobby that has been growing in popularity. And it's no wonder! It's something that you can do without hard and fast rules, can be done relatively inexpensively, and makes a great gift or keepsake for your family and friends. Scrapbooking is especially fun when you do it with others, creating a social network, much like the quilting bees of old.

Pioneer Memorial church sponsors Scrapbooking Together throughout the year and invites ladies from the community to our next meeting on Sunday, February 27 in the Commons from 1 to 5 p.m. We'll be sharing techniques, special tools and ideas with each other. There is no charge and we provide child care, prizes and refreshments. Just bring your pictures, scrapbook and materials. Space is limited, so reservations must be made by calling Sue Rappette 471-6565 or Sherrie Davis 471-3134.
