Photo of the Week: At Andrews Family Game Night & Awards Presentation on Sunday, teams participated in Family Fusion, a Family Feud-like game hosted by undergraduate leadership director Dave Ferguson. Here, Team Big Cheese, representing Administration, faced off against Team Arch-Builders, representing the School of Architecture. Each year at this annual event, awards and recognition are given to faculty and staff members for Years-of-Service, Excellence in Service, Spiritual Life, and the Daniel Augsburger Awards for Excellence in Teaching. This was the inaugural year for the Siegfried H. Horn Excellence in Research and Creative Scholarship Award. (Sunday, Feb. 27. Photo by IMC photographer Darren Heslop)

Emmanuel Mission School Library Book Drive

The Andrews University Department of Agriculture is sponsoring a book drive to benefit Emmanuel Mission School in Lesotho, Africa. The school enrollment is approximately 700 students made up of both elementary and secondary students (grades 1 to 12). Any science oriented reference materials should not be more than 10 years old. Faculty and students from the Department of Agriculture will be visiting the school in March as part of the Agriculture Study Tour.

We also need metal book shelves that can be disassembled for shipping.

Books can be dropped off at the Department of Agriculture office, Smith Hall room 109 by March 1.

Please contact Katie at 269-471-6006 with questions.

Adventist Engaged Encounter
March 4-6, 2011

Adventist Engaged Encounter (AEE), an enrichment weekend for engaged and recently married couples, is being held at Andrews University the weekend of March 4-6, 2011. The event begins Friday evening and ends Sunday afternoon. For registration information, contact Undergraduate Leadership Development at aee@andrews.edu or 269-471-6681.

Registration Underway for Music & Worship Conference
March 24-26, 2011
Campus of Andrews University

The 8th annual Andrews University Music & Worship Conference is coming to campus March 24–26, 2011. Sponsored by the Center for Youth Evangelism and Departments of Music and Christian Ministry, and the NAD Church Resource Center, the event will provide training opportunities for pastors, worship leaders, church musicians and lay leaders from around the world.

Featured presenters will include Roberta King, associate professor of communication and ethnomusicology at Fuller Theological Seminary’s School of Intercultural Studies, and Pedrito Maynard-Reid, professor of Biblical studies and missiology and assistant to the president for diversity at Walla Walla University. Presenters will discuss issues relating to creativity, diversity and excellence as well as techniques and strategies for improving worship experiences.

Other training opportunities will also take place during the event. Workshop topics include young adult worship, planning and leading music, teamwork, hymn singing, use of scripture, guitar techniques and audio-visual enhancement, among others.

Programming and workshops will take place at the Andrews University Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary and Pioneer Memorial Church. Students can receive 1–3 class credits for attending. Event registration is required and can be completed online. For registration information, a schedule of events and more, visit www.auworshipconference.org or call 269-471-6380.

New Andrews Academy Principal
Robert L. Overstreet will be the new principal at Andrews Academy in Berrien Springs, Mich. With more than 15 years of teaching and administrative experience under his belt, Overstreet aspires to create a positive, Christ-centered experience for academy students when he begins his position for the 2011-12 school year. Read full story.

AMG Designs Indiana Church
The Architecture Missions Group in the Andrews University School of Architecture, together with the congregation of the Carmel Church in Carmel, Ind., recently celebrated the grand-opening of the first phase of the new addition to the church. The new addition, designed by architecture students from Andrews University, is a multipurpose room currently serving as a sanctuary and fellowship hall. It will eventually expand to include a formal sanctuary. Read full story.
First MSA Cohort in South Africa

In the fall of 2010, the Andrews University International Development Program (IDP) began a new cohort group of 38 graduate students in South Africa. Master of Science in Administration (MSA) students working in diverse non-governmental organizations such as ADRA, UNICEF and Save the Children are among those enrolled to study on the campus of Helderberg College. This is the first time the course has been offered in South Africa, allowing professionals from the African continent to study part-time without leaving their jobs. Read full story.
Robert Overstreet will be the new principal at Andrews Academy in Berrien Springs, Mich. With more than 15 years of teaching and administrative experience under his belt, Overstreet aspires to create a positive, Christ-centered experience for academy students when he begins his position for the 2011-12 school year.

“We are thrilled to attract an energetic, visionary leader like Mr. Overstreet to Andrews Academy,” said Brent Geraty, chair of the Andrews Academy Operating Board. “We believe he will be able to help the Academy fulfill its mission in new and exciting ways.”

The second-born child in a family of four boys, Overstreet grew up in Minnesota before moving to the south his 6th-grade year. He attended both public and private institutions throughout his elementary school life and considers his public school experience “truly an eye opener of what the world was like.”

When it was time for him to enter high school, Overstreet enrolled at Georgia Cumberland Academy (GCA) and began “probably the best of all my growing up years,” he says. “I grew so much as a person and as a Christian. I give so much credit to the teachers who showed so much love and patience to such an obstinate young man.”

Following four years at GCA, Overstreet felt God was calling him to teach. He attended Southern College (now Southern Adventist University) and graduated with a Bachelor of Science in health and physical education. More importantly, it was at Southern where he met his wife-to-be, Tammy. Tammy is now an award-winning elementary teacher. The Overstreets have two daughters: Laura and Rebecca. Laura is a high school sophomore and will be attending Andrews Academy. Rebecca is in the sixth grade. Overstreet’s favorite hobbies are golf, woodworking projects and spending time with his family.

Overstreet also holds a Master of Arts in education from the University of Tennessee in Chattanooga. For the past 15 years, he has worked as a teacher and principal at both the elementary and high school levels in the Seventh-day Adventist system. He also holds three years of training in co-active coaching and Christian leadership and was the vice-principal at Forest Lake Education Center, Longwood, Fla., before accepting the principal position at Andrews Academy.

“My passion in life is to grow leaders for Christ,” he says. “I feel that as educators, we must model Jesus’ leadership style while He was here on earth. I love to work with young people and be the example that Christ calls each of us to be. I feel so humbled by the opportunity to do His work and am thankful to do so.”

Andrews Academy is a college-preparatory secondary school owned and operated by Andrews University for more than 100 years. It has been recognized by the United States Department of Education as a recipient of the School of Excellence Award for secondary schools.
The Architecture Missions Group in the Andrews University School of Architecture, together with the congregation of the Carmel Church in Carmel, Ind., recently celebrated the grand-opening of the first phase of the new addition to the church. The new addition, designed by architecture students from Andrews University, is a multipurpose room currently serving as a sanctuary and fellowship hall. It will eventually expand to include a formal sanctuary.

The Architecture Missions Group (AMG) aims to serve churches, often in remote areas, by providing architectural design services that the churches normally would not have access to. Kevin Rosado, who was a student when the Carmel Church project got underway, says it was the mission opportunities that drew him to Andrews University in the first place. He first heard about the Carmel project through Martin Smith, professor of architecture and decided to join the team.

The AMG began working with the Carmel Church in 2008. They approached the project in the form of a design charrette, an intense two-day design period.

The first day, "We brainstormed different ideas for each of the needs for the building and the budget," says Rosado. At the end of the day, the group presented two of the best ideas to the church committee to discuss the designs. Day Two involved creating the final presentation and finalizing the design for construction documents. "The church members were very pleased with our work, and they felt that we had listened to their needs as a church. But it was the church members' help and input that made it easy for us to have the right design solutions," says Rosado.

The Carmel Church was the first AMG North American church project that advanced through construction, which began in spring 2010. AMG has done drawings and prospective sketches for projects in Bolivia, Peru, Mexico, and the Congo, to name a few. In most cases, a lack of funding prevents the start of construction, but the Carmel Church raised all the funds necessary to begin Phase One. Construction was done by a local firm and completed in time for a celebration during the Christmas season in 2010. Phase Two of the project, still in the planning stage, will add a sanctuary and several classrooms to the multipurpose room.

"At first I thought that it would be fairly easy to come up with a design solution for a church," says Rosado, "but now I think it is one of the most complicated building types to work with. Designs are often driven by the budget and churches are typically working on a very tight budget. At the same time, a church is one of the most interesting buildings to work with, in the sense that you are designing not only to accommodate a diverse group of people, but that your design can inspire people to worship."
Pastor Alex Rodriguez of the Carmel Seventh-day Adventist Church says the faculty and students in the School of Architecture were a pleasure to work with. "Your faithfulness along with many others who sacrificially took part has made God's house in Carmel, Ind., a reality."

It is not unusual for undergraduate architecture students to participate in real-world design experience before graduation, but the service aspect is less common. To be associated with the church is even less common. The Architecture Missions Group combines this experience with the only accredited architecture program among Adventist colleges in North America to provide a unique service to churches worldwide.

Smith, who supervised the project, said, "The biggest joy for me was seeing the creativity of the congregation, and how God has led it each step of the way."

In the fall of 2010, the Andrews University International Development Program (IDP) began a new cohort group of 38 graduate students in South Africa. Master of Science in Administration (MSA) students working in diverse non-governmental organizations such as ADRA, UNICEF and Save the Children are among those enrolled to study on the campus of Helderberg College. This is the first time the course has been offered in South Africa, allowing professionals from the African continent to study part-time without leaving their jobs.

"The program has a balance of theory and practice with each course having a focus to strengthen project cycle management skills in planning, assessment, implementation and evaluation," explains Dawn Dulhunty, director of the IDP. More importantly, students know that this master's gives them a competitive advantage in the humanitarian assistance job marketplace due to the unique teaching model of evidence-based practice, she says.

The MSA program encourages global humanitarian leadership development through intensive sessions, work-related learning, networking skill development and field-based location. As development practitioners in training, it asks students to address extremely complex societal issues. For example, topics from the 38 different research projects being planned by new students include: "What are the factors impacting premature marriage among Sudanese girls?"; "Exploring cultural and community integration of Congolese refugees around Johannesburg"; "Improved access to HIV/AIDS Antiretroviral treatment in Zambia"; and "What church leadership dynamics influence the dedication of SDA members in the Pacific Islands?"

The program is doing more than meeting students where they are; it's also filling a need in South Africa. Clifford Nhlapo, an IDP student and one of the organizers behind the South Africa cohort, says, "Following the demise of Apartheid and the birth of a new socio-political dispensation in South Africa, it has become urgent that the country adopt a development paradigm which is designed to enable especially the previously disadvantaged communities to develop themselves. The International Development Program is a unique platform which government and civil society can and should utilize in order to make the Reconstruction and Development Program (RDP) a reality."

Students may join the program in any given year and are required to attend four three-week intensives over a three-year period. The MSA is the second largest graduate program at Andrews (the Master of Divinity program has a few more students) and is also offered in Chile, Japan, Italy, Ghana, Kenya and Canada (pending approval).

The International Development Program began in 1996 and offers full-time professionals the opportunity to earn their MSA by taking coursework. on a part-time basis. The program is open to all non-governmental organizations, pastors, educators and health professionals. It aims to build staff capacity in humanitarian leadership through field-based graduate education.

South Bend Tribune: Andrews students address Haiti need

They may be thousands of miles from home, but their hearts are still in Haiti.

Haitian students at Andrews University took time to pause on Wednesday — exactly a year after an earthquake ravaged their homeland — to remember the thousands of lives that were lost on Jan. 12, 2010, when a 7.0 magnitude quake ravaged their country. Read full story.

Lamson Hall Presents Good Neighbor Awards

On Tuesday, Feb. 22, during Lamson Hall worship, Dean Jennifer Burrill announced the recipients of the Good Neighbor Award. Freshmen students, and coincidentally roommates, Christa Deana Mitchell and Leila Celestin received the awards. Christa and Leila were nominated for the award by some of their Lamson Hall "neighbors" for their good citizenship, campus and service involvement, and positive Christian attitudes. Congratulations Christa and Leila!

Poetry Reading with Ren (Katherine) Powell

Wednesday, March 9, 7 p.m., Lincoln Township Library, Stevensville, Michigan

Powell is the author of, Mercy Island, a collection of poems. Mercy Island depicts a coming of age that begins in a claustrophobic American trailer park and expands into the kind of borderless existence shared by all emigrants and homesick travelers. Many of these poems read like fable: a woman with a gown of eggshells, a stone turtle that captures the essence of a childhood. Other poems testify to the resilience of the human spirit even after the unspeakable happens.

Journey to Wholeness Meetings

Every Friday beginning March 11

10 a.m., Seminary room S-340

The Journey to Wholeness – a Life Travel Guide, following the Christ-centered principles of 12 step recovery, will meet every Friday, 10 a.m., starting March 11, 2011 at Andrews University, Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary, Room S-340.

All sessions will be held for one hour with a "business session" to follow. At these meetings you will learn about a recovery ministry which benefits churches, schools, health care facilities, etc. The best way to discover the potential of this ministry to lead to spiritual growth is to personally share in these meetings. Harmful habits and practices which negatively affect Christian character development will be considered in a "safe environment" where "confidentiality" and "anonymity" are "highly and respectfully regarded." All are invited to come and participate. Study materials will be provided. For more information, call: 240-346-5204
