What do card games, the first-ever Siegfried H. Horn Excellence in Research and Creative Scholarship Awards, the tubing hill and Dave Ferguson playing a game show host have in common? Survey says...All were a very memorable part of the 2011 Andrews Family Game Night & Awards Presentation, held on Sunday, Feb. 27, in the Howard Performing Arts Center. Each year at this annual event, awards and recognition are given to faculty and staff members for Years-of-Service, Excellence in Service, Spiritual Life and Daniel Augsburger Awards for Excellence in Teaching. This was the inaugural year for the Siegfried H. Horn Excellence in Research and Creative Scholarship Award.

The evening began at 4:30 p.m. with table and card games, such as Rook and Scrabble, in the lobby of Chan Shun Hall. At 6 p.m., game night-themed snacks, including PBJ sandwiches, mac-and-cheese and corn dogs, were served in the Howard lobby. Then, at 7 p.m., the program began.

The entertaining highlight of the evening was Family Fusion, an Andrews-spin on the popular game show, Family Feud. Dave Ferguson, director of the Undergraduate Leadership Program, served as the host. There were four rounds of Family Fusion, with teams representing the Seminary, College of Technology, Administration, School of Architecture, College of Arts & Sciences, School of Education, School of Business Administration and staff. Each team of three players had a team name, for example, the Administration team was called "Big Cheese" and the School of Business Administration team was called the "Balancers." Ferguson read fictitious survey questions, such as, "Name a frequent Saturday night destination" and "Name a part of campus that's most difficult to keep clean." A popular answer throughout the night was "the tubing hill."

Dave Faehner, vice-president for University Advancement and a member of the "Big Cheese" team, held the distinction of being the only Family Fusion participant to have actually appeared on the real Family Feud. Much to the amusement of the audience, a clip of Faehner's 1979 appearance on Family Feud was shown.

Throughout the program, rounds of Family Fusion were interspersed with the presentations of the awards.

Siegfried H. Horn Excellence in Research and Creative Scholarship Award

This award was established to recognize lifetime scholarship achievement of Andrews University faculty members. The chair of the Scholarly Research Council accepted nominations in four separate categories: Arts, Humanities and Education; Pure and Applied Sciences; Professional Programs; and Religion and Theology. Award recipients, who must be associate or full professors and full-time employees for a minimum of five years, were selected by the membership of the Scholarly Research Council.

The recipients for this inaugural award were Karen Allen, professor of nursing, for the area of Professional Programs; Larry Burton, professor of teacher education, for the area of Arts, Humanities and Education; Richard Davidson, J.N. Andrews Professor of Old Testament Interpretation, for the area of Religion and Theology; and Shandelle Henson, professor of mathematics, for the area of Pure and Applied Science.
Excellence in Service Award Recipients

Three staff members were honored with Excellence in Service Awards: Sharon Dudgeon, manager of WAUS; Steve Nash, assistant to the Seminary deans for financial and strategic planning; and Michelle Wallis, benefits specialist, Office of Human Resources. The award is given in recognition of outstanding service to the University, the Church, and the community, and for demonstrating, by precept and example, a Christ-centered life.

Daniel A. Augsburger Excellence in Teaching Award

Nine faculty members received the Daniel A. Augsburger Excellence in Teaching Award. This award recognizes faculty whose teaching reflects the high standards of excellence modeled by Dr. Augsburger in his 60 years of teaching at Andrews University. Augsburger's leadership, academic rigor, breadth of knowledge, teacher-scholar role, along with care and concern for students, exemplify the best of faculty endeavors. Faculty from each school nominate and choose their individual candidates. This year's recipients were: Kim (Sam) Chuah, professor of economics, School of Business Administration; James Doran, assistant professor of aeronautical technology, College of Technology; Ann-Marie Jones, assistant professor of social work, College of Arts & Sciences; Mark Moreno, associate professor of architecture, School of Architecture; Darah Regal, assistant professor of audiology, College of Arts & Sciences; Barbara Reid, associate professor of teacher education, School of Education; Dianne Staples, associate professor of English, College of Arts & Sciences; Peter Swanson, assistant professor of pastoral care, Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary; and Robert Zdor, professor of biology, College of Arts & Sciences.
Spiritual Life Award

Lael Caesar, professor of religion, has been a member of the Andrews University faculty since 1996. His spiritual influence on campus earned him the honor of the Spiritual Life Award. Said one student, "Dr. Caesar’s sense of humor is unparalleled among college professors. The most amazing thing is that Dr. Caesar’s humor is always a compliment to—rather than a distraction from—his rigorous academic and spiritual goals for his classes." The Spiritual Life Award is awarded to any employee, faculty or staff who has made a significant contribution to the spiritual life of campus. Names are considered and voted by the Spiritual Life Committee.

40 Years of Service Award

Alan Anderson has taught physical education, technology and drivers’ education at Andrews Academy since 1970. He graduated from Andrews University with a Bachelor of Arts in industrial education, and received a Master of Arts in industrial education from Western Michigan University in 1974. He is a member of the Industrial Technology Education Association.
35 Years of Service Awards

Dean Snow has served as manager of Custodial Services since 2007, and has dedicated all of his service at Andrews entirely to that area. He earned a certificate in auto mechanics from Andrews University in 1974. Dean has always been industrious in his work responsibilities, and is always willing to go the extra mile. Always willing to respond to a need or request with helpful suggestions and work force, he continues to elicit responses like: "Wow! Dean Snow has been so helpful and expedient in meeting our request. He is such a pleasure to work with. His whole team is so friendly and helpful. They work so hard and Dean Snow is there leading the way."

Jeannie Wolfer is certification registrar for the Department of Teaching, Learning & Curriculum. Her colleagues remark that she is pleasant to all whom she meets, cares for the students, and helps them plan just the right schedules. One colleague says, "I suspect she knows more about certification than anyone else, and probably does more comprehensive advising than anyone on campus." She also goes the extra mile for her colleagues, and many cite her incredible support, both as a colleague and as a friend.

30 Years of Service Awards

Douglas Jones is professor of English, and chair of the Department of English. He received a Bachelor of Arts in English in 1972 from Walla Walla College and a Master of Arts in English from Andrews University in 1980. AUSA Election Results

The votes were counted and recounted at the end of the third week of February for the annual Andrews University Student Association (AUSA) elections. On Friday, Feb. 18, the candidates’ hard work and prayer came to fruition. Serving the student body of Andrews University next year as elected AUSA officers will be: Andrew Moll, president; Sandra Owusu-Antwi, vice-president; Nathaniel Gibbs, religious vice-president; Kristina Penny, editor-in-chief of the Student Movement; and José Rivera, social recreation director.

"My campaign, I would say, was 98% prayer," says AUSA vice-president elect Owusu-Antwi.

Almost all of the candidates—those elected and those who were not—agree prayer was the central and most crucial component of their campaigns. Communication with fellow students was a close second. The candidates also agreed, as AUSA President-elect Moll put it, "AUSA isn't completely about politics but about service."

Near the end of the campaign, Etser Edouard dropped out of the race for religious vice-president. "Is it possible to 'lol' in an article?" she said. "I hate politics. I always have and always will. Several months before I was offered another position for next year and since then, I had been praying about it. I am the type of person that only lets God make big decisions for me."

Nathaniel Gibbs agrees with Etser's stance on politics. "It is hard to attempt to be like Christ and to promote self," says the newly elected religious vice-president. He adds he's "excited to see what God has planned for next year."

AUSA vice-president elect Owusu-Antwi says, "I want the student body to know and always remember that they are the school. Just as a shepherd cannot go to work without any sheep, AUSA cannot function without its student body."

Moll says networking is among his first goals as AUSA president. "[It] will be to build connections with many different people. I will begin to form my cabinet with help from Sandra Owusu-Antwi, your vice-president, and Paul Buckley, our AUSA sponsor." He continues, "I also will be meeting with many of the people who hold influence and respect on our campus. I hope to build strong connections with them so we can be on the same page and begin working together to improve Andrews. I would love to hear [students'] ideas and suggestions." Moll encourages students to contact him directly at admoll25@gmail.com or 989-430-3413.

President Niels-Erik Andreasen received the Charles Elliot Weniger Award for Excellence on January 29, 2011, in recognition of his long career in theology and leadership for the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The award was presented during the annual meeting of the Charles E. Weniger Society held at the Loma Linda University Church in Loma Linda, Calif.

This year’s meeting featured keynote speaker Joan Coggin, a past honoree, and award presentations by Lawrence Geraty, chair of the Weniger Executive Committee. Geraty said of Andreasen, “Niels-Erik Andreasen has distinguished himself as an innovative leader in Adventist higher education, as a trusted theologian in circles where the Bible is respected, and as a sought-after diplomat in a worldwide denomination often beset by challenges.”

Andreasen was one of four award recipients at the meeting alongside a U.S. Army General/psychiatrist, a Biblical languages scholar and a psychiatrist/educator.

"Effective leadership, in order to be persuasive, must come from within. It must be consistent and coherent and characterized by integrity. It must be genuine all the way through," said Andreasen in his acceptance speech. "Leadership in a Christian organization and institution, especially, must seek to implement such a concept of leadership that comes from within, that does not blush when the camera is on, that does not need to turn off the microphone before speaking. The Adventist church would do well to develop and exhibit that kind of leadership style and offer it as a model to the general public."

Andreasen concluded his speech by sharing his leadership prayer; one he says each morning before his first appointment.

The Weniger Society was established to preserve and protect the qualities, inspiration, motivation and excellence that were paramount in the life and service of Charles Elliott Weniger, a noted scholar, public speaker and professor. Weniger's memory has been kept alive by a committee of former students, colleagues and admirers of his excellence who seek to identify and recognize significant persons who demonstrate servant hood and Weniger's compassionate demeanor. Nominees are recognized as individuals having made significant contributions to their communities, the Seventh-day Adventist Church and the world. Since the society was founded in 1974, 150 Weniger Awards have been given.
Robert L. Overstreet will be the new principal at Andrews Academy in Berrien Springs, Mich. With more than 15 years of teaching and administrative experience under his belt, Overstreet aspires to create a positive, Christ-centered experience for academy students when he begins his position for the 2011-12 school year.

“We are thrilled to attract an energetic, visionary leader like Mr. Overstreet to Andrews Academy,” said Brent Geraty, chair of the Andrews Academy Operating Board. “We believe he will be able to help the Academy fulfill its mission in new and exciting ways.”

The second-born child in a family of four boys, Overstreet grew up in Minnesota before moving to the south his 6th-grade year. He attended both public and private institutions throughout his elementary school life and considers his public school experience “truly an eye opener of what the world was like.”

When it was time for him to enter high school, Overstreet enrolled at Georgia Cumberland Academy (GCA) and began “probably the best of all my growing up years,” he says. “I grew so much as a person and as a Christian. I give so much credit to the teachers who showed so much love and patience to such an obstinate young man.”

Following four years at GCA, Overstreet felt God was calling him to teach. He attended Southern College (now Southern Adventist University) and graduated with a Bachelor of Science in health and physical education. More importantly, it was at Southern where he met his wife-to-be, Tammy. Tammy is now an award-winning elementary teacher. The Overstreets have two daughters: Laura and Rebecca. Laura is a high school sophomore and will be attending Andrews Academy. Rebecca is in the sixth grade. Overstreet’s favorite hobbies are golf, woodworking projects and spending time with his family.

Overstreet also holds a Master of Arts in education from the University of Tennessee in Chattanooga. For the past 15 years, he has worked as a teacher and principal at both the elementary and high school levels in the Seventh-day Adventist system. He also holds three years of training in co-active coaching and Christian leadership and was the vice-principal at Forest Lake Education Center, Longwood, Fla., before accepting the principal position at Andrews Academy.

“My passion in life is to grow leaders for Christ,” he says. “I feel that as educators, we must model Jesus’ leadership style while He was here on earth. I love to work with young people and be the example that Christ calls each of us to be. I feel so humbled by the opportunity to do His work and am thankful to do so.”

Andrews Academy is a college-preparatory secondary school owned and operated by Andrews University for more than 100 years. It has been recognized by the United States Department of Education as a recipient of the School of Excellence Award for secondary schools.
AMG Designs Indiana Church

The Architecture Missions Group in the Andrews University School of Architecture, together with the congregation of the Carmel Church in Carmel, Ind., recently celebrated the grand-opening of the first phase of the new addition to the church. The new addition, designed by architecture students from Andrews University, is a multipurpose room currently serving as a sanctuary and fellowship hall. It will eventually expand to include a formal sanctuary.

The Architecture Missions Group (AMG) aims to serve churches, often in remote areas, by providing architectural design services that the churches normally would not have access to. Kevin Rosado, who was a student when the Carmel Church project got underway, says it was the mission opportunities that drew him to Andrews University in the first place. He first heard about the Carmel project through Martin Smith, professor of architecture and decided to join the team.

The AMG began working with the Carmel Church in 2008. They approached the project in the form of a design charrette, an intense two-day design period.

The first day, "We brainstormed different ideas for each of the needs for the building and the budget," says Rosado. At the end of the day, the group presented two of the best ideas to the church committee to discuss the designs. Day Two involved creating the final presentation and finalizing the design for construction documents. "The church members were very pleased with our work, and they felt that we had listened to their needs as a church. But it was the church members’ help and input that made it easy for us to have the right design solutions," says Rosado.

The Carmel Church was the first AMG North American church project that advanced through construction, which began in spring 2010. AMG has done drawings and prospective sketches for projects in Bolivia, Peru, Mexico, and the Congo, to name a few. In most cases, a lack of funding prevents the start of construction, but the Carmel Church raised all the funds necessary to begin Phase One. Construction was done by a local firm and completed in time for a celebration during the Christmas season in 2010. Phase Two of the project, still in the planning stage, will add a sanctuary and several classrooms to the multipurpose room.

"At first I thought that it would be fairly easy to come up with a design solution for a church," says Rosado, "but now I think it is one of the most complicated building types to work with. Designs are often driven by the budget and churches are typically working on a very tight budget. At the same time, a church is one of the most interesting buildings to work with, in the sense that you are designing not only to accommodate a diverse group of people, but that your design can inspire people to worship.”
Pastor Alex Rodriguez of the Carmel Seventh-day Adventist Church says the faculty and students in the School of Architecture were a pleasure to work with. “Your faithfulness along with many others who sacrificially took part has made God’s house in Carmel, Ind., a reality.”

It is not unusual for undergraduate architecture students to participate in real-world design experience before graduation, but the service aspect is less common. To be associated with the church is even less common. The Architecture Missions Group combines this experience with the only accredited architecture program among Adventist colleges in North America to provide a unique service to churches worldwide.

Smith, who supervised the project, said, "The biggest joy for me was seeing the creativity of the congregation, and how God has led it each step of the way.”
First MSA Cohort in South Africa

Date: February 18, 2011

Phone:

In the fall of 2010, the Andrews University International Development Program (IDP) began a new cohort group of 38 graduate students in South Africa. Master of Science in Administration (MSA) students working in diverse non-governmental organizations such as ADRA, UNICEF and Save the Children are among those enrolled to study on the campus of Helderberg College. This is the first time the course has been offered in South Africa, allowing professionals from the African continent to study part-time without leaving their jobs.

"The program has a balance of theory and practice with each course having a focus to strengthen project cycle management skills in planning, assessment, implementation and evaluation," explains Dawn Dulhunty, director of the IDP. More importantly, students know that this master’s gives them a competitive advantage in the humanitarian assistance job marketplace due to the unique teaching model of evidence-based practice, she says.

The MSA program encourages global humanitarian leadership development through intensive sessions, work-related learning, networking skill development and field-based location. As development practitioners in training, it asks students to address extremely complex societal issues. For example, topics from the 38 different research projects being planned by new students include: "What are the factors impacting premature marriage among Sudanese girls?"; "Exploring cultural and community integration of Congolese refugees around Johannesburg"; "Improved access to HIV/AIDS Antiretroviral treatment in Zambia"; and "What church leadership dynamics influence the dedication of SDA members in the Pacific Islands?"

There are 38 students studying in the South Africa cohort.

The program is doing more than meeting students where they are; it's also filling a need in South Africa. Clifford Nhlapo, an IDP student and one of the organizers behind the South Africa cohort, says, "Following the demise of Apartheid and the birth of a new socio-political dispensation in South Africa, it has become urgent that the country adopt a development paradigm which is designed to enable especially the previously disadvantaged communities to develop themselves. The International Development Program is a unique platform which government and civil society can and should utilize in order to make the Reconstruction and Development Program (RDP) a reality."

Students may join the program in any given year and are required to attend four three-week intensives over a three-year period. The MSA is the second largest graduate program at Andrews (the Master of Divinity program has a few more students) and is also offered in Chile, Japan, Italy, Ghana, Kenya and Canada (pending approval).

The International Development Program began in 1996 and offers full-time professionals the opportunity to earn their MSA by taking coursework... on a part-time basis. The program is open to all non-governmental organizations, pastors, educators and health professionals. It aims to build staff capacity in humanitarian leadership through field-based graduate education.

Andrews Student Falls Through Ice
A member of our University family is in the hospital after falling through ice Sabbath afternoon.

Seminary student Haengso Hong, who also goes by the name William, was at a retreat center in Buchanan when he fell through the ice of Still Lake Pond. Andrews employee Rob Fuste, who also works for the retreat center, heard Hong’s cries for help. Emergency crews were called and they were able to rescue Hong. According to an officer on the scene, Hong was in the water for about 25 minutes. Hong was taken to Memorial Hospital in South Bend where he is in ICU.

Steve Yeagley, associate dean for Student Life, says he was able to visit briefly with Hong, who was conscious and responsive. He is expected to be released tomorrow, (Sunday, March 6). Hong told Yeagley, "God answers prayer."

Poetry Reading with Ren (Katherine) Powell
Wednesday, March 9, 7 p.m., Lincoln Township Library Stevensville, Michigan

Powell is the author of, Mercy Island, a collection of poems. Mercy Island depicts a coming of age that begins in a claustrophobic American trailer park and expands into the kind of borderless existence shared by all emigrants and homesick travelers. Many of these poems read like fable: a woman with a gown of eggshells, a stone turtle that captures the essence of a childhood. Other poems testify to the resilience of the human spirit even after the unspeakable happens.
