Photo of the Week: Twenty-five young leaders from our local community visited Andrews University on their Blossomtime Goodwill Tour on Tuesday, May 3. The tour included stops at farms, schools and senior centers in Berrien County. David Faehner, vice president for Advancement, welcomed Mr. and Miss Blossomtime, along with their Court, to campus. During their visit, staff from Enrollment Management gave them a brief overview of educational opportunities at Andrews and they enjoyed a breakfast buffet in Andrews University Dining Services, compliments of University Advancement. Three of the queens have attended Andrews University through the RESA Math & Science Center. (Photo by Darren Heslop)

Grant Opportunity: Anti-Violence Programs for Youth

Anti-Violence Programs for Youth Funded
United Methodist Church: A Brighter Future for Children and Youth
A Brighter Future for Children and Youth, an initiative of the United Methodist Church, supports nonprofit organizations nationwide that address the needs of children and young people age 5 to 18 in the areas of violence prevention, anti-abuse, and relationship abuse. Grants of up to $4,000 are provided to small-scale, community, and church-based programs. Priority is given to programs that have significant involvement of women and youth at the grassroots level. Funded programs should demonstrate the ability to raise additional funds from other sources. Grant requests must be submitted by July 1, 2011. Application guidelines and forms may be downloaded from the United Methodist Church website.

Grant Opportunity: Kodak American Greenways

Seed Money for the Development of Greenways
Kodak American Greenways Awards Program
The Kodak American Greenways Awards Program, a collaboration of the Eastman Kodak Company, the National Geographic Society, and the Conservation Fund, provides seed grants to stimulate the planning and design of greenways, trails, and waterways in communities throughout America. The focus is on setting aside corridors of protected public and private land established along rivers, ridges, abandoned railroad corridors, utility right-of-ways, canals, scenic roads, or other linear features. For 2011, the program anticipates awarding up to fifty percent of the grants to those greenways projects that demonstrate the convergence of economic prosperity and the environment. Most grants range from $500 to $1,000; the maximum grant is $2,500. Online applications must be submitted by June 15, 2011. Visit the Conservation Fund’s website for application guidelines.

FLAG Camp 2011
The summer is fast approaching, which means FLAG Camp is right around the corner! Children between the ages of 5-14 can have Fun Learning About God (FLAG) starting Monday, June 6 through Friday, August 5. The camp is located at the Pathfinder Building on the campus of Andrews University and runs daily from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. with Pre-care starting at 7:30 a.m. and After-care going until 5:30 p.m. The cost to attend is $15 per day for the surrounding communities and $8 per day for those children living in Andrews University housing. The cost is $4 for each Pre-care or After-care. The children are grouped into units based on their grade level and participate in morning classes such as crafts, nature, games, music and Bible. Every afternoon the children can go swimming at the Andrews Pool and play around in the gymnasium. There will be different field trips planned throughout the summer for each unit - some examples include Wolf Prairie playground, Blossom Lanes bowling, Lakeshore Roller World skating and the Warren Dunes State Park beach. You can get applications at www.pmchurch.org or call Scott Schalk (269-208-1933) for more information.

Janine Lim is the new associate dean for higher education for Griggs University, headquartered on the campus of Andrews University. Her start date is July 1, 2011. Griggs University & International Academy is an accredited, values-based distance education and homeschool provider that offers individual courses and complete programs to students preschool through university. Ownership of Griggs University was transferred to Andrews University in November 2010.

"I am excited to join Griggs University & International Academy because I want to help create engaging interactive learning opportunities for Adventist students globally," says Lim. "I look forward to serving Adventist education worldwide through the use of a variety of innovative technologies. I hope to bring enthusiasm for Adventist education and a passion for using technology to bring learning opportunities to students wherever they may be."

Lim has served as the Instructional Technology Consultant for the Berrien Regional Education Service Agency (RESA) since 1998. As technology consultant, she coordinates distance learning for 20 school districts, teaches online graduate-level technology classes, and helps train teachers for technology integration. She began her career as a language arts and Bible teacher at Griswold Christian Academy in Ohio. After one year there, she was appointed in 1997 as an instructional technologist for the Berrien County Intermediate School District (now Berrien RESA). She has also served as adjunct faculty in distance education courses for the Berrien RESA; the Adventist Virtual Learning Network serving La Sierra University and Andrews University; and classes offered through Central Michigan University and Western Michigan University. She has taught classes on videoconferencing in the classroom, interactive curriculums, and integration of technology and the Internet into curricula.

"Janine Lim is a leader in distance education and innovation in education. She brings the kind of skills and experience we need to build distance education programs of excellence," says Alayne Thorpe, interim president of Griggs University. "Perhaps even more significantly, she is dedicated to using technology to take Adventist education wherever there is need."

Lim is a triple alumnus of Andrews University, holding a Bachelor of Arts in Communication (1995), a Master of Arts in Teaching (1996), and a PhD in Leadership (2010). She and her husband, James Lim, currently reside in Berrien Springs.

Lim has served as a member of several non-profit technology-education integration boards, including current president-elect of TWICE: Two Way Interactive Connections in Education; as an online course committee chair of the Adventist Virtual Learning Network since 2002; and featured speaker and online services chair for the Michigan Association of Computer Users in Learning from 2002–2003.

She has given numerous presentations, keynote speeches, and workshops at colleges, universities, professional and research conferences, schools, and conventions nationwide and in Mexico, Canada and the United Kingdom.

Lim is a member of a number of professional organizations including the American Educational Research Association, the Michigan Association of Computer Users in Learning, the International Society for Technology in Education, and the United States Distance Learning Association.

Lim received an Educator of the Year award in 2010 from the Michigan Association of Computer Users in Learning, an Outstanding Leadership Award in 2008 from the United States Distance Learning Association, and a number of other professional awards.

3:27 PM EDT, May 6, 2011

ST. JOSEPH — Berrien County may be asking its residents to dig a little deeper into their pockets next year.

Already facing the possibility of a road millage on the 2012 ballot, County Administrator Bill Wolf said this week projected budget shortfalls may force him to go to voters with some sort of "revenue enhancement."

Wolf did not get into specifics about what that could be, but said it won't be a millage. It may be some sort of surcharge or fee, Wolf said.

If approved, the measure would go in the August 2012 ballot.

Wolf said the county is receiving $1.25 million less in revenue sharing from the state, and there has been some talk of eliminating the personal property tax money that counties receive as well.

Wolf also announced he may ask the Berrien County Board of Commissioners to vote to move three county special millage renewals — which are for 911, public safety and senior citizen centers — from the 2012 ballot to this August. The millages would call for a four-year renewal.

"Three essential millages mixed in with a road millage and a revenue enhancement might confuse voters," Wolf said.

"Voters could get this out early because it’s strictly a renewal."

Wolf said it would cost $30,000 to have the election this August.

The board could vote on the measure at a May 19 meeting.
"Maybe I’m not political enough, but I think people understand what a renewal is," he said. "And it should be all on one."

The board of commissioners, meanwhile, could vote later this year whether to place a half-mill countywide road millage on the 2012 ballot. A half-mill would levy a $25 bill to the owner of a $100,000 homestead.

The millage would span a six-year period and garner $3.4 million per year. Of that, $613,000 would go toward the county’s eight cities, $196,000 to the nine villages and the remaining $2.6 million to the 22 townships.

The county could have saved about $60,000 a year over a 10-year period when the Berrien County Apportionment Committee voted last month to keep the current format of 13 commissioners instead of dropping to 11, which was one of the proposals. Berrien County lost about 5,000 people over the past decade when Census figures were released.

Several other counties have cut their number of commissioners to save money. The Cass County Apportionment Committee voted last month to change from 15 to seven commissioners.

The board of commissioners this week also voted on an option regarding how they would like to see the planned county campus on Napier Road executed.

The board, with a 9-4 vote, chose option 1, which is considered the "picturesque plan," over option 2, which is comprised of a more formal entrance and building layout.

The property, on Napier and South Euclid avenues across from Lake Michigan College, could be home to the county’s animal control facility, jail, health department and juvenile center. Some of the individual projects are still up to 20 years away and may include the future administrative building, court-house and Sheriff’s Department.

The School of Architecture at Andrews University and Berrien County entered into a memorandum of understanding, allowing the students to begin develop the plan.

Berrien Commissioners Talk New County Complex

As Berrien County has selected a site for a new future campus, there is already an early picture of what the site may become. The county hired Andrews University architecture department to do a study on the site off Napier Avenue west of Lake Michigan College. Graduate students worked out two possible ideas for the set up of the campus. Commissioners were shown the very preliminary study at Thursday's meeting. Professor Martin Smith:

Listen:

This is the option that most board members liked. The project would be split into four phases over the next 30 to 60 years. Animal control comes first, followed by the health department. The third phase is the jail and juvenile center. The final portion would be the court house and administration center. The county paid a small fee for the study.
Students present county campus plans to board

ST. JOSEPH — A full Berrien County Campus could be more than 50 years out, but preliminary plans were presented to county commissioners Thursday.

Martin Smith, professor of architecture at Andrews University, presented two preliminary layouts of the site at the county board meeting.

Smith and architecture students at Andrews University are putting together a master plan for the proposed 48-acre county campus in Benton Township pro bono. The county will pay the university $3,600 to offset costs of the internship program but will not pay a professional fee to the students or the university.

Smith said county complexes are a “relatively new idea in American county tradition.”

“So there’s not a lot of history to draw on,” he said.

The first plan Smith presented featured adding a street that would divide the site into a front section for public function buildings and a back section for in-house private function buildings. In the middle would be a civil square with the administration building and courthouse.

The second plan features a more “formal” arrangement of buildings with an entrance at the front of the site. The concept of keeping public function buildings at the front of the site and in-house buildings toward the back remains the same.

Smith envisions the campus being built in four phases. The first phase is to construct the animal control facility, which would be in the back end of the site adjacent to Euclid Avenue. That phase could take place within the next few years.

Phase two, which Smith said could take place over the next five years, would include constructing the health department and physical power plant facilities. Phase three, potentially 15 years down the road, would see the addition of the jail and juvenile center.

The final phase could be 30 to 50 years down the line and might see the construction of the civic square, administration building and courthouse.

Smith added that with both the plans there is room for growth and an open area for a potential nature preserve. The Andrews University Architecture Department would also like to see buildings that are both permanent and energy-efficient, Smith said.

The county board approved the purchase of the property for $759,000 last August by a 9-2 vote — a decision that was heavily opposed by some south county residents and leaders.
