Register for Renaissance Kids: An Architecture Day Camp
Registration is underway for Renaissance Kids, an architecture day camp for kids ages 4–16, held at the Andrews University School of Architecture. There are six week-long sessions offered during the months of June and July.

Kids get to experience hands-on fun with design, drafting, building, sketching, watercolors and more. While exploring the discipline and lessons of architecture, Renaissance Kids provides a fun array of hands-on projects through which children learn about history and culture, design concepts, the architect’s tools, construction and materials, community and citizenship.

Each year, students attending the final session (Session 6) have an opportunity to participate in a real-world building project. This year’s project is designing and building a paved sitting area in front of the Curious Kids Museum in St. Joseph, Mich. In 2009, students worked on an arbor outside of the Andrews University School of Architecture; in 2010, they created decorative pieces for and installed a Whisper Dish at the Curious Kids Discovery Zone in St. Joseph, Mich.

A great teacher can introduce students to a life-long love of learning.

We know there are a lot of great teachers in Michiana because WNDU viewers wrote to us and nominated them for a 16 Excellence in Education award.

Our second winner for 2011 was nominated by students from the past and present. He's an educator from Andrews Academy, a private school in Berrien Springs, Michigan.

Principal Cleon White was handing out awards to students when NewsCenter 16's Tricia Sloma showed up with the surprise award for him. He got a standing ovation.

While White is a principal now, he says he could never stop being a teacher.

"That's my love," White said. "That's what I love to do is teach."

That's why his students love him. He's a legend.

"He helped my dad when he was in high school, so my grandparents spoke highly of him," said freshman Jonathan Constantine.

Erica Bradfield graduated a few years ago and she wrote in about Mr. White as well.

"In the classroom, he teaches with an attitude of love, of acceptance, and as the school principal, he has lead our school with quiet dedication and a humble attitude," Bradfield said.

Current student Chelsey Cameron had nice things to say about Mr. White as well.
“No one really knows how much he has done for our school. He’s been there for so long and his heart and soul will forever stay at Andrews Academy.”

“He has a great sense of humor and a unique connection with the students,” said freshman Will Tee. “He is always in a great mood.”

Senior Alex Gaytan said he’s always been there to help students.

“From teaching kids Algebra at his home to those who need help, to acting as a second school counselor, always having his door open for anyone who needs to express something,” Gaytan said. “What I have learned from Mr. White and his gentle manner is that there’s never a time where you need to lose your composure. He never loses his composure and yet he gets his point across.”

He’s a trend setter too. Bradfield says when you think of Mr. White, you think of his white tennis shoes.

“We notice when he gets a new pair because they’re really extra white,” said Cameron.

“I don’t know how it happened. I just decided one day I was going to wear them,” White said.

It’s hard to keep up with Mr. White as he continues to serve God and motivate others.

“He’s a living example of how to live your life according to what God wants you to do,” Cameron said. "He’s a great example of a kind hearted man and that’s how we should all be.”

“For me, personally, and for my colleagues, we don’t want to disappoint him,” said English and German teacher Tom Baker.

“It’s really nothing that I do. I don’t do anything. If there’s anything good that comes, it’s from [God]. I’m just here,” White said.

White and the school received cash prizes from our sponsor, Notre Dame Federal Credit Union. CEO Tom Gryp presented the checks.

Be sure to catch 16 Morning News on Thursday to meet our third winner!

From the Office of the President: Naming of New Campus Buildings

Dear Colleagues:

New buildings on campus are often named after the donor(s) who made them possible, e.g., Chan Shun Hall, Tan Hall, the Howard Performing Arts Center and Buller Hall. In addition to these we will now have another name, also in recognition of a major donor, and that is for the new residence hall. It will be named Frank and Anna Damazo Hall, which along with Burman Hall will make up University Towers.

Additionally, you are aware that the University is buying the Lake Union Conference building to house Griggs University and other Andrews University functions dealing with our off campus activities once Griggs University comes to Andrews and the LUC has moved to new quarters in town.

I have received the recommendation that this facility be renamed Griggs Hall, after Frederick Griggs, a leading Adventist educator in the past here at Andrews and elsewhere. I am considering that recommendation for two reasons: It preserves the name of our own former Griggs Hall and it maintains the identity of Griggs University once it becomes fully a part of Andrews. Both were named after the same Professor Griggs.

This is an invitation for you to comment on that recommendation for the new Andrews facility. If you wish to do so, please send your comments or observations to me this week at neaa@andrews.edu.

Sincerely,

Niels-Erik Andreasen

President

La Ronda Curtis Forsey has been appointed associate dean for Griggs University and principal of Griggs International Academy. Griggs is an accredited, values-based distance education and homeschool provider that offers individual courses and complete programs to students preschool through university. Ownership of Griggs University was transferred to Andrews University in November 2010. Forsey’s start date is July 1, 2011.

Forsey brings 26 years of teaching and educational administration to her role at Griggs. She currently serves as the principal at Atlanta Adventist Academy (AAA) in Atlanta, Ga.

"The thing that intrigues me about joining Andrews University is the opportunity to be innovative in a global setting—using my background experiences to reach out to a wide range of students," says Forsey. "I look forward to building new programs with a team of people who are dedicated to Adventist education and God’s service."

Forsey has worked as an English and social studies teacher at the alternative Horizon Preparatory School in Chattanooga, Tenn.; a composition teacher at Southern Adventist University; and an English and as a Second Language teacher at Forest Lake Academy in Apopka, Fla. Her years of experience in administration began in 1996 when she began a six-year stint as vice principal, as well as English and ESL teacher, at Maxwell Adventist Academy in Nairobi, Kenya. In 2002, she moved back to the United States where she served for three years as vice-principal of marketing and recruiting for Campion Academy in Loveland, Colo. Of her six years at AAA, two were spent as principal, and four as the vice principal for marketing and development. During her tenure, enrollment doubled and AAA became an innovative multi-campus school. Three metro Atlanta sites and five partner schools now use interactive simultaneous videoconferencing technology.

"As we build Griggs University on the campus of Andrews University, we have looked for three characteristics in all candidates—first, a dedication to God and a commitment to Adventist education; second, the skills and experience necessary to build excellent distance education programs on a number of platforms; and third, the vision to see how distance education can serve the world Church by using technology to promote collaboration," says Alayne Thorpe, interim president of Griggs. "La Ronda brings together faith and commitment, skills and experience, and vision. She’s a tremendous resource for our Church."

Forsey holds a Bachelor of Arts in English from Southern Adventist University and a Master of Science in Educational Administration from Scranton University. In addition, she holds a number of certifications from the University of Central Florida, Rollins College and Southern Adventist University.

Forsey and her husband David have two sons. Drew is a sophomore studying chemistry at Southern Adventist University. Dillan is a senior at Atlanta Adventist Academy.

Janine Lim is the new associate dean for higher education for Griggs University, headquartered on the campus of Andrews University. Her start date is July 1, 2011. Griggs University & International Academy is an accredited, values-based distance education and homeschool provider that offers individual courses and complete programs to students preschool through university. Ownership of Griggs University was transferred to Andrews University in November 2010.

"I am excited to join Griggs University & International Academy because I want to help create engaging interactive learning opportunities for Adventist students globally," says Lim. "I look forward to serving Adventist education worldwide through the use of a variety of innovative technologies. I hope to bring enthusiasm for Adventist education and a passion for using technology to bring learning opportunities to students wherever they may be."

Lim has served as the Instructional Technology Consultant for the Berrien Regional Education Service Agency (RESA) since 1998. As technology consultant, she coordinates distance learning for 20 school districts, teaches online graduate-level technology classes, and helps train teachers for technology integration. She began her career as a language arts and Bible teacher at Griswold Christian Academy in Ohio. After one year there, she was appointed in 1997 as an instructional technologist for the Berrien County Intermediate School District (now Berrien RESA). She has also served as adjunct faculty in distance education courses for the Berrien RESA; the Adventist Virtual Learning Network serving La Sierra University and Andrews University; and classes offered through Central Michigan University and Western Michigan University. She has taught classes on videoconferencing in the classroom, interactive curriculums, and integration of technology and the Internet into curricula.

"Janine Lim is a leader in distance education and innovation in education. She brings the kind of skills and experience we need to build distance education programs of excellence," says Alayne Thorpe, interim president of Griggs University. "Perhaps even more significantly, she is dedicated to using technology to take Adventist education wherever there is need."

Lim is a triple alumnus of Andrews University, holding a Bachelor of Arts in Communication (1995), a Master of Arts in Teaching (1996), and a PhD in Leadership (2010). She and her husband, James Lim, currently reside in Berrien Springs.

Lim has served as a member of several non-profit technology-education integration boards, including current president-elect of TWICE: Two Way Interactive Connections in Education; as an online course committee chair of the Adventist Virtual Learning Network since 2002; and featured speaker and online services chair for the Michigan Association of Computer Users in Learning from 2002–2003.

She has given numerous presentations, keynote speeches, and workshops at colleges, universities, professional and research conferences, schools, and conventions nationwide and in Mexico, Canada and the United Kingdom.

Lim is a member of a number of professional organizations including the American Educational Research Association, the Michigan Association of Computer Users in Learning, the International Society for Technology in Education, and the United States Distance Learning Association.

Lim received an Educator of the Year award in 2010 from the Michigan Association of Computer Users in Learning, an Outstanding Leadership Award in 2008 from the United States Distance Learning Association, and a number of other professional awards.

Our second winner for 2011 was nominated by students from the past and present. He's an educator from Andrews Academy, a private school in Berrien Springs, Michigan. Principal Cleon White was handing out awards to students when NewsCenter 16's Tricia Sloma showed up with the surprise award for him. He got a standing ovation.

While White is a principal now, he says he could never stop being a teacher.

"That's my love," White said. "That's what I love to do is teach."

That's why his students love him. He's a legend.

"He helped my dad when he was in high school, so my grandparents spoke highly of him," said freshman Jonathan Constantine.

Erica Bradfield graduated a few years ago and she wrote in about Mr. White as well.

"In the classroom, he teaches with an attitude of love, of acceptance, and as the school principal, he has lead our school with quiet dedication and a humble attitude," Bradfield said.

Current student Chelsey Cameron had nice things to say about Mr. White as well.
"No one really knows how much he has done for our school. He's been there for so long and his heart and soul will forever stay at Andrews Academy."

"He has a great sense of humor and a unique connection with the students," said freshman Will Tee. "He is always in a great mood."

Senior Alex Gaytan said he's always been there to help students.

"From teaching kids Algebra at his home to those who need help, to acting as a second school counselor, always having his door open for anyone who needs to express something," Gaytan said. "What I have learned from Mr. White and his gentle manner is that there's never a time where you need to lose your composure. He never loses his composure and yet he gets his point across."

He's a trend setter too. Bradfield says when you think of Mr. White, you think of his white tennis shoes.

"We notice when he gets a new pair because they're really extra white," said Cameron.

"I don't know how it happened. I just decided one day I was going to wear them," White said.

It's hard to keep up with Mr. White as he continues to serve God and motivate others.

"He's a living example of how to live your life according to what God wants you to do," Cameron said. "He's a great example of a kind hearted man and that's how we should all be."

"For me, personally, and for my colleagues, we don't want to disappoint him," said English and German teacher Tom Baker.

"It's really nothing that I do. I don't do anything. If there's anything good that comes, it's from [God]. I'm just here," White said.

White and the school received cash prizes from our sponsor, Notre Dame Federal Credit Union. CEO Tom Gryp presented the checks.

Be sure to catch 16 Morning News on Thursday to meet our third winner!

Students present county campus plans to board

By Aaron Mueller

Published 6:44pm Friday, May 6, 2011

ST. JOSEPH — A full Berrien County Campus could be more than 50 years out, but preliminary plans were presented to county commissioners Thursday.

Martin Smith, professor of architecture at Andrews University, presented two preliminary layouts of the site at the county board meeting.

Smith and architecture students at Andrews University are putting together a master plan for the proposed 48-acre county campus in Benton Township pro bono. The county will pay the university $3,600 to offset costs of the internship program but will not pay a professional fee to the students or the university.

Smith said county complexes are a “relatively new idea in American county tradition.” “So there’s not a lot of history to draw on,” he said.

The first plan Smith presented featured adding a street that would divide the site into a front section for public function buildings and a back section for in-house private function buildings. In the middle would be a civil square with the administration building and courthouse.

The second plan features a more “formal” arrangement of buildings with an entrance at the front of the site. The concept of keeping public function buildings at the front of the site and in-house buildings toward the back remains the same.

Smith envisions the campus being built in four phases. The first phase is to construct the animal control facility, which would be in the back end of the site adjacent to Euclid Avenue. That phase could take place within the next few years.

Phase two, which Smith said could take place over the next five years, would include constructing the health department and physical power plant facilities. Phase three, potentially 15 years down the road, would see the addition of the jail and juvenile center.

The final phase could be 30 to 50 years down the line and might see the construction of the civic square, administration building and courthouse.

Smith added that with both the plans there is room for growth and an open area for a potential nature preserve. The Andrews University Architecture Department would also like to see buildings that are both permanent and energy-efficient, Smith said.

The county board approved the purchase of the property for $759,000 last August by a 9-2 vote — a decision that was heavily opposed by some south county residents and leaders.
