Photo of the Week: A crowd gathers around the flagpole on the morning of September 11, 2011 to join the nation in prayer and a moment of silence at 8:46 a.m., the moment the first plane hit the north tower of the World Trade Center. Milt Agay (in white), chief of the Berrien Springs Oronoko Township Police Department, led the group in the Pledge of Allegiance. To his right is Rebecca May, chair of the Remember 9/11 Planning Committee. Agay was one of thousands of post-9/11 emergency responders who traveled to New York City to aid in recovery and cleanup in the weeks and months following the terrorist attacks. From the Office of the President: The Employee United Way Campaign

Dear Colleagues:

Each year at this time we participate in the local United Way fundraising campaign. It is an employee campaign; Andrews does not provide any corporate support. And of course participation is completely voluntary. United Way supports many local agencies and services that assist needy families and children in our neighborhood. I believe it is a worthy cause. In past years our Andrews family has contributed in excess of $10,000 and I hope we can do so again. During the week of September 12 you should receive by campus mail a United Way pledge form. It is self-explanatory but if you have a question, feel free to contact Dalry in my office. She has volunteered again this year to be the campus representative.

On behalf of United Way I thank you for your generous support of our local community.

Niels-Erik Andreasen
President

First Griggs Grads at Andrews

On Sunday, July 31, 42 MBA students from Vietnam marched into history at Andrews University, becoming the first graduating class of Griggs University to participate in Andrews University commencement exercises since ownership of Griggs was transferred to Andrews in November of 2010. The students had traveled to Berrien Springs, Mich. from Vietnam, where each one is a working professional, to graduate at their American university. Read full story.

AMG Project Aids Berrien County

Berrien County is full of hidden treasures—fruit stands, mom-and-pop cafés, wineries, little museums, and the ubiquitous beaches. Area residents can enjoy sun-warmed peaches or find antiques in the villages, but how to draw people off the highway to your u-pick farm or ice cream shop? Together with the Bridgman/Lake Township Economic Growth Alliance, Martin Smith, assistant professor of architecture, and the Architecture Missions Group, both of the Andrews University School of Architecture, are conducting a Wayfinding Study along a 6-by-16 square mile area known as the Shawnee Road Corridor. The Fund for Andrews Phonathon 2011 is almost here!

The Office of Development is preparing to host the 2011 Phonathon during the fall semester. "We're excited about the changes that are in store," says Jackie Spencer, annual giving coordinator and manager of the Fund for Andrews Phonathon. "The team at AIM and IT/Banner support have put in a lot of work into a new dialing program that will be implemented this year. We are anticipating a very good response from our alumni and friends this year."

The Fund for Andrews Phonathon is a calling campaign comprised of current students calling former students and friends. First Griggs Grads at Andrews

On Sunday, July 31, 42 MBA students from Vietnam marched into history at Andrews University, becoming the first graduating class of Griggs University to participate in Andrews University commencement exercises since ownership of Griggs was transferred to Andrews in November of 2010. The students had traveled to Berrien Springs, Mich. from Vietnam, where each one is a working professional, to graduate at their American university.

Griggs University dates back to 1909 when Frederick Griggs, an Adventist educator, convinced the Seventh-day Adventist Church’s leadership that the church needed a correspondence school “to fill in the gaps that the resident schools could not fill.” His vision was to make Adventist education available around the world while still bringing the same quality education to those unable to attend traditional schools.

Over the next 100+ years, 380,000 individuals have obtained a faith-based education through Griggs University. For this most recent graduating class, their story first begins with the fall of 2007 decision by Griggs University to enter into a partnership with the Center for Educational Technology & Career Development (ETC), an associate organization of the National University of Vietnam in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City. They began offering both BBAs and MBAs, and classes formally launched in March 2008 making Griggs the only fully licensed American university to offer an MBA in Vietnam. The very first graduating class from this partnership participated in Commencement exercises at Griggs’ previous location, the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventist headquarters in Silver Spring, Maryland.

"With Griggs in Maryland, it was definitely a distance education program housed within an office building," says Trinh Phuong Nhi, program coordinator for ETC. "Here, at Andrews, there are students, a library and a busy campus. It makes a big difference in the eyes of our students. We were very excited to hear the good news that Griggs merged with Andrews because not only is Andrews the flagship Seventh-day Adventist university, but it also has a good reputation outside of the Seventh-day Adventist system."

The graduating students represent a wide spectrum of working professionals, from business owners and customs border officers, to sales and marketing executives and educators, even medical doctors and securities stock market traders. All are living and working in Vietnam, a nation that has been making headlines as having one of the top 10 fastest growing economies in the world.
Hoang Ha, senior sales and marketing director for Yamaha Motor Vietnam, is one of the Griggs University graduates. Ha and his fellow classmates spent two years, meeting for class two days out of the week, working toward their MBA. “It was a great program and was very flexible, which is a great benefit for a working professional.” Ha says of his graduation experience, “Andrews was amazing. I didn’t expect it to be so big. Graduation was very emotional for me and unlike anything I’ve experienced before.”

The Griggs/ETC program started with 33 students. In just four years, it has grown to over 3,000, adding about 100 new students every month. “It’s grown so fast!” said Alayne Thorpe, president of Griggs University and dean of the School of Distance Education at Andrews University. “Vietnam is growing at such a rate that they need business leaders to help steer the economy in the right direction. It’s a wonderful thing to feel that we’ve actually made an impact on a country.”

With enrollment numbers skyrocketing, some may wonder why the Griggs program in Vietnam is so successful. Thorpe says, “We have a very good partner in ETC and are affiliated with the National University of Vietnam. They are positioned in the country in a way that they are able to find the very best teachers in the country, and many of them are international business people hailing from places such as the United States, Australia, South African and many from Europe, all of whom are in Vietnam due to the rapid growth of the Vietnamese economy.”

The students gather two days a week, studying together in a classroom with live professors. They also benefit from this web-enhanced program, meaning some course content is delivered online.

It’s also a very practical program, with appeal to working professionals. “It doesn’t teach just theory. It’s so much more than that,” says Thorpe. “On both sides, we have both said this program is stronger because of the other partner. The more we learn from each other, the more we grow together and the stronger we are.”

AMG Project Aids Berrien County

Berrien County is full of hidden treasures—fruit stands, mom-and-pop cafés, wineries, little museums, and the ubiquitous beaches. Area residents can enjoy sun-warmed peaches or find antiques in the villages, but how to draw people off the highway to your u-pick farm or ice cream shop?

Together with the Bridgman/Lake Township Economic Growth Alliance, Martin Smith, assistant professor of architecture, and the Architecture Missions Group, both of the Andrews University School of Architecture, are conducting a Wayfinding Study along a 6-by-16 square mile area known as the Shawnee Road Corridor. The Shawnee Road Corridor extends from Berrien Springs to Bridgman, and includes Baroda.

The study is intended to attract visitors to the area and develop growth along the road through improved and descriptive signage. "The immediate need is for signage, but we are also working with the villages and communities to protect the rural character of the area," says Smith. "We want to get visitors from Chicago, Indianapolis and Grand Rapids into the areas and discover all the little jewels that are here." And the Economic Growth Alliance wants to maintain the rural setting that adds even more charm.

Preliminary plans designate Berrien Springs as a center for culture and recreation; Baroda as farm and wine country; and Bridgman as a beach town. Three types of signs have been proposed: a regional sign welcoming visitors to the overall region; district signs showing each village’s specialty; and “trailblazer” signs to point out individual attractions.

The AMG and the School of Architecture have been involved in local community development projects for the last decade. They proposed an urban design for downtown Berrien Springs about ten years ago, assisted with the Oronoko Township Hall, and have contributed to a number of individual local projects. This spring, they worked with their first civic client.

This past May, Martin Smith and a team of four student interns began developing two options for a 50-year master plans for the proposed Berrien County Complex in Benton Harbor, Mich. The plans include an animal control building, the first stage of the project and slated to begin construction in the near future; a power plant and health department, incarceration complexes, and in the next 15 to 50 years, a courthouse, administrative offices and other public buildings. The county will hire local contractors to construct the buildings as funded, but chose Andrews University’s Architecture Missions Group to design the master plan in part because of their civic-minded design philosophy.

"Institutions of the community such as government, education, and others ought to be integrated for the benefit of the community,” says Smith. "Projects like the Wayfinding Study and the County Complex get Andrews University more involved in the community,” which is one of AMG’s missions.

The AMG has also been participating in preliminary talks with the town of Berrien Springs to determine the safest routes to school, to promote walking and biking.

Three men share memories, hopes and fears after 9/11

How did the events of Sept. 11, 2001, change individual lives and the life of the nation? How are we still changing, and what can we gain from those terrible events?

Three men, two of whom were in the South Tower of the World Trade Center when it was hit, share their experiences and hope for a stronger America.

Blood brothers

On Sept. 11, 2001, Stan Praimnath said his usual daily prayer, put on his lucky shoes and went to the building where he had worked for 13 years.

By the end of the day he would find a strengthened faith and a new brother.
Praimnath spoke at Andrews University last week as part of its weeklong "Memories of Sacrifice, Reasons for Hope" commemoration of the 9/11 attacks.

He was on the 81st floor of the South Tower when the plane hit and was one of only 18 at or above the point of impact who survived.

Because the walls around him were soundproof, he didn't know at first that the North Tower next door had been attacked. He received calls from family members worried about his safety, not realizing the source of their concern until he saw chunks of burning debris falling from the neighboring tower.

He took an elevator down to the 78th floor of his building, but returned to his office with other executives of Fuji Bank after a security guard assured everyone that they were not in danger.

While looking out of his window at the Statue of Liberty, Praimnath saw the second airliner bearing down on the South Tower, coming right at him at eye level.

He dropped his phone and dived under his desk as the plane hit. A piece of the wing lodged 20 feet from his desk.

Part of the floor had collapsed, and "everything looked like matchsticks. The air was so thick you couldn't breathe," he told the audience. Air pressure was sucking everything out of the shattered windows.

That's when Praimnath made a deal with God, saying, "Anything you want me to do I'll do if I live."

He began to call for help, and at that instant a flashlight beamed through a hole in the wall.

"Talk about a powerful God," Praimnath said.

The flashlight was held by Brian Clark, an employee of another banking firm who worked a few floors above Praimnath. He had been arguing with other survivors about whether to continue down the stairs or try to reach the roof when he heard Praimnath's cries.

In later interviews Clark said that responding to Praimnath's call for help saved his life. The people who tried to get to the roof were never seen again.

To escape, Praimnath had to get over a 10-foot tall wall of sheetrock. He jumped and missed the top on his first attempts, puncturing his hand on a nail. He bolstered himself by saying, "I can do all this through Christ, who strengthens me," and made it over the wall with Clark's help.

On the other side they tumbled together. Clark then gently took Praimnath's injured hand in his own bleeding hand and said, "All my life I was an only child and I always wanted a brother. I have found that man. Today we are blood brothers. Let's go home."

They had 80 chaotic floors to descend first. Praimnath said his lucky shoes gave him added traction on the slippery stairs.

After all these years, Praimnath said there is one image that still haunts him. They came upon a man with massive head injuries and a broken back, being attended to by a security guard. The injured man cried out "Please tell my wife and baby I love them. We just got married."

The security guard chose to stay with the man, and they both died, Praimnath said.

Praimnath and Clark exited the South Tower minutes before its collapse, and were separated in the cloud of dust that enveloped them. But they have remained bonded ever since.

Praimnath has kept the promise he made on the 81st floor, speaking about his faith to schools, church groups and other organizations. He also has become an ordained minister.

Today he will be at his home church, Bethel Assembly of God in Ozone Park, Queens, New York, with his blood brother, Brian Clark.

Since 9/11, Praimnath thinks Americans have become "a little more resilient ... more vigilant, stronger."

In his travels Praimnath said people embrace him and welcome him to their homes. "Americans are warm, loving people. In adversity people come together."
Man's best friend
Roselle was afraid of thunder.

The guide dog awoke in the early morning hours of Sept. 11, 2001, as a storm approached. Her master, Michael Hingson, blind since birth, got out of bed to comfort her and then decided to get some work done before leaving for his sales job on the 78th floor of the World Trade Center's South Tower.

Hours later the two of them would be caught in the violent maelstrom of the terrorist attacks, saved by the unflappable calm of Hingson's canine companion.

Hingson, who with Susy Flory co-wrote the book, "Thunder Dog: the True Story of a Blind Man, His Guide Dog & The Triumph of Trust at Ground Zero," will talk about his amazing escape and his crusade to restore trust and teamwork to America at four events at Lake Michigan College's campuses Monday.

When Hingson was born blind, his parents were advised to place him in an institution, an option they adamantly refused. They treated him in the same way as his sighted brother, fostering a strong sense of independence. He learned to detect objects around him with his other senses and could often be seen riding his bicycle around his rural neighborhood in Palmdale, Calif.

"Eyesight isn't the only game in town," Hingson said during an interview from his California home. He refers to sighted people as "light-dependent."

His motto is "Don't let sight change your vision."

Over the years he learned to rely on a series of guide dogs, as well.

It was clear from the start that Roselle, a golden retriever, was special.

Being a guide dog can be stressful, Hingson knew. "I asked for a dog with an on-off switch who knew the difference between work and play."

Roselle was that dog. He describes her personality as "pixie-like," with a predilection for hiding his socks.

"She was serious when she had to be," Hingson said. "We worked well together. When the harness came off she was a very playful dog."

Her serious side would soon be put to the test.

The dog that trembled at the rumble of thunder remained calm during the chaos of 9/11.

After the South Tower had been hit, Hingson and office mate David Frank were the last ones off their floor, making sure everyone else had left.

Roselle led them down 1,463 stairs to safety, offering licks to the firefighters who made their way up the stairwell.

Hingson credits Roselle's training for getting them out of the building.

"It's not her job to know where I want to go," Hingson said. "It's her job to be sure the handler walks safely" and to avoid obstacles.

"I'm the navigator, she's the pilot," Hingson explained about the relationship.

They emerged onto the street minutes before the tower collapsed. Roselle went from gold to gray with dust.

Following their escape, Hingson and Roselle had hundreds of interviews. In 2002 Hingson joined Guide Dogs for the Blind as a public relations specialist, and in 2008 he formed the Michael Hingson Groups to talk about trust and teamwork.

"Thunder Dog" became a New York Times best-seller three weeks after its release this year.

Over the years, Roselle endured numerous illnesses that Hingson believes were related to ingesting dust on Sept. 11. She died June 26. It was later learned that she had been named a finalist for the 2011 American Humane Association's American Hero Dog Award.

In her memory Hingson is forming Roselle's Dream Foundation to educate people about blindness and to provide children and adults with helping technologies.

Hingson isn't happy with the direction the country has taken since 2001.

"I'm very saddened that we didn't learn the lessons from 9/11," he said.

After the attacks there was a lot of unity, "but then we took our eye off the ball" with the war in Iraq and running up huge deficits, Hingson said.

Politicians only say what will get them elected, he added. We don't trust Muslims, "who are as peace-loving as we are," and we don't even trust each other. "Trust is under attack."

We need teamwork, and that starts with trust, Hingson continued.

"I develop a team with every guide dog I get," he said. "Her job is to walk the way she is directed. My job is to direct her. If she is distracted by a duck, we have a discussion."

Hingson won't be at the dedication of the 9/11 memorial in New York City today. Survivors of the attacks weren't invited, he said.

Instead, he will be at a speaking engagement in Port Arthur, Texas, before flying to Southwest Michigan.

What would Roselle say to get our fractious society pulling together again?

"Learn to focus on your job. Learn to focus that you're part of a team," Hingson said.

"Keep your nose to the ground and stop being distracted by things you can't do anything about."

... and justice for all

Like millions of people in America, Imam Mustapha Elturk first heard about the attacks on the World Trade Center while on his way to work. In his case, he was heading for TRW in Troy, Mich.

The electronics engineer had immigrated from Lebanon amid its civil war in 1975, "so I know about hearing the roaring of guns and cannons, I know about hearing the roaring of airplanes and seeing people's lives shattered," he told an audience at Andrews University Thursday.

When Elturk reached his office he found people "glued to the tube" watching the unfolding news coverage.

"I thought, 'My God, this is real,'" said Elturk, emir of the Islamic Organization of North America.

The terrorists attacked people of all backgrounds, and Muslims were among those who perished on that day, Elturk said.

But he knew that he and others of his faith would be potential targets for retaliation in the days and weeks to come.

As an imam, or spiritual adviser, he had a responsibility to protect his community. Women in particular, conspicuous because of their dress, were advised to be careful and to only go out when necessary.

Hate is so indiscriminate that the first fatality from the backlash was not a Muslim but a Sikh, targeted because of his turban, Elturk said.

He recalled the pre-9/11 days when he and his family could move right through airports. Since Sept. 11, Elturk, an American citizen, has been detained by U.S. officials four times, twice at airports and twice at the Canadian border, according to an online article.

In 2004 he and others sought to build a mosque in Warren, Mich., but had their request rejected by city leaders based on what Elturk said was religious discrimination.

"I never had such a heartache," he said. "It was indescribable. I began to doubt my faith. I began to ask, 'Is my faith really that evil?"

Then he realized that his faith teaches him to fight evil with good.

Without even being asked, Christian leaders joined the Muslim community's effort to open their house of worship.

They banded together to present to Warren civic leaders a resolution promoting the values of "freedom, equality and justice," which was later adopted.

The former city council president, now the mayor, who had opposed the mosque, "turned 180 degrees around" and became very supportive, Elturk said.

Since that time three interfaith Thanksgiving celebrations have been held, and "Listen, Learn and Live" cultural exchange programs have been held.

A summer program to educate middle school students in the values of "freedom, equality and justice" also is offered.

Elturk expressed confidence that the nation could look forward in hope rather than backward in hate, so that "9/11 stands for hope and unity rather than death and violence."

Universities set to host events for 10th anniversary of September 11th

By Andrew Lambert, College Examiner

Many universities are preparing a number of lectures, public forums, and open discussions regarding the 10th anniversary of the September 11th attacks. Sunday will mark a decade since buildings and lives were destroyed when planes were flown into New York City, Washington DC, and Pennsylvania. Below is a small sampling of interesting events taking place across the United States.

On Thursday, Sept. 8, Camden County College will welcome award-winning journalist Murray Weiss, author of The Man Who Warned America, a profile on former FBI counter-terrorism expert and Atlantic City native John O’Neill.

O’Neill, who had spent nearly a decade investigating bombings by religious extremists for the FBI, was killed on 9/11 when terrorists crashed two planes into the World Trade Center towers, where he had just begun working as security director.

O’Neill recognized Osama bin Laden as a threat to the United States long before other federal authorities did.

The World Affairs Council of Harrisburg and Lebanon Valley College will co-sponsor a conference titled "Ten Years Later: The Aftermath of Sept. 11" on Saturday, Sept. 10, at the college’s Miller Chapel. A day later, the Lebanon Valley College Conservatives will host the 9/11 Never Forget Project, in which students will create a 2,977-flag memorial on the academic quad, one flag for every life lost on Sept. 11, 2001.

Andrews University in Berrien Springs is hosting a week long event, "Memories of Sacrifice, Reasons for Hope." On Sunday, an art exhibit opened called "Post 9/11 Reflections."

"Post 9/11 Reflections" art gallery:
Smith Hall Art Gallery
Monday: 12 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Tuesday-Friday: 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.
Sunday, September 11: 12 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Featuring artwork by Dave Sherwin, Greg Constantine, Brian Manley and Vicki VanAmeyden.

Shippensburg University Student Veterans of America (SVA) will be hosting its Second Annual 9/11 Memorial event on Sunday, September 11 at 2:00 p.m.

The event, which will be held on the Shippensburg University "quad," will feature keynote speaker and university president Dr. William Ruud. Dr. Denny Terrell, vice president for administration and finance and a retired Air Force general, will also be speaking. Dr. Ron Taylor, who is a retired Colonel and a professor at Shippensburg University, will also be speaking. And finally Josh Lang, the founder of the Shippensburg chapter of the Student Veterans of America and current Pennsylvania Outreach Coordinator, will also be taking part in the event.

Andrew Green Reporting

Andrews University has a full slate of events planned for next week to mark the tenth anniversary of the September Eleventh attacks. "Memories of Sacrifice, Reasons for Hope" runs from the fourth to the eleventh, and coordinator Rebecca May tells WSJM that the university is making an effort to reflect on Nine Eleven from several different perspectives. Being an international institution, Andrews is in a position to do just that:

Listen:

Nine-Eleven will be examined from several historical and religious perspectives, and they'll have guest speakers all week -- including one man who was actually in the World Trade Center when the first plane hit:

Listen:

May tells us that the culmination of "Memories of Sacrifice, Reasons for Hope" will be on September the eleventh itself, with a morning ceremony and moment of silence at the Andrews center of campus flagpole, and then a seven PM concert at the Howard Performing Arts Center:

Listen:

She says it's almost shocking to realize it's been ten years since Nine Eleven, and the week's planners felt it important to educate the younger students on what the day means to the rest of us:

Passing of Richard Orrison

Richard Orrison passed away on Wednesday, Sept. 7. He spent 37 years of his career with Andrews University, as principal of Andrews Academy and then a professor in the School of Education.

Comments

He leaves a track worthy to follow as a friend and mentor of young people. He always treated us with kindness and had a ready smile. I especially enjoyed taking his history tours in academy. My sympathies go to the family. May God sustain you during this time of great loss.

It is so sad to hear of Dr O's passing! He was such a great man with so much passion for his job & the people around him! I will never forget him as he always had me play piano @ the academy's functions, ESP last minute as he knew that I could never say NO to him! My last meeting with him was 5 yrs ago when he asked me to participate in the AA Alumni Weekend! I was hoping to see him again next month for the alumni homecoming! Rest in peace Dr O. You have done great work on this earth & you have touched many lives! We will miss you...
