Photo of the Week: Amy Hahn spoke for Tuesday's chapel during Student Week of Spiritual Emphasis. In a sermon titled, "The Way Back: Esther," Amy discussed how the story of Esther helped her learn how much God wants to be involved in our lives and see us reflect him. "I know that in writing the sermon and presenting it, it made an impact on me," Amy said. To people who told her that they knew her sermon was heartfelt, she responded, "I hope that means that it touched theirs." (Tuesday, Jan. 24. Photo by IMC photographer Esther Nooner)

You Can Help: J.N. Andrews Honors Program Starts Food Drive

January 29–February 10

This spring, the J. N. Andrews Honors Program giving opportunity focuses on God’s Abundant Pantry, a food bank established by our home church, Pioneer Memorial, for the pressing needs of many Andrews students and their families residing in the University apartments. As you know, many students barely find the finances to pay their Andrews school bills leaving little money for food to nourish themselves and their families. God’s Abundant Pantry opens twice weekly to dispense foodstuffs to those families in dire need. For the next two weeks, the J. N. Andrews Honors Program is collecting non-perishable food stuffs to donate to this important ministry on campus. Donations can be brought to the Honors Office during regular working hours. Together, we can make an amazing positive impact and claim this Bible promise: “And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noonday: And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not” (Isa. 58.10-11).

Sign up for the Waldensian Study Tour

Tour dates: Jun 10–20, 2012
Lecture dates: TBA Spring Semester
Deadline to sign-up: Feb. 1
Deadline for financial clearance: April 1

Travel to the ancient home of the Waldenses in the Piedmonts of Northern Italy June 10–20. Persons who wish to take this 3 credit class will need to contact Kathleen Demsky, director of the Architecture Resource Center (471-2418 or demskyk@andrews.edu). All costs for the trip are covered by registration for RELG 360-041 (the same cost as a 3 credit class on Andrews campus plus a $250 deposit).

The class is divided into two sessions.
Session One: Class Lectures
Class lectures, held in the School of Architecture, Art & Design, will meet 7 times during spring semester (Thursday evenings at 5:30 p.m., or other times by request), to study the background of these ancient people and gain an understanding of why their lives of faith and sacrifices are important to us today.

Session Two: Travel to Italy
Held on site in the Piedmonts of Italy. The purpose for the study of this topic is to bring to the student not only the historical and spiritual perspective, but also a personal experience of faith. Throughout this journey, the student is challenged to assess his or her own spiritual development and courage throughout life. In the Piedmonts we journey through time, walking the sacred sites, gaining deeper insights into the historical aspects and applying them to personal spiritual growth along with a love of Biblical truth, and an unflinching courage to stand—whatever the cost. There are a few places still open for this journey and they will be awarded on a first come basis.

Newly Renamed School of Architecture, Art & Design Offering 3 New Programs

Beginning in the 2012-13 academic year, the School of Architecture will become the School of Architecture, Art & Design. Three new degree programs, Interior Design, Construction Management and Documentary Film, will be added to the school's offerings.

According to Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design, no other Seventh-day Adventist educational institution offers a four-year degree in building construction management or any programs focused on interior design.

"The church needs workers who understand its beliefs of simplicity, creativity, building and designing for the glory of God. Like other secular universities with construction management and interior design programs, our students will gain understanding of everything related to the profession. However, unlike others, they will also have the opportunity to participate in community service, outreach, mission work and even the opportunity to study abroad," says Carscallen.

The construction management degree will prepare students to plan, direct and coordinate a variety of projects, from residential to commercial, and everything from roads and bridges to schools and hospitals. Students pursuing the construction management degree will be required to have a minor in business administration.

Interior design students will learn to apply creative and technical solutions within a structure to create functional and aesthetically pleasing interior spaces.

"We will endeavor to teach our students the value of simplicity and creativity in design; how to compliment the architecture of any given project; and to utilize good judgment and frugality in regard to appropriateness of material selection," says Paula Dronen, assistant dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design.

The new Department of Visual Art & Design in the School of Architecture, Art & Design is also introducing a... new degree in Documentary Film. This program will be ideally suited for those interested in storytelling. It will combine the foundation of documentary theory, film history, storyboarding, editing, composing and sound creation, all while providing the students with a conceptual framework to use their skills to serve others.

Rhonda Root, chair of the Department of Visual Art & Design, says, "Our department is always seeking to stay up-to-date with advancements in the fine arts. We want to provide our students with the highest quality fine art education and career preparation possible."

The Department of Visual Art & Design will continue to offer students a number of other degree options: a BA in Fine Art and Art History; a BFA in Fine Art, Illustration, Graphic Design, Pre-Art Therapy and Art Direction/Advertising; a BS in Visual Art Education; a BFA in Commercial Photography and Fine Art Photography.

The addition of these three new areas of study not only strengthen the academic offerings of the new School of Architecture, Art & Design, but also bring expanded opportunities for service to Andrews University students.

“These programs offer new opportunities to bring construction management, interior design and documentary film skills to our mission outreach,” says Carscallen.

Memo from President Niels-Erik Andreasen: Organizational Changes

After extensive discussion and planning within academic administration, the following organizational changes in the University’s academic programs have emerged. The Andrews University Board of Trustees has already approved most of these. Full implementation is anticipated during this year and the changes will be reflected in the 2012-2013 academic bulletin.

School of Health Professions in Progress

A new School of Health Professions will be established. The search for a dean of the School of Health Professions is underway. The following departments will transfer from the College of Arts & Sciences to this new school: Nursing, Physical Therapy, Clinical Laboratory Sciences, Speech-Language Pathology & Audiology, and Nutrition & Wellness. It is anticipated that for the time being the new dean’s office will be located near one of these departments. This is a longstanding initiative that is now being implemented with a view to strengthening the health professions departments.

New Name, New Degrees: School of Architecture, Art & Design

The School of Architecture has been authorized by the board to expand its educational services by adding programs in interior design and construction management. Additionally, it will be the new home for the consolidated programs of digital imaging, photography, art and design, including the newly approved program in documentary film. In recent years the chair, faculty and students of these programs have been dispersed between the College of Arts & Sciences, College of Technology and School of Architecture. They will now be consolidated in one school with the expectation that this will bring more unity to these programs. Accordingly, the name of the school will change to School of Architecture, Art & Design.

Closing of the College of Technology

The College of Technology has changed in a number of ways over the years. For example, technology courses in auto mechanics, construction, wood and metal have closed. Other programs have changed into entities of their own, i.e., engineering tech into engineering; computer studies into computer engineering, now a part of engineering; and architecture into a school of its own. Two other programs have developed significantly in terms of new facilities and services, namely agriculture and aeronautics. In light of this, the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Aeronautics will now relate directly to the Office of the Provost. The Office of the Provost will be supported in this regard by an Assistant to the Provost, held by the same individual. Such collaboration between educational institutions and their communities are common in our time and hold promise for the parties involved.

College of Arts & Sciences Becomes Smaller

Finally, the College of Arts & Sciences will become smaller. It will give up six departments: five to the School of Health Professions and one to the School of Architecture, Art & Design. However, it has added the Department of Engineering & Computer Science, which is closely aligned with the natural sciences and is expected to grow into a leading program. Moreover, the College of Arts & Sciences has become the new home for the master’s in international development with 300-400 students, mostly off-campus. The College of Arts & Sciences will also continue to provide most of the courses in general education and honors.

No organizational changes are proposed for the remaining schools of the University. However, their internal organization may well need some adjustment to prepare for the full impact of the Griggs University programs, many of which will likely become Andrews programs in the foreseeable future.
General Secretary of National Council of Churches to Speak at Seminary Symposium

The Andrews University Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary welcomes Michael Kinnamon, general secretary of the National Council of Churches, as the keynote speaker for the annual Seminary Scholarship Symposium. The symposium is held at the Seminary on the campus of Andrews University and runs from Jan. 31–Feb. 3, 2012. The symposium is free and open to the public.

Kinnamon is a prominent religious leader in the United States. He is a clergyman in the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) and a well-known ecumenical leader and educator, as well as the Allen and Dottie Miller Professor of Mission, Peace, and Ecumenical Studies at Eden Theological Seminary in Lexington, Ky. Previously, he served as the general secretary of the Consultation on Church Union and executive secretary of the World Council of Church’s Commission on Faith and Order. Kinnamon earned his PhD from the University of Chicago Divinity School.

A prominent member of the Ecumenical Movement, Kinnamon firmly believes in the need for unity in the church and works hard to build that unity. “The church is where the Spirit is,” he says. “Look for that when we sit around these tables. Trust that the Spirit has claimed these others. Getting to know one another builds that trust. This is how we deal with ongoing conflicts—not as a political caucus, but as sisters and brothers.”

Denis Fortin, dean of the Andrews University Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary, says, “Seventh-day Adventists have historically had some thoughtful and serious reservations about the apparent goals of the ecumenical movement. Kinnamon will speak about ecumenism in the United States and share his thoughts on how Adventists can be more involved among other Christian groups.”

Nicholas Miller, associate professor of church history and director of the Religious Liberty Institute, will give a response to Kinnamon’s address.

“As in other years, the Seminary Scholarship Symposium seeks to provide a good exercise for our professors and students in an appropriate academic setting and offers opportunity for dialogue about various points of view,” says Fortin.

The Seminary Scholarship Symposium begins Tuesday, Jan. 31, with a 10:30 a.m. Recognition Assembly in the Seminary Chapel. This assembly will celebrate selected publications of Seminary faculty in 2011, as well as present the names of those receiving the Augsburger Excellence in Teaching Award and the Horn Excellence in Research Award.

On Thursday, Feb. 2, Kinnamon will present at 10:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. Miller will give a response immediately following. Both events will take place in the Seminary Chapel. Prior to the 7 p.m. address on Thursday there will be a reception and poster session in the Seminary Commons from 6–7 p.m. The symposium will conclude on Friday, Feb. 3, with two scholarly paper presentations and another poster session. Friday’s presentations begin at 9 a.m. and continue until 1 p.m.

Briefing about Michael Kinnamon’s visit from Denis Fortin, dean of the Andrews University Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary

(Adapted from what was read at Seminary Assembly, Tuesday, Jan. 31, 2012)

For the last eight years, the Seminary has held a Scholarship Symposium during which professors and students present the results of their research on a broad range of topics. This Symposium also includes an invitation to a guest speaker who presents a topic of interest to the community. The plenary lecture is given by the guest speaker and a Seminary professor responds to it, followed by questions from the audience.

This year, after consultation with university administrators, the invitation was given to Michael Kinnamon, general secretary of the National Council of Churches. Interestingly, this speaking engagement is one of Kinnamon’s last in his current role as he is returning to teaching.

As a General Conference institution, Andrews University, and the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in particular, is well aware of the responsibility and influence we have with our students, and with the broader Adventist world. We are honored to serve our church as theological thought leaders, and guard carefully the hard-earned trust of our world church and its leadership.

The Seminary Scholarship Symposium is done within an academic context with academic value. Kinnamon will speak at the plenary session on Thursday evening, Feb. 2, about current trends in the ecumenical movement in America and the voice Adventism could have in the Christian world. Then Nicholas Miller, associate professor of church history and director of the International Religious Liberty Institute, will provide our students with a response on behalf of the Seminary.

Our invitation to Michael Kinnamon is also intended to reach out to the wider Michiana community in hopes of attracting local people to Andrews for this lecture and symposium. Kinnamon is very well known and respected in broad circles of Christianity. He is also very active and influential in American politics and religious life. He is known as a spokesperson on various social issues and is passionate about Christianity and religious freedom.

This invitation and lecture should not be perceived or crafted as an attempt at rewriting our historical Adventist faith. We believe in the Three Angels’ Messages and the other tenets of our faith. We continue to promote religious liberty and the freedom of conscience. This is not a first step to join the NCC or any other such organizations and we are not promoting ecumenism. People should not exploit this event to create fear in the hearts of other Adventists.
We are no longer a small, unknown denomination. Seventh-day Adventists have more influence than we think. In some parts of the world, Seventh-day Adventists have been appointed or elected to parliaments; some have been prime ministers. One of our former Seminary students is now Governor General of Jamaica. It’s vital for our students to learn how to dialog and relate to others despite having a differing theology. The ability to understand other viewpoints, including differing religious views, is an essential part of a good education. We hope this academic lecture will help our community get acquainted with a different understanding of Christianity, and help us be able to relate to others once our students are pastors, chaplains and teachers in their communities. We won’t agree with everything Kinnamon will say, but we will listen to him with a respectful yet critical mind.

The Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary is a safe place where various ideas can be discussed, examined and critiqued, and in the end, we learn something from it all that will affirm our faith and our walk with our heavenly Father. This is our vision of a great Seminary education.

Preventing Vehicle Theft

The intent of this article to focus on prevention and how we can minimize error. Forty to fifty percent of vehicle theft is due to driver error.

A recent news clip (NBC Nightly News) reported that cars are being driven an average of 10.8 years according to the automotive market research firm of R. L. Polk & Co. Therefore, it can be said the possession of a car is an important aspect of a daily life routine. It is ownership, collateral and a means of getting from point to point such as work, school, shopping needs, etc. (Learn more or check out the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration brochure).

The criminal mind seeks a target, possesses a desire (drive, intent and motivation), and then looks for an opportunity. Therefore, let’s reduce opportunity.

- Park your car in a visible area
- Your parked car should have the windows and sunroof closed and doors locked.
- Do not provide opportunities for these thieves by having valuables in plain sight such as purses, loose change, electronic equipment, etc.

Report suspicious behavior in parking lots either to our local police department (911 – emergency or non-emergency 269-471-2813) or the Office of Campus Safety (269-471-3321).

The safety and security of our campus depends on everyone’s participation.

David Mann became the youngest Niles City Council member ever when he was elected to represent the 3rd Ward in November.

He’s been on the job all of three months, and now is ready to run to become possibly the youngest state representative in Michigan history.

The 20-year-old Niles resident announced his candidacy for the Michigan 78th District House of Representative seat this week.

He will turn 21 in March, in time to make the age requirement to run for that office. If elected, it would also make him the youngest legislator in state history.

According to a spokesman for the House of Representatives clerk’s office, it is impossible to conclusively determine the youngest representative based on past record keeping. But the youngest House member is believed to have been George Cushingberry, who was 21 years old and 11 months when he assumed office in 1974.

Sharon Tyler, who currently holds the 78th District post, has announced she won’t seek a third term but will pursue the Berrien County Clerk’s post. Already filed for the Republican party is Berrien County Board chairman Dave Pagel, of Berrrien Springs. Jack Arbanas, a Buchanan resident and political newcomer, is running on the Democrat side.

Mann, who is running as a Republican, has always wanted to be involved in state government, he said in an interview Tuesday.

“I was expecting Sharon Tyler to run a third time,” he said. “But when she announced she wasn’t, I had to make a decision. It was best to do it now while the opportunity is here.”

During his short tenure on the city council, Mann has learned the importance of local government, he said.

“The biggest issue that needs to be addressed is making sure government is working effectively and supporting local units of government,” he said. “Being on the council, I understand that local government is what directly affects people’s lives the most.”

Mann said, if elected, he would work to extend increased revenue-sharing funding to municipalities.

“It’s better to look at how to trim at the state level and not the local level. There is really no area to cut more out at the city level,” he said.

Mann also said he would work to “slowly and responsibly” lessen property and income taxes, which he said “take a toll on the middle and poorer classes.”

Mann was born and raised in Niles and is a homeschool graduate studying theology at Andrews University. He said he will graduate in time to assume office if he is elected.

“I think I have new, fresh ideas,” he said. “And I’m willing and able to work with those who are older. I have a pretty high maturity level that will help me to make wise decisions for this area.”

Mann also pointed to Aaron Schock, who, at age 23, became Illinois’ youngest state representative in 2005, and has gone on to serve in the U.S. Congress.

“He’s been doing a good job,” Mann said. “It’s good to have a good mixture in the state Legislature of people from different walks of life.”

More information about Mann and his campaign platform can be found at www.silverbrookblog.com or by emailing him at mnn.david@gmail.com.

Secondly, the very best instructors the company has to offer will be in each test. This way, students will get the best possible experience. Also, since it is done online, students can do the tests from the
