Revive Vespers
Methods for Finishing the Work (part III)

- Medical Missionary Work

  SPEAKER: Dave Fiedler is an Author, Educator, and Founder of Adventist City Missions—a metropolitan evangelistic project that includes a vegan restaurant, a health food store, an outpost-based team of colporteurs and Bible workers, a rural wellness center, and an active inner-city medical missionary work.

  PRESENTATIONS:

  Kellogg vs. the Ministry– Friday 7:30 p.m. – Biology Amphitheater, Andrews University

  Unified Field of Atonement– Saturday 11:20 a.m. – Fil-Am SDA Church (8454 Kephart Lane)

  The Door Was Open, but we didn’t go through– Saturday 3:30 p.m. – Fil-Am SDA Church

  Picking up the Pieces– Saturday 4:45 p.m. – Fil-Am SDA Church

  What can we do now?– Saturday 6:00 p.m. (Erik Kelly) – Fil-Am Church.

  Ellen White said that medical missionary work is the “right arm of the gospel ministry” and the “the gospel illustrated,” or the gospel put into practice. This work is one of the most important for Seventh-day Adventists to do in order to truly carry the work of the gospel “to all nations, tongues and people.” Join us as we learn what Medical Evangelism and Medical Missionary Work are and how each of us can be involved in it today.

  Dave Fiedler, a teacher by trade, has developed a newfound passion and active interest in this area and has become personally involved in it through lectures and ministry. He will share four presentations and Erik Kelly, an MDiv graduate student, will give the final lecture: “What can we do now?”

You Can Help: J.N. Andrews Honors Program Starts Food Drive

January 29–February 10

This spring, the J. N. Andrews Honors Program giving opportunity focuses on God’s Abundant Pantry, a food bank established by our home church, Pioneer Memorial, for the pressing needs of many Andrews students and their families residing in the University apartments. As you know, many students barely find the finances to pay their Andrews school bills leaving little money for food to nourish themselves and their families. God’s Abundant Pantry opens twice weekly to dispense foodstuffs to those families in dire need. For the next two weeks, the J. N. Andrews Honors Program is collecting non-perishable food stuffs to donate to this important ministry on campus. Donations can be brought to the Honors Office during regular working hours. Together, we can make an amazing positive impact and claim this Bible promise: "And if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul; then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noonday: And the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not" (Isa. 58.10-11).

The third issue of Envision magazine will be officially launched on Feb. 16, 2012 from 12:30-3:30 p.m. in the Campus Center. Written and designed entirely by Andrews University students from a range of different departments, this collegiate lifestyle magazine includes a variety of articles, including testimonies from students Natasha Cruz, Vikram Panchal, and Tammi Lindsey.

"We also trace the hand of God as He brought Keren and Casey Graves together in holy matrimony," says Debbie Michel, editor-in-chief of Envision and associate professor of communication. "Plus we have money-saving tips such as how to plan a wedding on a tight budget, eat a healthy meal using ‘dollar-store’ ingredients, and on ways to cut your next textbook bill."

Envision magazine offers a unique opportunity for students from such a variety of classes as Advanced Studio Photography, Editorial Design, Digital Vector Graphics, and Marriage, Family and Interpersonal Relationship Skills to work together and create something for their community.

"It was very stimulating for us all," says David Sedlacek, professor of social work, whose Marriage, Family, and Interpersonal Relationship Skills class provided content for the magazine.

Working on the publication also gave students practical experience and opportunity to apply what they learn in the classroom. "The students had to deal with all of the joys and frustrations that come with putting together a magazine in a very limited time and on a very limited budget," says Diane Myers, assistant professor of graphic design, of her Editorial Design students’ experience working on the layout and design for Envision. "Taking this on as a project has helped them to understand not only how to organize, design, and layout an entire magazine from scratch, but gave them actual skills they will be able to apply in their future careers."

Students who worked on the magazine found it an equally enriching experience. Tiffany Evering, who served as a fashion stylist for many of the photo shoots, says, "Working on Envision was an answer to a prayer for me. I love fashion and design, so this was an opportunity I did not expect and dearly appreciated."

A prolific writer for Envision, Aivor Ramdatt also found the experience very rewarding. "The stages my stories went through were endless but rewarding to my professional development and I am very thankful for the opportunity to be a part of this grand endeavor," she says. "I believe that the articles will bring encouragement and hope to the students as to their God-given purpose and callings."
Envision will be available on campus at the Gazebo and the Andrews Bookstore. Off-campus you can pick up a copy at Apple Valley or Harding’s Friendly Market in Berrien Springs, Mich. An online format of the magazine as an app or a book is in development and will be available when the next issue is released sometime this spring/summer.

To learn more about Envision and how you can be involved in the next issue, contact Debbie Michel at dmichel@andrews.edu.

A group of School of Architecture, Art & Design students, faculty and community members, including alums, traveled to Haiti Jan. 15–24, 2012, to volunteer their time and sweat in rebuilding the campus of Adventist University of Haiti (UNAH). The campus was severely damaged in the Jan. 12, 2010, earthquake. Since then, a number of Andrews University entities have offered ongoing support to rebuild the campus, including the Department of Physical Therapy, the Department of Behavioral Sciences and the Office of Campus Safety.

This most recent trip was an endeavor of the Architecture Missions Group (AMG) in the School of Architecture, Art & Design led by Martin Smith, assistant professor of architecture and director of AMG, and Melody Johnson, contract faculty. The fifth-year graduate architecture students were completing their final studio class before graduation.

This trip centered around two main projects: restoring the Seminary Chapel and developing a master campus plan. Restoration of the Seminary Chapel will be completed in a few phases with the first phase being rebuilding the front façade. The Seminary Chapel was built in 1955 and is one of the oldest buildings on campus.

"It is very beautiful building and houses a lot of UNAH's memories from vespers, weddings and classes. UNAH has expressed that they would like their new buildings designed with the Seminary Chapel as a model as it's one of the most beloved buildings on campus," says Johnson.

Jean Josué Pierre, president of UNAH, says this trip and the students’ work were imbued with deep symbolism. “They’re bringing life back to this historic building, keeper of several generations’ memories,” says Pierre.

In addition to getting some hands-on experience in restoring the chapel, the students also spent time researching for the development of a new master plan for UNAH. They studied the existing condition of campus, developed an understanding of the climate and natural environment, and connected with the Haitian culture.

This trip not only offered an important academic experience for the students, but it also affirmed both the professional and personal direction they are taking in their lives. “Seeing firsthand the effect natural disasters have on a society that does not have building codes reinforced the reasons for the strict laws mandated by the U.S. It reminded me of the seriousness of architecture as a profession and its effect on quality of life,” says fifth-year student Brianna Richards. “This outreach helped solidify my desire to help bring the kind of peace of mind we here in the U.S. enjoy in relation to the safety of our building. I want to bring that same peace of mind to people in developing countries. My desire to use my degree from Andrews University to help those who are less fortunate was strengthened because I went to Haiti.”

“It’s important to understand the culture and area as much as we can. We can’t expect to design for the people of Haiti by using North American standards,” says Smith.

The students will now begin work on the long-term master plan project. During the spring 2012 semester, students will focus on designing a trade school, a men's residence hall and a women's residence hall. Future phases for the Seminary Chapel include installing a new roof and eventually restoring the interior.

About the Architecture Missions Group
The Architecture Mission Group (AMG) exists to offer design and construction assistance to communities, organizations and churches around the world. It also provides mission and service opportunities for our students, faculty and alumni. During the 1993–1994 school year, the Andrews University architecture students, in collaboration with the Adventist Development & Relief Agency, started the design of a Drug Rehabilitation Center and Children's home in Lajas, Bolivia, called CERENID. This project eventually led to the formal establishment of the Architecture Missions Group in 2006.

Andrews adds construction management, design programs
By Daily Star

Beginning in the fall, the Andrews University School of Architecture will become the School of Architecture, Art & Design. Three new degree programs, interior design, construction management and documentary film, will be added to the school’s offerings.

According to Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design, no other Seventh-day Adventist educational institution offers a four-year degree in building construction management or any programs focused on interior design.

“The church needs workers who understand its beliefs of simplicity, creativity, building and designing for the glory of God. Like other secular universities with construction management and interior design programs, our students will gain understanding of everything related to the profession. However, unlike others, they will also have the opportunity to participate in community service, outreach, mission work and even the opportunity to study abroad,” Carscallen said.

The construction management degree will prepare students to plan, direct and coordinate projects, from residential to commercial, and from roads and bridges to schools and hospitals.

Interior design students will learn to apply creative and technical solutions within a structure to create functional and aesthetically pleasing spaces.

The documentary film program will be suited to those interested in storytelling.
BERRIEN SPRINGS - Andrews University is making a change to its School of Architecture.

Starting in the 2012-13 academic year, the school will become the School of Architecture, Art & Design. Three new degree programs - interior design, construction management, and documentary film - will be added to the school's offerings.

The construction management degree will prepare students to plan, direct and coordinate a variety of projects, including residential, commercial, roads, bridges, schools and hospitals. Students pursuing the construction management degree will be required to have a minor in business administration.

Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design, said Andrews is the only Seventh-day Adventist educational institution that offers a four-year degree in building construction management or any programs focused on interior design.

"The church needs workers who understand its beliefs of simplicity, creativity, building and designing for the glory of God," Carscallen said.

Students will learn the same professional skills as those in secular universities, Carscallen said. "However, unlike others, they will also have the opportunity to participate in community service, outreach, mission work and even the opportunity to study abroad," he said.

Interior design students will learn to apply creative and technical solutions within a structure to create functional and aesthetically pleasing interior spaces.

The new Department of Visual Art & Design in the school is also introducing a new degree in documentary film. The program is aimed at people interested in storytelling, combining documentary theory, film history, storyboarding, editing, compositing and sound creation.

The department will continue to offer these degrees: a bachelor of art degree in fine art and art history; a bachelor's degree in fine arts, or BFA, in fine art, illustration, graphic design, pre-art therapy, and art direction/advertising; a bachelor of science in visual art education; and a BFA in commercial photography and in fine art photography.
Day Trip: Berrien Springs offers treasure troves of history

BERRIEN SPRINGS — History springs eternal in Berrien Springs. In less than an hour’s drive, you can be looking at a brick made in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon about 600 years before Christ, or exploring the history of Berrien Springs in the 1839 courthouse.

History lovers, Best-Ever Friend Dave and I had been waiting for a break in the weather so we could visit Berrien Springs’ wonderful treasure troves of history.

We started by immersing ourselves in ancient history at the Siegfried H. Horn Archaeological Museum, 9047 Old U. S. 31. We had made an appointment for a tour with Jacob Moody, assistant curator of this museum associated with Andrews University. Jacob is passionate about his work which was clear as he talked to us about the artifacts, Biblical history, and participating in the archaeological digs that Andrews conducts in Jordan.

The first thing we saw was a huge Bedouin tent, handwoven from goat hair, which the museum purchased from a Jordanian family, Jacob said. Visitors can go into the tent, sit on the cushions and get a tiny feel for Bedouin living.

Nearby is a small bronze statuette of Baal, the Canaanite god, with a pointed hat, raised arm, and tunic. Looking at the ancient figure, I remembered the story of the prophet, Elijah, who defeated the prophets of Baal in the Bible. In this tiny portrayal, Baal didn’t look too strong or menacing.

Showing us a small ossuary from the time of Jesus, Jacob explained the burial tradition at the time was to place the body into a cave. After the body had decomposed, the bones would be removed and placed into an ossuary.

The Egyptian Hall has a replica of a mummy case, but also some real mummies - of an ibis, a falcon, and a human
The Mesopotamian Hall contains the brick from Nebuchadnezzar’s time as well as a brick stamped with the insignia of the Roman 10th Legion which destroyed Jerusalem in 70 A.D. It was surreal to be in a small museum in Southwest Michigan looking at such ancient artifacts.

The museum also has a room full of over 3,000 cuneiform tablets dating as far back as 2100 B.C. Jacob said these small tablets were often receipts for purchases. Interestingly, some were placed inside an outer shell which acted like an envelope.

In the Life of Christ Hall, there’s a model of Jerusalem from 1890. Having been to Jerusalem in the early 1990s, we asked Jacob where the Wailing Wall was. Pointing to an area on the model, he explained how after the 1967 war, an area was cleared to create a plaza in front of the Wailing Wall.

Jacob then took us to the basement classroom where students work with pottery shards from the archaeological digs, trying to put the pots back together again. I can’t imagine the excitement students must feel working with centuries old artifacts and reconstructing them.

We spent nearly two hours in this small museum, but time was fleeting so we thanked Jacob for a wonderful tour and headed to the History Center at Courthouse Square, 313 N. Cass St. Dave and I had expected just to explore the courthouse built in 1839, but the site also has the Sheriff’s Residence, the Murdock Log House, the Jail Plaza, and a forge.

Signs directed us to the Sheriff’s Residence where Kristen Umphrey, museum store manager, gave us a brochure for a self-guided walking tour. She also said this complex of government buildings is the oldest of its kind in the Midwest.

Crossing the square to the impressive Greek Revival style courthouse built in 1839, we climbed the steps to the second floor courtroom. We sat in the large courtroom, imagining people a century ago attending trials, a popular form of entertainment then - the pre-TV equivalent of “Judge Judy.”

Back downstairs, we explored the various historical exhibits learning about Emanuel Missionary College which later become Andrews University, about Isaac McCoy and his wife who established a mission school in 1823 to teach Indian children to read and write, and about the Marx Music Company and its strange instruments including the ukelin.

Leaving the courthouse, we went to the log house which was impressive with two large fireplaces. Built in 1830 by the county’s first lawyer, Francis Murdock, the log cabin was discovered quite by accident when a house with wooden siding was being demolished. There, underneath the siding was the log house.

The jail no longer exists, but a plaza shows the layout of the circular jail which had 16 pie-shaped cells. Be sure to read the signage about inmates who escaped - albeit temporarily - from this jail.
After exploring the museum gift shop, which has a large collection of local history books, we headed for Nikki’s Cafe, 200 W. Ferry St., for lunch. This tiny eatery is big on both friendly hometown atmosphere and good food: vegetable soup and a BLT with fries for Dave; ham and bean soup and a chicken salad wrap with fries for me.

If, as they say, history repeats itself, we’ll be repeating it with another trip to Berrien Springs to immerse ourselves in history.

Dr. Economou blessed so many, especially her foreign students and even the girlfriend of her foreign student with her love and hospitality and her wonderful cooking. She will be greatly missed and fondly remembered even 26 years later. nina

ELLY LOVED THE PEOPLE! REALLY LOVED THEM. SHE LOVED THIS CHURCH, DEEPLY. VERY MUCH. BUT MORE THAN THAT, ELLY LOVED JESUS, WITH ALL HER BEING. THAT’S WHY LOVED THIS CHURCH AND PEOPLE IN GENERAL. FEW OF US LIVE LIVES AS SHE HAD LIVED IT. SHE IS WAS AN ANGEL ON THIS EARTH. IN A SHORT AWHILE, AND WE WILL SEE ELLY AGAIN, HUG HER, AND LOVE HER BACK. MAY SHE SLEEP IN JESUS UNTIL THE MORNING I WILL SEE MY PARENTS, MY FRIENDS.

Dear Miss Economou was a very special person in my life I first met her as a 10 year old girl invited to her home for a graduation party she was hosting. I fell in love with Greek food because of her. And remember what a sweet and warm person she was to every one she met. Her humbleness and love for God was evident in everything she did. Later in college and taking a Bible course from her I was amazed at her ability to bring the Bible to life and make difficult passages easy to understand and learn your Bible from cover to cover. I still have that Bible on my bookshelf. She always asked me when I saw her when she was going to a bridal shower for me and what would I like to eat and I always said I would let her choose as long as there was Baklava for desert.

I was blessed to take classes from her and thank God for her life and ministry.

Elly's passing brings back many memories of joy and pain. We go back a very long time, first to Europe where we first met, then to Andrews university. Elly's example is that trust in God leads to happiness. I hope to see her again, soon. With love, Gottfried Oosterwal.

I had the chance to be a student missionary to Greece. This culture does not exactly welcome other religions. But it was Elly's love for the Greek people that gave me strength to press forward. She selflessly gave of her time and money to translate and publish many E.G. White books. She is a God-given example of the dedication Advent believers need to go to proclaim Christ's soon return.

Dear Elly was so precious. She loved Jesus, and she loved learning and teaching. She was a wonderful teacher and friend and she will be greatly missed.

I lived in one of the sectioned apartments that she provided in her basement. She was so kind to me and all who lived there. She was a friend to all who stayed there. One day she had me chase a mouse out of her house, she was so grateful I got it, she made me feel like I caught a lion bare handed. I will miss her but will soon see her again.

I can't tell you how sad it makes me to know that Elly has died. I was in her French class back in the late 60s & she has been a wonderful friend since then. I will miss her new essay, picture-filled Christmas letter, as well as other cards throughout the year. I will miss her warm hospitality & concern for me & my family. The Lord cannot come soon enough so we can reunite with our friends. Bonnie Beres

Precious Elly was there to comfort and support when our hearts were broken. She was there (throughout many years) to entertain and have us faculty experience fun and the most wonderful Greek delicacies. Her heart overflowed with love and concern for all in her reach. Dr. Economou displayed humbleness inspite of her great intellect and many talents. She was loved and will be missed.

Family of Dr. Elly Economou the message above is from my mother Wilfrida Tenorio de Ruiz and Luz Ruiz Tenorio, she also knew me as Fotini, the Greek name she gave me in her Greek class. We both enjoyed Dr. Economou's friendship for many years.

To the family of dear Dr. Elly Economou. We thank God for having given us the privilege to have known her, as a loving teacher and a generous friend. And though we knew she loved us, we knew her family and dear Greece was ever present in her mind. She taught us Greek, and much more. We learned to sing in Greek, and the delicious and exquisite Greek food along with wit and her wonderful and elegant hospitality, will forever warm our hearts. I will miss her sweet words, "How is mother?" We will miss her faithful cards and kind words, but we rest in the hope she also embraced, that one day soon Jesus will return to take us all home.

Rescued Dog needs a home

I am a college student and am looking for a pet-loving home owner who is willing to foster my dog this semester. I volunteer at the local animal shelter and completely felt a connection with one of the dogs there. She is a jack russell mix who is about two years old. I will take her home after this semester but for now I am trying to save her from the pound. I will pay for her dog food, vet expenses, toys, and anything else needed. I will also pay the home owner rent at a negotiable price. Please contact me as soon as possible if you are interested. I feel called to save this dog, please feel free to email or call me at any reasonable time.
