Planning a Campus for the Next Generation of Seventh-day Adventist Education

The planning and design for the future of the Andrews University campus begins now. This fall semester, the School of Architecture, Art & Design is taking the lead to chart a course for the next 10 years of campus development. Everyone is invited to participate!

You are invited to participate in the first Campus Planning Workshop

Sunday, September 9
Hoosier/Lincoln Room, Dining Services from 4–6 p.m.

This project is being led by the Campus Design Studio from the School of Architecture, Art & Design.

This is an unprecedented campus-wide planning process where students, faculty, staff, alumni and community members will be considering ideas and actions to help shape the next generation of buildings and spaces for a distinctive Seventh-day Adventist Christian education at Andrews University.

The goal is to shape an updated and revised Campus Master Plan and supporting design guidelines by January 2013. The Campus Design Studio was created for this purpose and will work with the campus community through a series of interactive meetings and workshops. This effort plugs into Strategic Initiative #6 of the new Andrews University 2012–17 Strategic Plan. This project is intended to help shape the environment and facilities that support the operation of a quality academic and student life program here at Andrews University.

A detailed schedule of events and information about the project and its interdisciplinary team is available online at www.andrews.edu/campusplan.

Fall Fellowship Offering Raises More Than $2,000 for CERENID Missions Project

On Sabbath, August 18, faculty and staff gathered for worship in the Howard Performing Arts Center as part of Fall Fellowship 2012. Provost Andrea Luxton interviewed Carey Carscallen and Martin Smith from the School of Architecture, Art & Design on how they are working to extend the educational mission of Christ through their work at Andrews.

Carscallen and Smith shared photos and updates from the recent Bolivia Mission Trip to the CERENID Orphanage. Since 1995, faculty, staff and students from architecture have donated their time and talents to helping this orphanage with much-needed physical updates and expansion. Pictured on the screen is Angelica Larriu, a fifth-year architecture student, working on a project at CERENID.

Following the interview, an offering was collected to help cover costs of repairing a tractor and other farm equipment. "The offering collected totaled $2,048.81," says Carscallen. "I am humbled and blessed by the generosity of our faculty and staff. This project is very near and dear to our hearts and we greatly appreciate the support of our fellow Andrews employees."

Lear Jet 23 Donated to the Department of Aviation

The Andrews University Department of Aviation recently added a 1966 Lear Jet 23 to its fleet of training planes. Randall J. Latona of the AJM Airline Company in Smyrna, Tenn., donated the plane after receiving a request from Verlyn Benson, assistant to the president.

In need of an aircraft that would provide students with practical training on the more complex twin turbine engine-powered jet, the department used the FAA registry of business jets to send queries to see if any owners would be willing to donate an aircraft that would potentially fit their needs. Farming without chemicals

Andrews University starts long process to certify that what is grows will be truly organic

Farming without chemicals

BERRIEN SPRINGS - Besides giving people the chance to get some of the area's best produce with its new fresh food subscription program, Andrews University is also providing an example that organic farming is doable and makes both economic and environmental sense.

This year Andrews has started what could be up to a three-year process to get organic certification for the fruits and vegetables being grown on university-owned farmland around Berrien Springs.

Andrews agriculture professor Garth Woodruff is leading the effort to gain organic certification. He said he sees the effort as making sense not only environmentally, but economically, with the promotion of locally grown foods.

"It's about a whole life philosophy of having a low carbon footprint and being environmentally friendly," he said. "Being organic is an important component of the bigger picture of being local and sustainable. What we do are based on tangible results too, such as that the food tastes better and is healthier for people and the environment."

He said certification can take between nine months and three years to achieve, mainly because it can take that long to make sure the soil the produce is being grown in is free of chemicals. People can be assured that organic items found in the grocery store have been certified by some government or other organization, he said.

"There are always concerns about the soil and giving it time for the contamination to go away," he said. "These fields have been sprayed in the past, so it will take time to get certification. We can say that this year's produce was grown with no chemicals. It's an ongoing process, it can't be fixed in one day."

At Andrews, going organic has involved a number of steps, including changing how the plants are grown in the fields, with cover crops growing between rows, to trying out different kinds of nonchemical fertilizers.

He said one misconception people have is that manure is the only kind of natural fertilizer available and is applied regularly to a garden throughout the year. The opposite is true at Andrews. The manure from the Andrews dairy farm is spread on the fields only once a year - in the fall.

This year they've been using a number of natural fertilizers on the Andrews fields, such as kelp and algae. In addition, the white clover and rye planted between the rows serve not only as a way to keep weeds down but also add nutrients. Straw is also used as a mulch.

They’ve also used natural, organic measures to prevent insect infestations and disease, such as using something call neem oil to discourage insects from attacking plants and produce. They also do other preventive measures, such as clearing away dead and rotting plants and keeping the weeds down.

At your home

While the Andrews operation is large, Woodruff said there are a lot of things individuals can do in their home gardens. To start off, he said there are many more organic resources available than there used to be. For example, people can buy organic seeds at local hardware stores, garden shops and places like the Eau Claire Fruit Exchange.

"It's a lot easier than people think it is to grow organically," Woodruff said. "The two biggest things are keeping a very clean garden, which means clearing out old plants and vegetation, and keeping an eye on the garden so that you find insects and fungus right away and clear it out.

"The homeowner can stop in at any garden store and tell them about what the problem is and they'll be shown an organic product to fix it," he said.

Woodruff said organic gardening and organic farming in some respects hearken back to earlier times before chemicals became such a big part of gardening and farming. "A lot of the things we do could be considered old school and doing stuff by the sweat of the brow," he said.

Dr. Shepherd is Professor of New Testament Interpretation at the SDA Theological Seminary. The meetings will be one hour in length, from 7:00-8:00 p.m., meeting on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights through October 6. The class size is limited to 60. Berrien Springs Camera Club

The monthly meeting of the Berrien Springs Camera Club will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 3, at 7 p.m. in the Berrien Springs Public Library at Cass (Old 31) and Union in Berrien Springs. This month’s program consists of a competition of slides and digital images, either projected or printed, submitted by members, the first competition of the current season.

As usual, there will be two select topics for the month. In addition, Nature is always an acceptable category, as are Open (any subject) and Portraits. The two select categories for the October competition are:
Dawn/Sunset & Now and Then: which could include side-by-side comparative collages or individual images showing a contrast between the past and present.
Nature photos are to show nothing from human hands (no wires, fences, cultivated flowers, etc.). Thus a member can submit images in any of five categories or a combination thereof. Prints, at least 5”x7” in size, should be mounted, with the title and photographer's name on the back. Digital submissions, however, need to be sent in a week ahead, with instructions for submitting them on the Club’s website: http://photoclub.berrienspringsmi.us/.
Any member may submit up to 10 projected images and/or 10 prints for the competition, but no one is obligated to do so. Pictures are shown one at a time, and three judges score them by machine. The total points determine whether a photo is rated "honor," "acceptance," or "out." From the honors selections a Slide-of-the-Month and a Print-of-the-Month are selected. Photographers names are not revealed for the "out" category. No one need feel embarrassment; this is a group of friends sharing experiences and tips for better photography.

All are welcome, either to observe or to join. Refreshments will be served.
