Andrews Academy Presents Feast of Lights

Friday, Dec. 7
7 p.m., Pioneer Memorial Church
Andrews University Christmas Cards Available to Order

We are pleased to offer an Andrews University Christmas card this year. It comes with a festive red color printed on the back.

Pricing Details

- Card with blank envelope: $0.58 each, minimum 50, non-personalized can be purchased in packets of 10.

You will need to provide the following information:

- IDC number for charges
- Quantity needed
- Optional personalization as you wish it to appear - (eg. From your friends at the Office of Integrated Marketing & Communication at Andrews University.)

All cards include the same interior text:

The Buller Hall Christmas tree looks on as the world passes by—in the form of young, bright students from nearly 100 different countries. While they may not linger by that tree, they linger in Buller Hall—from the classrooms to the study lounges to the Rose Chapel next to Newbold Auditorium—to put our mission statement into practice: Seek Knowledge. Affirm Faith. Change the World. Joy to the world, indeed!

How to Order

- If you do not wish to have the card personalized from your department/office, you may place your order directly with Lithotech by calling 471-6027.
- Orders for cards with personalization can be placed with IMC print design manager Ellie Quinones via e-mail: elliscen@andrews.edu.
- Cards will be delivered within one week of placing your order.

Physicochemical Properties of Wheat Proteins
Thursday, Dec. 6
4:30 p.m., Halenz Hall Room A-107

Are you curious about how the properties of wheat proteins affect their use in bread and other consumer products? Attend this seminar to learn more.

All are invited to the last lecture in the Fall 2012 Andrews University Chemistry & Biochemistry Departmental Seminar Series this coming Thursday, December 6 at 4:30 p.m.
As usual we meet in A-107 Halenz Hall.

Thursday’s seminar is about:
Physicochemical Properties of Wheat Proteins

Our guest speaker for this Thursday’s seminar presentation is:
Perry KW Ng, Professor, Department of Food Science & Human Nutrition, Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI 48824.

Dr. Perry K. W. Ng is a professor at Michigan State University (MSU). He obtained his university education in Canada, graduating with a Ph.D. degree in Cereal Chemistry from the University of Manitoba in 1982. Prof. Ng was named Fellow of the American Association of Cereal Chemists International in 2010. He was inducted as a Fellow of the International Association for Cereal Science and Technology (IAAC) Academy at the 14th ICC Cereal and Bread Congress in Beijing, China, on August 7, 2012.

He joined the faculty of MSU in 1992 to initiate a Cereal Science Program in the Department of Food Science & Human Nutrition (FSHN), and has additionally worked with MSU’s Institute of International Agriculture since 2008. His research focuses on physiochemical and genetic properties of wheat proteins in relation to end-use qualities, cereal chemistry and technology, extrusion technology, and modifying grain components for functional food ingredients.

He teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in Cereal Science, coordinates a number of international projects, has graduated over a dozen post-graduate students, mentored 43 post-doctoral fellows, visiting scholars, and visiting professors from 14 countries, and has over 120 scientific publications, two books, and two U.S. patents.

Annual Testing of the Fire Alarm and Sprinkler Systems

Monday, Dec. 17, 2012 to Friday, Jan. 4, 2013
Campus-wide

The Office of Campus Safety will be conducting routine tests of the fire alarm and sprinkler suppression systems from Monday, Dec. 17, 2012 to Friday, Jan. 4, 2013. These tests are required by the State of Michigan. Both tests will cause the building’s fire alarm system to activate with both visual and audible notifications. During this test period only, if a fire alarm activates in your building and lasts for less than 2 minutes, disregard the alarm. If an alarm is activated for a real emergency during the test period, the Office of Campus Safety will respond immediately and start the evacuation process. The alarm will continue to sound until the emergency has been resolved.

The annual test of the sprinkler system (visual and audible only; no water) will take place in the following buildings:

- Andrews Academy
- Airpark—Seamont Building
- Buller Hall
- Burman Hall
- Campus Center
- Chan Shun Hall
- Damazo Hall
- Grounds
- Halenz Hall
- Harrigan Hall
- Haughhey Hall
- Howard Performing Arts Center
- James White Library
- Nethery Hall
- Price Hall
- Ruth Murdoch Elementary School
- Seminary (Tan Hall)

The annual test of the fire alarm system will affect the following buildings:

- Administration Building
- Airpark—Seamont Building
- Airpark—Simulator Building
- Andrews Academy
- Architecture Building
- Art & Design Center
- Beaty Pool/Johnson Gym
- Bell Hall
- Buller Hall
- Burman Hall
- Campus Center
- Chan Shun Hall
- Damazo Hall
- Garland Apartment Building A
- Garland Apartment Building C
- Griggs Hall/Lake Union Building
- Halenz Hall
- Hamel Hall

Temporary Relocation of Third Floor Ad Building Staff

The administrative suite located on the third floor of the Administration Building will have disruptions in service this week due to installation of new carpeting.

Support staff will be working Tuesday, Dec. 4 through Friday, Dec. 7, to temporarily relocate their furniture and phone lines to AD307.

Staff members temporarily relocating to AD307 are:

- Dalry Payne, Office of the President
- Mimi Weithers-Bruce, Office of the Provost
- Loretta Nave, Office of Financial Administration
- Shari Smoot, Office of University Advancement
- Sylvia Budd, Internal Auditor
- Judy Mackie, Office of the General Counsel
- Sarah Kimakwa, Office of Research & Creative Scholarship

Staff should be settled into their temporary office area by Friday, Dec. 7. The work is expected to be completed and staff returned to their regular work areas by January 4, 2013.

Please note: Only support staff will be moving to AD307. Administrators and staff occupying side offices will not relocate.

Thank you for your patience during this time of transition.

Students Support Operation Christmas Child
Students from several departments in the Andrews University School of Health Professions kicked off their Christmas season by giving to children around the world through Operation Christmas Child. Sharing the good news of God’s love with hurting boys and girls is the heart of Operation Christmas Child. Along with small presents and personal items for the children, each box contains literature on the gospels, an opportunity for the child to receive Bible lessons and a copy of The Greatest Journey in the child’s native language.

The Department of Physical Therapy became heavily involved when Esther Jones, Collection Center Coordinator for Operation Christmas Child and administrative assistant in the Department of Physical Therapy, and Sarah Hythecker, vice president of the Physical Therapy Class of 2014, set a dream in motion. Hosting a packing party in October and several collection dates between October and November, physical therapy students and staff were able to pack just under 100 boxes. This is the second year that PT has been involved in Operation Christmas Child. Wanting to get more people around campus excited about this ministry, Hythecker invited department chairs from the School of Health Professions to get their students and faculty involved.

Through Chapel announcements and Operation Christmas Child posters hung across campus, students were able to see that just a simple, small gesture could make a big difference. Participation meant packing a shoe box with small gifts, donating $7 online or including it in the box and then dropping it off on the collection days.

"As a physical therapy student my spare time is limited. What I like about Operation Christmas Child is that participation is quick and easy. All you have to do is purchase items to include in the box, make an online donation, and pack the box. Quick and easy!" says Hythecker. "I can only imagine the joy the little girl receiving my box will experience. She will find colorful hair accessories, a toothbrush and toothpaste, a teddy bear, a coloring book and crayons, a notebook and pencils, some candy, and most importantly she will learn about the love of Jesus Christ."

As students from the Department of Physical Therapy encouraged others to join in, many lent a helping hand. The Department of Speech-Language Pathology & Audiology hosted a packing party in October, resulting in approximately 50 shoeboxes. Students from the Departments of Nursing and Nutrition & Wellness packed boxes on their own time. In total, students from across the Andrews campus ended up donating 212 packed shoeboxes to Operation Christmas Child.

From Andrews, the boxes were taken to the Niles Adventist School, a regional collection site. Operation Christmas Child is no stranger to Niles Adventist School. The school has been involved for the past 16 years, and during that time more than 158,000 gift boxes have passed through the site. This year alone, 23,701 shoeboxes were collected at the Niles Adventist School collection site.

This year, with the expected shoe box collection of over 9 million boxes worldwide, OCC expects to pass a significant milestone—collecting and delivering shoe boxes to more than 100 million children since it was established in 1993 by Samaritan’s Purse, a Christian relief and evangelism organization.

Even though the main collection drive has come to a close, shoeboxes can be “packed” online by visiting www.samaritanspurse.org/giving/buildabox.
Andrews Named on U.S. News & World Report's "Overperforming Schools" List

U.S. News has published a first-ever analysis of colleges in their National Universities ranking category that are overperforming or underperforming their undergraduate academic reputations in terms of their overall Best Colleges 2013 rankings. This concept measures the degree to which a university's overall position in the rankings exceeds or falls short of its undergraduate academic reputation rank. Andrews University is named on that list. Read the full story

Which Ranked Universities Are Doing Better Than Their Academic Reputations?

By ROBERT MORSE

November 29, 2012

U.S. News is publishing a first-ever analysis of colleges in our National Universities ranking category that are overperforming or underperforming their undergraduate academic reputations in terms of their overall Best Colleges 2013 rankings. This concept measures the degree to which a university's overall position in the rankings exceeds or falls short of its undergraduate academic reputation rank.

How should these results be interpreted?

If a school is doing better in the overall rankings than in its undergraduate academic reputation, it means the school is performing relatively well in the other key academic indicators used in the rankings: admissions selectivity, financial and faculty resources, alumni giving, and graduation and retention rates. It also means that a school's undergraduate reputation among its academic peers is lagging behind the progress the school has achieved in the underlying academic indicators.

On the other hand, if a school's academic reputation ranking is better than its overall ranking, it means that the school's performance in the key academic indicators used by U.S. News is not keeping pace with its academic reputation. This could mean that the school's undergraduate academic reputation is benefiting from a much higher reputation held by its various graduate schools. Or, it could mean that the school's reputation has yet to fully reflect negative trends that are taking place in the underlying academic indicators.

All the top overperforming universities except South Carolina State University are private schools. Many of the overperformers are relatively small research universities that grant fewer doctorates and conduct less research than others schools in their category. All the underperformers are large public universities—in some cases the top "flagship" public in their state—whose academic reputation rank exceeds the performance in the academic indicators.

For National Universities, the U.S. News ranking formula gives the academic reputation peer score a weight of 15 percent in the overall ranking model. Peer assessments are subjective, but they are also important because a diploma from a distinguished college helps graduates get good jobs or gain admission to top-notch graduate programs.

Only schools that were numerically ranked National Universities in the Best Colleges 2013 rankings were included in this analysis.

The 2012 issue of Envision has a cover story entitled “G.I. Joe Rivera” which is a profile of a student at Andrews University as well as several other profiles of students. “We feature some students who’ve tackled some pretty daunting challenges head-on,” said Debbie Michel, associate professor of communication and editor-in-chief of the magazine. The stories focus on “the power of God in their lives.”
It also features articles on many topics of special interest to students, including ways to stay energized, how to get a great internship, and how to erase student loan debt. It is the fourth annual issue of the magazine produced by a collaborative effort of Andrews students from multiple academic programs, including those from classes on Publication Production, Advanced Media Writing, Publication Design, and Studio Photography.

“It was a great experience and I learned a lot about how a magazine works,” says Tacyana Behrmann, one of the magazine’s student editors. After her first year working on the magazine, Tacyana feels that she learned something about the business of journalism. “It gave me a look into the magazine publishing world—what it takes and the work that goes into it,” she says, describing how she used the campus “grapevine” to find stories for the magazine. Tacyana was one of about 50 students who were involved in producing this issue.

“The students have once again outdone themselves providing top-notch writing, photography and design,” said Michel. “It’s a great portfolio piece for them to show what they can do, in settings as close to the real world as a college environment allows.” Students experience every step of the production of a magazine, including writing, editing, design and photography.

Envision is available for purchase for $2.50 at the Gazebo, the Andrews Bookstore, Apple Valley Market, Harding’s and the Adventist Book Center located near the campus in Berrien Springs, Michigan. Interested individuals outside the area can contact Debbie Michel at dmichel@andrews.edu.

Girls on the Run Needs Coaches!

Girls on the Run is a character development program that teaches life skills in a creative and active way. The curriculum addresses issues that girls at this age are dealing with (lack of identity, lack of connectedness, and feelings of powerlessness) by giving the girls the chance to examine their own core values and think about what makes them special. The girls identify their strengths and set personal goals while exploring the importance of being physically and emotionally healthy.

As a Girls on the Run/Girls on Track Coach, you will meet with your team of 8-15 girls during their twice a week, 90-minute practices between March 4th and May 17th. You’ll lead your team through the GOTR/GOT Curriculum and coordinate your team at the United Way of Southwest Michigan Girls on the Run 5K on May 23rd at the Berrien County Youth Fairgrounds. Training and supplies are provided by United Way of Southwest Michigan.

Coaches do not need to be runners.

If you want to be a coach, go to the Girls on the Run website here and sign up!

The Day Hell Broke Loose

Rewind: Edward Fudge, now a Houston-based lawyer and internationally known theologian and author, began his preaching career at the tender age of 16 for the Church of Christ. Like most other evangelical churches, Fudge’s denomination taught the twofold doctrines of natural immortality and eternal hell. Young Edward accepted these teachings unquestioningly, because that’s what good Christians did in those days. Interestingly, he devoured a set of Voice of Prophecy study guides at age 14. Apparently the force of his training kept him from accepting the biblical teaching of annihilation of the wicked. But he would revisit the issue later in life.

Fast-forward 15 years. Edward has married a schoolteacher named Sarah Faye Locke and fathered two children. Plans for an academic career loomed before him until his father’s death at only 57 years of age led him to assume the directorship of the family publishing business in Athens, Alabama.

When a hostile takeover led to his firing, he found a job as a typesetter in a printshop while serving as volunteer pastor of a small nondenominational church that met in a renovated barn. It was during these days of barn preaching that hell quite literally broke loose.

Keep rolling. Fudge published an article in Christianity Today (CT) that simply observed that the Bible most often described the end of the lost with such words as “die,” “perish,” or “destroy.” Ever the scholar, he gathered and shared biblical data as naturally as a farmer sowed a field. A renegade Adventist named Robert Brinsmead read the article. Brinsmead, once a preacher, had restudied most of Adventism’s distinctive teachings and rejected them. Now he wanted to restudy the doctrine of hell to decide whether he wanted to also reject the Adventist view that it entails annihilation rather than an eternally conscious torment.

From Fear to Love

In an interview with Planet Preterist Edward Fudge says: “Brinsmead planned to hire a theological researcher to spend a year compiling everything on the end of the wicked, as found in the Old Testament, intertestamental literature (Apocrypha, Pseudepigrapha, Dead Sea scrolls), New Testament, Apostolic Fathers, Ante-Nicene Fathers, Post-Nicene Fathers, medieval theologians, Reformers, and a few modern theologians. When he saw my CT article, he decided to invite me to take on the project, which, after prayerful discussion and considerations, I did. By the time I finished that yearlong project, the evidence I found had compelled me to change my own mind.”

Edward Fudge emerged from his research converted to the biblical teaching that humans possessed conditional immortality, and that hell served to destroy sinners rather than torture them. What? A Bible Belt preacher who discarded traditional hell? How would he move sinners to the altar?

Very simple: love. In his words: “The gospel, not hell, is our primary message, and love for God is a far more effective motivator than fear of hell. . . . The traditional doctrine of unending torment has turned many people away from God, including famous atheists from Bertrand Russell to Antony Flew.”

How did his community respond? That serves as the central drama of the film Hell and Mr. Fudge. And we won’t be giving any spoilers in this article.

$500,000 for the State of the Dead Project

Pan west to Angwin, California. Another unassuming type, film producer Pat Arrabito holds the goal of capturing on film the twin pillar doctrines of the seventh-day Sabbath and the condition of humanity in death.

Meet the Press: Pat Arrabito (left) is interviewed prior to one of the screenings of the film.

Ellen White’s words, found in one of her favorite books, The Great Controversy, etch themselves into her mind: “Through the two great errors, the immortality of the soul and Sunday sacredness, Satan will bring the people under his deceptions. While the former lays the foundation of spiritualism, the latter creates a bond of sympathy with Rome. The Protestants of the United States will be foremost in stretching their hands across the gulf to grasp the hand of spiritualism; they will reach over the abyss to clasped hands with the Roman power; and under the influence of this threefold union, this country will follow in the steps of Rome in trampling on the rights of conscience."¹

In 2005 Arrabito, through her nonprofit corporation, LTT Productions, released a five-part documentary on the history of the Sabbath entitled The Seventh Day. This multimillion-dollar film series features actor Hal Holbrook as narrator. To date, close to a half-million copies circulate around the world in 13 languages (see sidebar).

Contemplating and praying about how best to present the truth about death and the fate of the lost, Arrabito and her colleagues, producer/director Jeff Wood, and researcher Jim Wood, initially filmed interviews with scholars and theologians for a documentary (yet to be completed). But Edward Fudge’s story intrigued them, and the idea of a feature film began to grow. In 2009, after much preliminary planning and several visits with Fudge at his home in Houston, funding fell through and the project was put on hold.

A phone call a year later changed that. "It was a big mistake for you to stop working on that ‘death project,’" the voice said. "Is there anything I can do to talk you into doing it?"

"I’ve never stopped praying that God would supply the means for it," Arrabito responded. Three weeks later an envelope containing $500,000 arrived in the mail, designated for the “death project,” which, you guessed it, rose from the grave to new life. Events unfolded in rapid succession: Donald Davenport wrote the script, which would be filmed in the very place its drama unfolded—Athens, Alabama. For 15 days in June 2011, cameras rolled.

Platinum at Worldfest and the Diamond of Friendship

_Cut to April 2012. The film, entered in the Worldfest-Houston International Film Festival as a work in progress, wins a Platinum Award, the highest award in its category._

On Location: Jeff Wood directs film crew and actors in one scene.

Not letting the thrill of recognition lead them to forget the film’s humble roots, LTT brought Hell and Mr. Fudge back to Athens, Alabama, June 5, 2012. Mayor Ronnie Marks stood at the front of the Cinemagic Theatre to welcome the film’s local talent, vendors, crew, and extras, along with friends and neighbors. As the film flashed on the screen, the darkness was punctuated with whispers of "There I am!" "I recognize that house." "That classroom is at Athens State!" and "That’s the Red Caboose in Elkmont." Then, as the credits rolled, the applause grew louder with each recognizable Athens name. It was as if their hometown had gone to Hollywood and returned home with a touch more makeup and lighting.

"The main reason we filmed here," Arrabito said at the screening, "is the community—you dear people here in this town opened your arms to us and welcomed us and helped us." The screening was, she said, "a thank-you to the city of Athens."

Having known Arrabito personally for many years, I must say she excels at building trusting, positive relationships with her colleagues. She’ll give a warm smile, a listening ear, and a ready laugh as freely as a lark sings. Such winsome Christians have an influence that only eternity can measure.

One such relationship is the one she developed with Edward Fudge and his wife, Sarah Faye. He says, "I allowed the producers to tell my story because I trusted them. I found out what they believed in God and what I believed were the same. And second, I found out they’re not from Hollywood. They’re from northern California."

The Prolific Fudge

Fudge named the book that flowed from his original studies _The Fire That Consumes: A Biblical and Historical Study of the Doctrine of Final Punishment_. Published in 1982, it remains a classic, with the third edition released last year. I have a copy on my shelf with more underlines than a help-wanted section of a jobless person’s newspaper.

The author says, "The Fire That Consumes was published in 1982—500 pages in length with 1,600 footnotes and two fascinating appendices examining the treatment given hell by Augustine and by John Calvin. Evangelical Book Club made it an Alternate Selection; scholars who are far better known than I am gave it their endorsement; and the rest is history. More accurately, the rest is providence."²

Fudge knew that most readers won't slog through 500 pages and won't find appendices fascinating, so he wrote a shorter book to complement the movie. The narrative-styled _Hell: A Final Word_ will be enjoyed by nontheologians and even those who have never read the Bible.

Hell (the Film): A Final Word

Pat Arrabito and the team hold big dreams for the film. "We want national and international distribution," she says. "That means we want to see it in theaters across the country and in other parts of the world. We’d like to see church groups get together to air it locally. We’d be happy to see it used for discussion groups. We want to see it distributed on DVD in bookstores and Walmart. We’d like people to watch it at home and show it to their neighbors."

Planning the Shots: Producer/director Jeff Wood (facing camera) discusses the logistics of filming with director of photography David Birkhart.

Eternal torture for the sins of one lifetime? Many have struggled to accept this. A lost loved one, taken away by a car wreck or heart attack, plunged straight into eternal hell by God, is a horrifying prospect. "Many have been driven to insanity by this harrowing thought," wrote Ellen White.³ Arrabito and her crew hope to bring a little sanity to the topic.

For some, this film will provoke probing questions about God’s character. For some, it will provoke deeper Bible study. For some, it will simply be a good film in which the little guy stands up for what he believes, suffers for it, and wins in the end. In any of these cases a loving and lovable God will stand in the spotlight.
Pondering why she chose this time to produce a feature film, Arrabito says, “Everyone likes stories; Jesus told stories; a person’s own story is the most powerful witness they possess; stories will attract viewers who might not watch a documentary.”

LLT Productions strives to bring the soul-saving message of God’s character of love before the masses. Ellen White wrote: “Workers with clear minds are needed to devise methods for reaching the people. Something must be done to break down the prejudice existing in the world against the truth.”

“God selects His messengers, and gives them His message; and He says, ‘Forbid them not.’ New methods must be introduced. God’s people must awake to the necessities of the time in which they are living.”

FREE Boxes & Packing Materials

Moving? We just moved in and have lots of cardboard boxes and packing materials that we’d like to see repurposed instead of just going to the recycling bin. We have several sizes of boxes (including three wardrobe boxes with the metal crossbar) and about four garbage bags full of packing paper. Take some or all. More available in the next week or two as we continue to unpack.

If you’re interested, we live right in the Village of Berrien Springs and can leave things on our front porch for you. Please email me at: lisarollins@gmail.com
