Andrews Student Feedback Needed for NSSE Survey

Dear Students,

This year, Andrews University is participating in the National Survey of Student Engagement (NSSE). The NSSE is an anonymous survey for freshmen and seniors. It is used by hundreds of colleges and universities across U.S. and Canada (621 to be exact) to measure two important aspects of college quality:

- The amount of time and effort students put into their studies and other educational activities.
- How the University uses its resources and organizes the curriculum to facilitate student learning.

Your participation in this survey is very important! Results from this survey will be used to plan improvements in the educational experience at Andrews University. The first invitation to take part in the survey should arrive in your inbox on Tuesday, February 5.

Please take the time to thoughtfully complete the survey. For more information about the NSSE, see nsse.iub.edu.

Michiana Adventist Forum Presents: Creation in Scripture

Saturday, Feb. 9
3:30 p.m., Garber Auditorium in Chan Shun Hall

Michiana Adventist Forum presents "Creation in Scripture" by Dr. Herold Weiss, Professor Emeritus of Religious Studies, Saint Mary's College, on Sabbath Afternoon at 3:30 p.m., February 9, 2013, in the Garber Auditorium in Chan Shun Hall on the campus of Andrews University.

Dr. Herold Weiss will be discussing the recent book "Creation In Scripture." This book surveys what the Bible writers say about Creation throughout the Old and New Testaments. It argues that it is important to understand the entirety of the Biblical evidence on creation. It examines Creation in the Wisdom Literature, The Psalms, Romans, the Corinthian Correspondence, Colossians, Hebrews and the Apocalypse as well as in Genesis.

Dr. Weiss encourages us to read the book beforehand. It is available in paperback from Amazon and in electronic form for the Nook and the Kindle.

A native of Montevideo educated in Argentina and in the United States, Dr. Weiss is professor emeritus of religious studies at Saint Mary's College in Notre Dame, Indiana. For many years he was also an affiliate professor of New Testament in the Hispanic program of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary. During the 1960's he was on the faculty of the SDA Theological Seminary at Andrews University. Currently he is responsible for the Spanish language section of the Spectrum website. He lives in Berrien Springs, Michigan, where he is an active member of the Berrien Springs Spanish SDA Church.
Weiss is author of Paul of Tarsus: His Gospel and Life; A Day of Gladness: The Sabbath Among Jews and Christians in Antiquity; Cross-Cultural Paul: Journeys to Others, Journeys to Ourselves; and Finding My Way in Christianity: Recollections of a Journey.

Adventist Forum is open to the public. All are welcome. For information, contact Art Robertson at robertsa2@earthlink.net or call 269-471-7150.

Honduras Youth Missions Report
Saturday, Feb. 23
5 p.m., PMC Youth Chapel

Come hear the stories and see the pictures from the PMC Youth Missions team that went to Honduras during Christmas break. On Sabbath afternoon, February 23, at 5 p.m. in the PMC youth chapel, the team will share their experiences of serving others with challenging needs and God's answers to prayers. The PMC team assisted at a REACH International orphanage and conducted a day camp for about 150 children each day! Be inspired by how God is using missionaries and local believers to touch lives for eternity.

Costume Assistant Needed for Passion Play

Costuming is a fun place where the actors come alive in costume. Assistants are needed to attend orientation, help at fittings, and assist the day(s) of Passion Play.

Orientation: All assistants must attend one orientation before helping at the fittings. It is extremely busy at the fittings and there is no time for instruction. At orientation instruction is given on where the different types of costumes are in the room. It is demonstrated on how to fit and reserve the costumes for the actors, and how to wear the different parts of the various types of costumes. Orientation is March 25, 5:30-6:30 and Sunday, March 31, 11 a.m. before the fitting.

Fittings: At the fittings, the costume assistant helps actors choose and reserve a costume for their character, assists them in trying it on, makes sure all costume pieces are there, and that it fits the actor well. Fittings are March 26 and 27, 5:15 – 7:15 pm, March 31, 12-4 pm, April 2 and 3, 5:15-7:15 pm.

Day(s) of Passion Play: Assist actors in getting dressed, tying belts, helping with headpieces and making sure actors look their best for their part. Assistants may take breaks during the day, join the potluck, and may go through and experience the Passion Play. Assistants especially help in putting away costumes at the end of the day(s).

If you know of someone who could take this role please contact Betty Whitehead.

Updated Fall 2012 Dean's List Now Online

The fall 2012 Dean's List, originally posted online on Jan. 29, 2013, was incorrect. It omitted the names of students within the new School of Health Professions, School of Architecture, Art & Design, the Department of Aviation and the Department of Agriculture. The updated list has an additional 96 names. The updated fall 2012 Dean's List can be found at www.andrews.edu/news/2013/01/Deans_List.html.

If you felt your name was omitted in error, please contact the dean of your respective school/college to determine your eligibility.

Area experts are skeptical new mental health measures will reduce gun violence, though they welcome President Obama's proposals to prevent, detect and treat mental illness.

The skepticism is rooted in the fact that the majority of violent crimes are not committed by people with a mental illness, including bipolar disorders, chronic depression and schizophrenia.

"It's important for the public to realize that mental illness does not equate with dangerous violence," said Duane McBride, chairman of the Department of Behavioral Sciences at Andrews University and chairman of the Berrien County Board of Health.

U.S. News has published a first-ever analysis of colleges in their National Universities ranking category that are overperforming or underperforming their undergraduate academic reputations in terms of their overall Best Colleges 2013 rankings. This concept measures the degree to which a university’s overall position in the rankings exceeds or falls short of its undergraduate academic reputation rank. Andrews University is named on that list.

Fighting a stereotype

Area experts are skeptical new mental health measures will reduce gun violence, though they welcome President Obama's proposals to prevent, detect and treat mental illness.

The skepticism is rooted in the fact that the majority of violent crimes are not committed by people with a mental illness, including bipolar disorders, chronic depression and schizophrenia.

"It's important for the public to realize that mental illness does not equate with dangerous violence," said Duane McBride, chairman of the Department of Behavioral Sciences at Andrews University and chairman of the Berrien County Board of Health. "In most, by far the majority, of violent crimes committed, there is not a diagnosable mental illness. Most of the violence committed by those with a mental illness is committed against themselves and not against the public."

There are an estimated 31,000 gun deaths in the United States each year. Two-thirds of those are suicides, most with handguns, according to the federal Centers for Disease Control.

After the Sandy Hook Elementary School massacre in December and other mass shootings, President Obama made a number of recommendations to bolster the country's treatment of mental illness, along with proposals for stricter gun control measures.

The president's mental health proposals include putting more counselors and psychologists in schools, providing mental health first aid training for teachers and other professionals, and offering referrals and treatment for young people who exhibit symptoms of a mental illness.

"Funding, early intervention, helping people to understand and identify those who have problems, that can make a difference, that can matter," said Curtis VanderWaal, chairman and professor of social work at Andrews and a board member at Riverwood Center in Benton Township, Berrien County's mental health provider. "Ultimately, that would be a good thing for our society."

But it's not going to stop the shooting, they said.

"Will this help reduce violence? No," said Harvey Burnett, an assistant professor of psychology at Andrews and a Buchanan policeman. "We still have the guns out there, we're leaving the guns out on the street. We're still combatting a level of violence that is acceptable in the United States."

That tolerance is fueled by violent video games, movies and TV shows, Burnett said.

The odds

Burnett agreed with his colleagues that violent crime is infrequently committed by the mentally ill. Only 3 to 5 percent of violent crimes are committed by a person with a mental illness. People with no mental disorder who abuse alcohol or drugs are nearly seven times as likely as those without substance abuse to exhibit violent behavior.

Studies show that most mental illnesses first occur in a person's teens or early 20s, making early detection and treatment important. But fewer than half of the young people experiencing these problems are getting treatment.

Even with mental health screenings, predicting the next shooting spree is like trying to guess the location of a lightning strike.

"It's virtually impossible to predict ahead of time who will be violent," VanderWaal said. "There are a lot of angry people out there, and a lot of angry people have access to guns, but actually very few who act on their anger. ... But while we cannot predict (who will become violent) early intervention can reduce the potential pool of problem makers."

Having access to guns can increase the risk of suicide, by making the means readily available for what is typically an impulsive act, VanderWaal said.

According to the New England Journal of Medicine, among people who made near-lethal suicide attempts, 24 percent took fewer than five minutes to make the decision to try to kill themselves, and 70 percent took less than an hour.

Not only are people with a mental illness more of a danger to themselves than others, they also are at greater risk for being the victim of a violent crime.

According to U.S. Bureau of Justice statistics, more than one quarter of persons with a severe mental illness had been victims of a violent crime in the past year, a rate more than 11 times higher than the general population.

Substance abuse

McBride said alcohol and drug abuse is a big contributing factor to violent behavior, as it affects judgment and impulse control.

A 1997 survey by the U.S. Department of Justice found that more than half of state and federal prison inmates who were doing time for murder reported that they were under the influence of alcohol or drugs when they committed their offense. The majority had used guns in their crimes. Substance abuse also is a factor in the majority of domestic violence deaths.

Burnett said that while substance abuse plays a large role in one-on-one violence, it is usually not involved in mass shootings, which usually require planning by a person who is not chemically impaired.

Paranoid public

Despite this evidence, the fear of people with mental illness persists.

A 1999 U.S. Surgeon General's report stated that 61 percent of Americans believed that people with schizophrenia were likely to be dangerous to others. A 1996 study reported that 38 percent of Americans were unwilling to be friends with someone with a mental illness, and 68 percent did not want someone with depression marrying into their families.

Stereotypes often are perpetuated by the media. The National Mental Health Association found that characters portrayed as being mentally ill were frequently depicted as being violent, and few stories focused on recovery.

Statements made by National Rifle Association Executive Vice President Wayne LaPierre calling people with mental illness "monsters" and "lunatics" further adds to the stigma, and could keep people from seeking treatment or helping those who need it, McBride said.

Allen Edlefson, chief executive officer of Riverwood Center, is concerned that the negative perceptions about mental illness will convince people that nothing can be done to combat it.

"Mental illness is treatable," Edlefson said. "It may take a few cycles, but it can be done."

Prevention pays

Edlefson is supportive of the call for mental health first aid training, something Riverwood as been offering the community.

While employers provide such training as CPR, statistics show that someone is more likely to encounter a co-worker experiencing depression than a heart attack.

The mental health first aid training provides information on how to recognize these problems, how to respond and where to refer someone for help.

While better educating the public on mental health issues would be a plus, there is a link in the safety net that has been weakened. Funding cuts means those who recognize they have an illness have fewer places to turn, VanderWaal said.

Most funding for mental health treatment comes through Medicaid, and is directed at those with the most persistent and chronic mental illnesses. And even that money is being threatened.

In the past four years, 30 states have cut their funding for mental health treatment, VanderWaal said. "At that point, you're not taking out what people would consider fat, you're digging into the bone."

Schools have cut the number of psychologists and social workers, VanderWaal said.

The funding shortage is a decades-long trend that started when patient treatment shifted from state institutions to community mental health centers, McBride said. The problem was that the programs were not well-funded, and compliance with treatment was left to patients who were left on their own, he said.

As a result, many regressed and ended up homeless, and prisons and jails became the de facto treatment centers for mental illness.
and substance abuse, McBride said. "The only bond issues that pass are for prisons."

Having access to treatment can be critical, Edlefson said. There is a large no-show rate for those who have to wait longer than 14 days to enter treatment.

Lakeland Regional Medical Center has a unit for people with mental illness, but there is no residential treatment facility in Berrien County.

Obama's recommendations include completing requirements for private health insurance to cover mental health services, and making sure that Medicaid clients receive quality mental health coverage.

"The promise is there. There is hope on the horizon" that parity in mental health treatment will be achieved, VanderWaal said. "There is a feeling among those in the mental health field that we've crossed an important barrier. But the reality is not there yet."

Michiana Adventist Forum Presents: Creation in Scripture by Dr. Herold Weisswill

Saturday, Feb. 9
3:30 p.m., Garber Amphitheater Chan Shun Hall

Dr. Herold Weisswill be discussing the recent book Creation In Scripture. This book surveys what the Bible writers say about Creation throughout the Old and New Testaments. It argues that it is important to understand the entirety of the Biblical evidence on creation. It examines Creation in the Wisdom Literature, The Psalms, Romans, the Corinthian Correspondence, Colossians, Hebrews and the Apocalypse as well as in Genesis.

Dr. Weiss encourages us to read the book beforehand. It is available in paperback from Amazon and in electronic form for the Nook and the Kindle.

A native of Montevideo educated in Argentina and in the United States, Dr. Weiss is professor emeritus of religious studies at Saint Mary’s College in Notre Dame, Indiana. For many years he was also an affiliate professor of New Testament in the Hispanic program of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary. During the 1960’s he was on the faculty of the SDA Theological Seminary at Andrews University. Currently he is responsible for the Spanish language section of the Spectrum website. He lives in Berrien Springs, Michigan, where he is an active member of the Berrien Springs Spanish SDA Church. Weiss is author of Paul of Tarsus: His Gospel and Life; A Day of Gladness:The Sabbath Among Jews and Christians in Antiquity; Cross-Cultural Paul: Journeys to Others, Journeys to Ourselves; and Finding My Way in Christianity: Recollections of a Journey.
