Subject: AUAGENDA: Andrews Agenda: Introducing Gourmet To Go

Photo of the Week: Dining Services Introduces Gourmet To Go For a limited time, Dining Services will be offering family-style meals that contain a delicious entree coupled with the perfect side item, salad with dressing, and a dessert or bread. Gourmet To Go can be ordered weekly until Wednesdays at noon for pick up on Friday afternoon. One take-out meal is designed to feed a group of 4 and is $24.99. We will be sending a weekly email, each Friday morning detailing menus, ordering information and pick-up time and location. Email us if you would like to be put on the Friday morning email list for Gourmet To Go. Visit our website for more information about this new program.

Faculty/Staff Invited to Awards Banquet | 49104

Please join your Andrews family in celebrating the talents and dedication of our friends and colleagues, and the community we call home.

Sunday, March 3
6 p.m.
Howard Performing Arts Center

In addition to the presentation of the University’s most prestigious awards, enjoy a lighthearted look at our community in an all-new, radio show-like production of 49104—The Next Best Place, featuring our own very talented writers, actors and producers.

To further highlight 49104, our menu for the evening will feature local specialties presented creatively by our own Dining Services.

Dining Services Introduces Gourmet To Go

For a limited time, Dining Services will be offering family-style meals that contain a delicious entrée coupled with the perfect side item, salad with dressing, and a dessert or bread. Gourmet To-Go can be ordered weekly until Wednesdays at noon for pick up on Friday afternoon. One take-out meal is designed to feed a group of 4 and is $24.99. We will be sending a weekly email, each Friday morning detailing menus, ordering information and pick-up time and location.

Please email us if you would like to be put on the Friday morning email list for Gourmet To-Go. You can visit our website for more information about this new program.
AHealthyU Presents a Nutrition Cook Off

Friday, March 1
12:30 p.m., March Hall, Room 319

Do you have a particular dish you are known for or simply love to prepare? Have you ever dreamed of hosting your own cooking show? Well here is your chance! A healthy U is hosting the First Nutrition Cook Off on campus. The event will start March 1 at 12:30 p.m. with a presentation by Chef Linda Brinegar on ways to Revamp Your Favorite Dishes in Marsh Hall, Room 319. Food prep will begin at 1pm in Marsh Hall, Room 300 with taste testing and judging to follow at 1:30pm. A winner in each of the categories will be announced by 2 p.m. This event will be catered so please RSVP by February 26 if you wish to attend. Click below for full details.

Bicycles for Bible Workers
Come along for a Ride! Want to participate in our Study Tour to Cuba? This Spring break, a group of students sponsored by the Master of Divinity program will travel to Cuba to lead out in 5 evangelistic meetings.

How about giving the "gift/tool of a lifetime" to a Cuban Bible worker? Here's how:

- If you attend PMC, you can write in the tithe envelope and in the subject line of your check: "Bikes for Cuba."
- Drop a check at the Master of Divinity office in the Seminary.
- Contact Fernando Ortiz for more information ortizl@andrews.edu.

On behalf of the 30 Bible workers who will receive bicycles, thank you!

Andrews Student Feedback Needed for NSSE Survey
Dear Students,
This year, Andrews University is participating in the National Survey of Student Engagement (NSSE). The NSSE is an confidential survey for freshmen and seniors. It is used by hundreds of colleges and universities across U.S. and Canada (621 to be exact) to measure two important aspects of college quality:

- The amount of time and effort students put into their studies and other educational activities.
- How the University uses its resources and organizes the curriculum to facilitate student learning.

Your participation in this survey is very important! Results from this survey will be used to plan improvements in the educational experience at Andrews University. The first invitation to take part in the survey should arrive in your inbox on Tuesday, February 5.

Please take the time to thoughtfully complete the survey. For more information about the NSSE, see nsse.iub.edu.

Do you have a particular dish you are known for or simply love to prepare? Have you ever dreamed of hosting your own cooking show? Well here is your chance! A healthy U is hosting the first “Nutrition Cook-Off” on campus. Here’s how it’s going to work...

1) Find one recipe that you cook really well and submit it by February 20 at 5pm to ahealthyu@andrews.edu. Three categories are available (appetizers, entrees, and desserts)

2) Recipes will then be considered based on health value (see below for criteria outline); three finalists will then be chosen in each category and announced on February 25.

3) On March 1, the nine finalists will then prepare their dishes to be judged by both a panel of guest judges and fellow faculty and staff.

4) The category winners will be announced that evening by 6pm

The event will start March 1 at 12:30pm with a presentation by Chef Linda Brinegar on ways to “Revamp Your Favorite Dishes” in Marsh Hall, Room 319. Food prep will begin at 1pm in Marsh Hall, Room 300 with taste testing and judging to follow at 1:30pm. A winner in each of the categories will be announced by 2pm. This event will be catered so please RSVP by February 26 if you wish to attend.

Events Planned for National Eating Disorders Awareness Week

To promote a healthy body image and increase awareness about eating disorders on our community, the Andrews University Counseling & Testing Center will be sponsoring several events during the National Eating Disorders Awareness Week (February 24 – March 2, 2013).

Tuesday, February 26
11:30 a.m., Buller Hall, Room 149
Leilani Langdon and LaKeSha Morris will be offering the educational workshop "Self-esteem, Body-image, and Eating Disorders" during the Tuesday Choices program. Come and learn about the link between the way you think and feel about your body, your mood, and eating habits. Find out where you can find help for yourself or for your loved one. This program is open to students.

The Counseling and Testing Center is also sponsoring an art exhibition titled "Celebrating Every Body." Students are invited to submit works of art that reflect this theme. A panel of counselors will select pieces to be exhibited at the Campus Center during our Awareness Event and will award prices to the three pieces that best represent this theme (Amazon.com gift cards for $75, $50, and $25, respectively). Visit andrews.edu/ctcenter for more information about how to submit your work of art.

Thursday, Feb. 28
12-3 p.m., Counseling & Testing Center
Faculty, staff, and students are welcomed to participate during our Awareness Event on Thursday, February 28, 2013, from 12-3 p.m. We’ll have a “Message Board” where the AU community can post messages of acceptance and encouragement. The selected works of art reflecting the theme “Celebrating Every Body” will be on display, including the award winners. Also, the Counseling & Testing Center will have information about eating disorders and will be offering in-person screenings.

The eating disorder screening consists of a brief, anonymous questionnaire designed to provide students with insight into symptoms they might be experiencing and receive helpful treatment and referral information, if necessary. In addition to in-person screenings during the Awareness Event, students can access an anonymous screening online at http://www.mentalhealthscreening.org/screening/andrews

Come, participate, and help in promoting a healthy body image and greater awareness of eating disorders in our community. For more information, contact Luis G. C. Ortega, LPC, NCC at cluis@andrews.edu.

The One Project | Chicago 2013

Over 700 gathered in a suburb of Chicago, Ill., Feb. 11 & 12, for the One Project. This gathering is designed with one simple focus: Jesus. All. The One Project seeks—through gatherings, conversations, web-based content, and Christ-focused publications—to stimulate preaching, worship, and adoration of Jesus within and through the Seventh-day Adventist Church. It is operated by Andrews University’s Office of Campus Ministries and their chaplains. During the two-day gathering, a handful of the church’s most dynamic leaders and speakers shared heart-felt Biblically-based reflections, each one thoroughly infused with a focus on Jesus. Following each reflection, there was an opportunity to “Recalibrate” through dialog and group discussion. Learn more about the One Project and future gatherings at the1project.org. NAD Newspoints: PASS Aims to Enhance Safety at Adventist Institutions

Berrien Springs, Mich.—As national debates intensify over how to effectively safeguard our educational institutions against future acts of violence, Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS) is preparing for their third annual meeting, to be held in July 2013. PASS was organized in 2010 to bring together safety and security professionals serving at Seventh-day Adventist schools, hospitals and other institutions to discuss best practices, provide community resources, and maintain an Adventist network of security personal for the distribution of important information.

To date, there has been active involvement in PASS from campus security directors of Oakwood Adventist University, Southern Adventist University, Andrews University and Loma Linda University, and the directors of security at ADRA, the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, and the Review & Herald Publishing Association.

HeraldPalladium.com: Five questions with ... Charles Reid

Charles Reid has sung on some of opera's biggest stages, including a nine-season stint with New York's Metropolitan Opera, but Sunday's performance at Andrews University's Howard Performing Arts Center is of particular note in his accomplished singing career. Read the full story here.

Adventist.org: Network, standards growing for Adventist security professionals

When Lewis Eakins learned about the mass shooting at Virginia Tech in 2006, he wanted to increase the level of preparedness for his campus safety officers at Oakwood University.

Eakins, the director of Public Safety at the Adventist university in Huntsville, Alabama, embarked upon a state procedure that allows a private university to create its own police department. The move, he says, has enhanced training and now allows several of his 15 officers to carry a firearm.

The Herald-Palladium: Fighting a stereotype

Area experts are skeptical new mental health measures will reduce gun violence, though they welcome President Obama's proposals to prevent, detect and treat mental illness.

The skepticism is rooted in the fact that the majority of violent crimes are not committed by people with a mental illness, including bipolar disorders, chronic depression and schizophrenia.

"It's important for the public to realize that mental illness does not equate with dangerous violence," said Duane McBride, chairman of the Department of Behavioral Sciences at Andrews University and chairman of the Berrien County Board of Health.

2-13-13 PASS Aims to Enhance Safety at Adventist Institutions

Security - a timely issue

Berrien Springs, Mich.—As national debates intensify over how to effectively safeguard our educational institutions against future acts of violence, Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS) is preparing for their third annual meeting, to be held in July 2013. PASS was organized in 2010 to bring together safety and security professionals serving at Seventh-day Adventist schools, hospitals and other institutions to discuss best practices, provide community resources, and maintain an Adventist network of security personal for the distribution of important information.

To date, there has been active involvement in PASS from campus security directors of Oakwood Adventist University, Southern Adventist University, Andrews University and Loma Linda University, and the directors of security at ADRA, the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, and the Review & Herald Publishing Association.

The Establishment of PASS
For years, there had been discussion of the need to establish an organization that would connect the various safety and security departments at Adventist institutions. Although there was an acknowledged need for communication between the different entities, attempts to form a professional network had never moved beyond preliminary stages.

When Dale Hodges became the director of Campus Safety at Andrews University, he was concerned about the negative perceptions that had developed between students and campus safety. The term “veggie cop,” a slang term commonly used in Adventist settings to refer to safety or security professionals, was new to Hodges. As a retired homicide detective, Hodges wanted to repair any negative perceptions while building the professionalism of his office.

“It was my desire to establish standards of service and levels of professionalism that had not been seen before,” he says, hoping such improvements would eliminate those negative perceptions. “When we raise the standards, everybody wins.”

Hodges felt the best way to raise these standards, both at Andrews and other Adventist institutions, was to develop an organization to provide models and lists of best practices for safety and security offices in the Adventist community. During the summer of 2010, Hodges contacted his counterparts at various Adventist colleges and institutions to see if they were interested in forming such an organization. The response was overwhelming. Some departments committed to attending the meetings and those that could not stated their support, Meeting dates and an agenda were set and the rest fell into place. Hodges learned that many of his counterparts were also retired law enforcement or active and committed to attending the meetings.

One goal is the development of a webpage under the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. This website will allow PASS to provide its members with resources of working policies and guidelines for emergency management that include requirements published by the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Education.

Other goals included the development of a peer review team to evaluate the security services of institutions at their request and suggest possible improvements; the collection of a database for persons or things of interest; and recommendations for Clery Act compliance and adherence to NFPA, OSHA and EPA regulations and guidelines within our institutions.

The 2013 PASS Conference is scheduled for July 15–16, 2013, at Loma Linda University. For information on attending, contact Dale Hodges, current PASS president and director of the Andrews University Office of Campus Safety, at dbhodges@andrews.edu.

Take the Poll
BERRIEN SPRINGS - Charles Reid has sung on some of opera's biggest stages, including a nine-season stint with New York's Metropolitan Opera, but Sunday's performance at Andrews University's Howard Performing Arts Center is of particular note in his accomplished singing career.

That's because Reid, who is in his first year as director of vocal studies at Andrews University, will be giving his first faculty recital.

"I've been interested in teaching, but the big unknown question was what was it going to be like," says Reid, who is an associate professor and artist-in-residence at Andrews. "But I have to say I really love it. The students have been great."

On Sunday, Reid, who will be accompanied by pianist and assistant professor of theory and music, Trina Thompson, and joined by his wife, mezzo-soprano Julie Reid, will present a program devoted to the works of English composer Benjamin Britten.

Q I know you've spent the bulk of your recent career performing German and Italian opera throughout Europe - so where are you from originally?

A Well, I was born in Texas, but I've lived in a bunch of different places. I've lived a lot in the D.C. area and New York City area and over in Germany for about six years. We moved back to the states and were living in Pennsylvania when this opportunity came up. So this is my first year at Andrews.

Q This is your first teaching job, so what was it about the position that appealed to you?

A I have three kids and a wife. I found - especially after we moved back to the states - that almost all of my work took me to Europe. It's life on the road as an opera singer, and the traveling demands of a performer were taking me away from my family too often. So I needed to make a change. I always thought teaching was something I might enjoy. And as artist-in-residence at Andrews, I feel I enjoy the best of two worlds - getting to go out and perform and being home often to enjoy my family.

Q How did you discover your penchant for opera?

A It was an accidental way. I was intending to become a recording engineer. I wanted to be the guy running a recording studio or mic and sound at a rock concert. In my senior year of high school I started to sing and then I got a little scholarship to sing in the choir at a small school in Houston called Houston Baptist University. I ended up taking it but still not really having a vision for singing. Once I started to look at what it might mean to be a classical singer - because that wasn't my music at that point - one of the first composers I found that really captured me was Benjamin Britten. It's partially because he wrote for tenor and I'm a tenor. He wrote in English so that was accessible. I fell in love with his music, but I wasn't mature enough to sing it yet.

Q Of course now you are, because your very first faculty recital is an all-Britten program, correct?

A It's all this music that I've always wanted to sing but never had the chance. It is an all-Britten concert; however, the first three pieces ("We Sing to Him," "Sound the Trumpet" and "Evening Hymn") are by (Henry) Purcell. Britten loved Purcell and he transcribed a bunch of his songs. The accompaniment part in Purcell's time wouldn't have been realized. It would have just had chord numbers and whoever was playing the harpsichord would make up some pattern. Britten, however, created a version of those songs for piano. So we're doing three of those.

We're doing two of his church canticles, which is like opera for church. The first one ("My Beloved is Mine and I am His") is based on Song of Solomon, and the second ("Abraham and Isaac") is based on Abraham and Isaac. In the second half, we're doing a cycle called "Winter Words" (Op. 52), which is set to a selection of poems from Thomas Hardy, and also a selection of Britten's folk song arrangements. He loved setting the natural folk music of the British Isles. Even though it's all Britten, it covers so many different musical styles and languages and colors. It's a very eclectic performance even though it's just one composer.

Q In addition to Trina Thompson on piano, I noticed a Julie Reid on the program. How did you get her to join you? And what are you hoping to get across during your first faculty recital?

A "Abraham and Isaac" has two characters so she's joining me and playing the role of Isaac. We've been performing together forever and a day. She taught for many years in the state of New Jersey and she actually started teaching some students adjunct at (Andrews) University. That was not my decision, by the way. That was the music faculty decision, but we're happy to have her (laughing).

As far as the recital, most people may not be familiar with Benjamin Britten. Some of his operas have been performed more than others, but for most people I think his music is largely unknown. And yet I think people will come away with the opinion that it is delightful, very accessible and hopefully very meaningful.

When Lewis Eakins learned about the mass shooting at Virginia Tech in 2006, he wanted to increase the level of preparedness for his campus safety officers at Oakwood University.

Eakins, the director of Public Safety at the Adventist university in Huntsville, Alabama, embarked upon a state procedure that allows a private university to create its own police department. The move, he says, has enhanced training and now allows several of his 15 officers to carry a firearm.

"We don't have crimes to justify having a police agency, but we wanted to make sure we have the highest level of training so we can deal with any threat that comes on this campus," said Eakins, a former assistant police chief who holds a master's degree in security management.

With recent mass shootings in Connecticut and Colorado, and increasingly similar incidents worldwide, Adventist security professionals say the issue of safety officers carrying firearms should be up for discussion. Though it's a controversial issue in a denomination that has historically promoted non-combatancy and conscientious objection, top security directors at numerous Adventist institutions are urging a greater level of preparedness for responding to potential threats.

Moreover, they want the denomination to know that they are a resource for church leaders – there is a cadre of security professionals within the church who can offer experience, consulting and staffing to support public safety departments at campuses and institutions.

“Administrators don’t need to go to outside consultants. Many of us have 20 to 30 years of experience in law enforcement. We’re the missionaries who know this business,” said Paul Muniz, a former police chief and director of security for the Adventist Development and Relief Agency.

Muniz is a board member and chaplain of the Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS), a group that will hold its third meeting from July 15–16 at Loma Linda University in California.

PASS launched in 2010 when nine Adventist security professionals met at Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Michigan. After the group’s first meeting, PASS again met in 2012 at Southern Adventist University in Collegedale, Tennessee, with roughly 15 in attendance.

PASS president Dale Hodges first organized the group as a networking opportunity for campus safety officials to share best practices and encourage standards for hiring staff.

Campus safety now more than ever includes working closely with information technology professionals to implementing tracking systems and immediate incident notifications. Officers also discuss methods of policing and stopping unidentified individuals. Despite advancing security practices, many security directors admittedly still trade tips on the usual struggles of trying to enforce parking policies and clearing a building of students before closing it for the night.

Hodges, a former homicide detective who serves as director of the Office of Campus Safety at Andrews University, echoed other PASS members saying that standards for hiring security directors has improved over the years. No longer are a uniform and a badge given to someone without experience and training.

“Historically in the Adventist community they hadn’t picked out professionals in these jobs. I think in today’s day and age the Adventist community as a whole is recognizing that and trying to make up for it.”

This year’s PASS meeting is being organized by Suzy Douma, director of security at Loma Linda University. She was a police officer for 22 years and holds a master’s degree in public administration.

“Over the years the qualifications have improved. We’ve become more strict in hiring,” Douma said. She oversees a staff of more than 50, including three K-9 units.

Douma said she feels strong support from her university administration, but admits it’s sometimes still a challenge helping people understand the role of a campus safety officer. “We’re the ones who have to take control when others haven’t been able to get control,” she said.

Now that mass shootings and appropriate responses are in the public spotlight, she said the key issue is the “timeliness” of the response. “Problems can be so emergent that you can’t wait.”

At Oakwood, the first three officers upon a scene would be required to engage a shooter. At Loma Linda, campus safety staff are trained to respond to shooting incidents by helping people evacuate, finding shelter and setting up a perimeter to maintain safety until armed officers arrive. Currently, however, "We are not prepared, trained or armed to mitigate the danger of shooter," Douma said.

Dale Hodges is director of campus security at Andrews University. He is also the founder and president of the Professional Adventists for Safety and Security. (Photo courtesy Andrews University)

“It’s not my decision, but I think our university is open to that kind of discussion,” Douma said.

“I’ve been trying to have this discussion for years,” said Jim Vines, director of security at the Adventist Church’s world headquarters in Silver Spring, Maryland. He said five officers on staff are licensed to carry a concealed firearm.

“The Bible says the world is just going to get worse. We want to be proactive and be prepared,” Vines said.

The board members of PASS all work in the denomination’s North American Division, but they represent organizations of the world church. Oakwood, Andrews, Loma Linda and ADRA are all institutions directly affiliated with the Adventist Church’s world headquarters in Silver Spring, Maryland.

Muniz, ADRA’s security director, says the issue comes down to how to best protect workers. He sets up protocols for humanitarian workers entering new areas worldwide. He holds a master’s of divinity degree from Andrews and says the story of Nehemiah is an apt example of the current debate.

“The workers doing God’s work of rebuilding the wall each had their swords on them just in case. They weren’t looking to kill people, but they were ready to address the enemy,” Muniz said.

“That’s more valid today than ever before. We need protection for our people who are involved in the upbringing of our children.”

For more information about PASS and its upcoming meeting, contact Dale Hodges either through email at dbhodges@andrews.edu, or by calling his office at 1–269–471–3321.

Bicycles for Bible Workers

Come along for a Ride! Want to participate in our Study Tour to Cuba? This Spring break, a group of students sponsored by the Master of Divinity program will travel to Cuba to lead out in 5 evangelistic meetings.

Here is how you can participate:

Bible workers in Cuba go from place to place on foot. With long distances to cover and hot weather, it makes it difficult to reach their Bible interests. To this end, we are raising funds to buy 30 bicycles for these Bible workers. Each bicycle costs about $150. Here is your opportunity (or team up with a friend) to sponsor a bicycle. We already have commitments for 13 bikes!

How about giving the “gift/tool of a lifetime” to a Cuban Bible worker? Here’s how:

- If you attend PMC, you can write in the tithe envelope and in the subject line of your check: “Bikes for Cuba.”
- Drop a check at the Master of Divinity office in the Seminary.
- Contact Fernando Ortiz for more information ortizl@andrews.edu.

On behalf of the 30 Bible workers who will receive bicycles, thank you!

Brand New Apple iPad Leather Case

I have two brand new Apple iPad brown leather cases available. It is made from High Quality Eco Friendly Synthetic Leather specifically for the Apple iPad. These cases help keep your iPad scratch free and protects against shock, damage, dust and particles. It comes with an easy slip-in design to ensure that your iPad goes in and stays in place for protection and also an auto-securing strong magnetic flap for the best combination of security and ease of use.

There is also a metal kickstand to prop up the iPad, so you can watch movies or read your ebooks comfortably.

I'm asking $10.00 for each. Please email ramdatts@gmail.com or call 269 815 8004.

Thank you
