1098T Information

Just in time for tax season, Andrews University has launched an informational page regarding Form 1098T. Every January, the University mails form 1098T to students who were charged qualified tuition and fees in the prior calendar year. Often though, students and parents have questions about what's on the form, as well as what's not on the form. In an effort to answer some of the common questions, the Office of Student Financial Services and the Office of Financial Records have teamed up to create a 1098T FAQ page. The direct URL is: www.andrews.edu/future/financing/sidebar/1098T_info.html.

If you’re looking for your 1098T, you can view and print a copy at: www.andrews.edu/go/my1098T .

One form is for the Steele Scholarship, which is for women who have served as cross-cultural missionaries at least 4 years and who are working on a graduate degree in any of the university schools. The other form is a general application for women working on a graduate degree in any of the university schools.

General application forms will be considered for several different named scholarships (which have their own criteria—e.g., must be: a Seminary student, a School of Education in educational or counseling psychology... student, or a student working on a music degree), as well as the more general WSC Advisory Scholarship and Honored Women Scholarship. To give applicants the best chance to receive an award, the committee will determine for which scholarship an application fits best. Questions may be sent to greigs@andrews.edu.

Costume Assistants Needed for Passion Play

Costuming is a fun place where the actors come alive in costume. Assistants are needed to attend orientation, help at fittings, and assist the day(s) of Passion Play.

Orientation: All assistants must attend one orientation before helping at the fittings. It is extremely busy at the fittings and there is no time for instruction. At orientation instruction is given on where the different types of costumes are in the room. It is demonstrated on how to fit and reserve the costumes for the actors, and how to wear the different parts of the various types of costumes. Orientation is March 25, 5:30-6:30 and Sunday, March 31, 11 a.m. before the fitting.

Fittings: At the fittings, the costume assistant helps actors choose and reserve a costume for their character, assists them in trying it on, makes sure all costume pieces are there, and that it fits the actor well. Fittings are March 26 and 27, 5:15 – 7:15 pm, March 31, 12-4 pm, April 2 and 3, 5:15-7:15 pm.

Day(s) of Passion Play: Assist actors in getting dressed, tying belts, helping with headpieces and making sure actors look their best for their part. Assistants may take breaks during the day, join the potluck, and may go through and experience the Passion Play. Assistants especially help in putting away costumes at the end of the day(s).

If you know of someone who could take this role please contact Betty Whitehead.

Bicycles for Bible Workers

Come along for a Ride! Want to participate in our Study Tour to Cuba? This Spring break, a group of students sponsored by the Master of Divinity program will travel to Cuba to lead out in 5 evangelistic meetings.

Here is how you can participate:

Bible workers in Cuba go from place to place on foot. With long distances to cover and hot weather, it makes it difficult to reach their Bible interests. To this end, we are raising funds to buy 30 bicycles for these Bible workers. Each bicycle costs about $150. Here is your opportunity (or team up with a friend) to sponsor a bicycle. We already have commitments for 13 bikes!

How about giving the "gift/tool of a lifetime" to a Cuban Bible worker? Here’s how:

- If you attend PMC, you can write in the tithe envelope and in the subject line of your check: “Bikes for Cuba.”
- Drop a check at the Master of Divinity office in the Seminary.

Events Planned for National Eating Disorders Awareness Week

To promote a healthy body image and increase awareness about eating disorders on our community, the Andrews University Counseling & Testing Center will be sponsoring several events during the National Eating Disorders Awareness Week (February 24 – March 2, 2013).

Tuesday, February 26
11:30 a.m., Buller Hall, Room 149
Leilani Langdon and LaKeSha Morris will be offering the educational workshop "Self-esteem, Body-image, and Eating Disorders" during the Tuesday Choices program. Come and learn about the link between the way you think and feel about your body, your mood, and eating habits. Find out where you can find help for yourself or for your loved one. This program is open to students.

The Counseling and Testing Center is also sponsoring an art exhibition titled "Celebrating Every Body." Students are invited to submit works of art that reflect this theme. A panel of counselors will select pieces to be exhibited at the Campus Center during our Awareness Event and will award prices to the three pieces that best represent this theme (Amazon.com gift cards for $75, $50, and $25, respectively). Visit andrews.edu/ctcenter for more information about how to submit your work of art.

Thursday, Feb. 28
12-3 p.m., Counseling & Testing Center
Faculty, staff, and students are welcomed to participate during our Awareness Event on Thursday, February 28, 2013, from 12-3 p.m. We’ll have a "Message Board" where the AU community can post messages of acceptance and encouragement. The selected works of art reflecting the theme "Celebrating Every Body" will be on display, including the award winners. Also, the Counseling & Testing Center will have information about eating disorders and will be offering in-person screenings.

The eating disorder screening consists of a brief, anonymous questionnaire designed to provide students with insight into symptoms they might be experiencing and receive helpful treatment and referral information, if necessary. In addition to in-person screenings during the Awareness Event, students can access an anonymous screening online at http://www.mentalhealthscreening.org/screening/andrews

Come, participate, and help in promoting a healthy body image and greater awareness of eating disorders in our community. For more information, contact Luis G. C. Ortega, LPC, NCC at cluis@andrews.edu.
The One Project | Chicago 2013

Over 700 gathered in a suburb of Chicago, Ill., Feb. 11 & 12, for the One Project. This gathering is designed with one simple focus: Jesus. All. The One Project seeks—through gatherings, conversations, web-based content, and Christ-focused publications—to stimulate preaching, worship, and adoration of Jesus within and through the Seventh-day Adventist Church. It is supported by Andrews University's Office of Campus Ministries and the University Chaplain. During the two-day gathering, a handful of the church's most dynamic leaders and speakers shared heart-felt Biblically-based reflections, each one thoroughly infused with a focus on Jesus. Following each reflection, there was an opportunity to “Recalibrate” through dialog and group discussion. Learn more about the One Project and future gatherings at the1project.org. Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS) Established

As national debates intensify over how to effectively safeguard our educational institutions against future acts of violence, Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS) is preparing for their third annual meeting, to be held in July 2013. PASS was organized in 2010 to bring together safety and security professionals serving at Seventh-day Adventist schools, hospitals and other institutions to discuss best practices, provide community resources, and maintain an Adventist network of security personal for the distribution of important information.

Introducing Gourmet To-Go

Date: February 20, 2013

Phone: 269-471-3161

For a limited time, Andrews University's Office of Dining Services will be offering Gourmet To-Go, a scratch-made, family-style meal available for pick-up Friday afternoons. Designed to be a weekend meal solution, the cost per meal is $24.99. Each meal is designed to feed four. It includes a delicious vegetarian entrée coupled with a side item, salad with dressing, and a dessert or bread.

"We are located within a large Seventh-day Adventist community where we share the same Sabbath values. Gourmet To-Go is a great option to help families prepare adequately for the Sabbath," says Mark Daniels, general manager of Andrews University's Dining Services. "Shopping, preparing, cooking, and cleaning often fall by the wayside during a busy week. We can help by doing the work for you." Daniels also suggests Gourmet To-Go as a great solution for potlucks, shut-ins, gifting a meal to a low-income family, or entertaining guests.

The concept of Gourmet To-Go is nothing new to Bon Appétit Restaurants. "Several of my colleagues have this program running already and it’s widely popular," says Daniels. "We hope the same will be true here at Andrews and in Berrien Springs."

More than just a convenient solution for busy families, Gourmet To-Go aims to further share the value of healthy, made-from-scratch food with the wider Berrien Springs community. The FDA lists Berrien Springs as a "food desert," meaning there are limited fresh, healthy meal options available to the community. "This is a way for Andrews University, with the help of Bon Appétit Management Company, to be a part of the solution," says Daniels. "We make our food from scratch, using socially responsible practices, with health and nutrition in mind."

Each Friday, those who have signed up for the mailing list will receive a preview of the following week's Gourmet To-Go menu. Orders will be taken Monday–Wednesday at noon. Pick-up is Friday between noon and 5 p.m. at Dining Services, located in the Campus Center. Each meal will come with heating instructions and disposable containers, making heating and cleanup quick and easy. The weekly menu is set and there are no substitutions or alterations to the meal.

To sign up for the mailing list, call 269-471-3161 or email ds@andrews.edu.
The STEM Division in the College of Arts & Sciences, comprised of the Department of Biology, Department of Chemistry & Biochemistry, Department of Mathematics and Department of Physics, now has Rachel Boothby serving as the first STEM division enrollment coordinator. STEM, which stands for science, technology, engineering and mathematics, is a growing initiative at Andrews. STEM offers a unique experience for students integrating the scholastic resources and practices of larger state universities with an environment that fosters spiritual development.

What is STEM?

In 2006, the College of Arts & Sciences established four divisions: Humanities, Social Sciences, STEM, and Health Professions. In 2012, the Health Professions division became the School of Health Professions.

STEM enables students to not only thrive in the professional STEM community, but contribute to their church community as well. STEM majors reflect the diversity present at Andrews University, breaking stereotypes about women and minorities in STEM fields.

In order to further serve students, the STEM Division looks to societal and church trends to project the needs of the STEM fields. An increase in STEM enrollment and retention will work towards the goal set by the 2012 President’s Council of Advisors on Science and Technology, which states that American universities need to produce an extra one million college graduates in STEM fields. Perhaps because of the rigor of the curriculum, retention of STEM majors nationwide is too low, with less than 40% of incoming STEM-oriented students actually graduating with a STEM degree. The PCAST* report notes that retaining 50% of STEM majors rather than 40% will produce an extra three-quarters of a million STEM graduates in ten years.

The Andrews University Department of Engineering & Computer Science is a key focus area in the STEM division for growth according to both Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, and Shandelle Henson, professor of mathematics and chair of both the Department of Mathematics and the STEM Division.

"Engineering and computer science majors take many other STEM courses as cognates and often take second majors in other STEM fields. If one STEM department becomes stronger, we all do," says Henson.

Specificity in marketing strategies and intentional recruitment has necessitated the brand new position of STEM enrollment coordinator. In late 2012, Rachel Boothby was hired to fill this position. Funding for an enrollment coordinator is provided by Physics Enterprises, an auxiliary entity of Andrews University. It designs and manufactures unique and affordable teaching equipment for classroom demonstrations and science labs suitable for all levels of education, as well as providing employment for University students.

STEM Enrollment Coordinator: Rachel Boothby

As the first STEM enrollment coordinator, Rachel Boothby will work with the STEM department chairs to increase awareness of STEM programs, attract students who are interested in the STEM programs, and build a healthy STEM community overall. She will also collaborate with the Division of Enrollment Management for specialty recruitment efforts and development of outreach programs. One such program is SciFest, planned for fall 2013. It will allow high school students to engage in STEM-related activities.

Boothby studied marketing at Andrews University and received a Bachelor of Business Administration in 2010. She continues her involvement in Andrews intramural sports and plays violin in the University Symphony Orchestra. As an Andrews alumnus, Boothby brings specific strengths to the STEM enrollment coordinator position.

Henson is excited about the qualities Boothby brings to STEM. “She understands and appreciates the unique strengths and potentials of this University and she is helping us to capitalize on them in the STEM fields.”

As STEM looks forward to growth and improvement, the experience of the student is paramount. Increasing numbers, upgrading lab equipment, and improving learning space are all steps to the ultimate goal of providing a holistic learning environment that activates an excitement for discovery.

The Herald-Palladium: Fighting a stereotype

Area experts are skeptical new mental health measures will reduce gun violence, though they welcome President Obama’s proposals to prevent, detect and treat mental illness.

The skepticism is rooted in the fact that the majority of violent crimes are not committed by people with a mental illness, including bipolar disorders, chronic depression and schizophrenia.

"It’s important for the public to realize that mental illness does not equate with dangerous violence,” said Duane McBride, chairman of the Department of Behavioral Sciences at Andrews University and chairman of the Berrien County Board of Health. Read full story.

2-13-13 PASS Aims to Enhance Safety at Adventist Institutions

Security - a timely issue

Berrien Springs, Mich.—As national debates intensify over how to effectively safeguard our educational institutions against future acts of violence, Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS) is preparing for their third annual meeting, to be held in July 2013. PASS was organized in 2010 to bring together safety and security professionals serving at Seventh-day Adventist schools, hospitals and other institutions to discuss best practices, provide community resources, and maintain an Adventist network of security personal for the distribution of important information.

To date, there has been active involvement in PASS from campus security directors of Oakwood Adventist University, Southern Adventist University, Andrews University and Loma Linda University, and the directors of security at ADRA, the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, and the Review & Herald Publishing Association.

The Establishment of PASS

For years, there had been discussion of the need to establish an organization that would connect the various safety and security departments at Adventist institutions. Although there was an acknowledged need for communication between the different entities, attempts to form a professional network had never moved beyond preliminary stages.

When Dale Hodges became the director of Campus Safety at Andrews University, he was concerned about the negative perceptions that had developed between students and campus safety. The term “veggie cop,” a slang term commonly used in Adventist settings to refer to safety or security professionals, was new to Hodges. As a retired homicide detective, Hodges wanted to repair any negative perceptions while building the professionalism of his office.

"It was my desire to establish standards of service and levels of professionalism that had not been seen before," he says, hoping such improvements would eliminate those negative perceptions. "When we raise the standards, everybody wins."

Hodges felt the best way to raise these standards, both at Andrews and other Adventist institutions, was to develop an organization to provide models and lists of best practices for safety and security offices in the Adventist community. During the summer of 2010, Hodges contacted his counterparts at various Adventist colleges and institutions to see whether there was interest in forming such an organization. Five questions with ... Charles Reid

By JEREMY D. BONFIGLIO - H-P Features Writer | Posted: Thursday, February 14, 2013 5:00 am

BERRIEN SPRINGS - Charles Reid has sung on some of opera's biggest stages, including a nine-season stint with New York's Metropolitan Opera, but Sunday's performance at Andrews University's Howard Performing Arts Center is of particular note in his accomplished singing career.

That's because Reid, who is in his first year as director of vocal studies at Andrews University, will be giving his first faculty recital.

"I've been interested in teaching, but the big unknown question was what was it going to be like," says Reid, who is an associate professor and artist-in-residence at Andrews. "But I have to say I really love it. The students have been great."

On Sunday, Reid, who will be accompanied by pianist and assistant professor of theory and music, Trina Thompson, and joined by his wife, mezzo-soprano Julie Reid, will present a program devoted to the works of English composer Benjamin Britten.

Q I know you've spent the bulk of your recent career performing German and Italian opera throughout Europe - so where are you from originally?

A Well, I was born in Texas, but I've lived in a bunch of different places. I've lived a lot in the D.C. area and New York City area and over in Germany for about six years. We moved back to the states and were living in Pennsylvania when this opportunity came up. So this is my first year at Andrews.

Q This is your first teaching job, so what was it about the position that appealed to you?

A I have three kids and a wife. I found - especially after we moved back to the states - that almost all of my work took me to Europe. It's life on the road as an opera singer, and the traveling demands of a performer were taking me away from my family too often. So I needed to make a change. I always thought teaching was something I might enjoy. And as artist-in-residence at Andrews, I feel I enjoy the best of two worlds - getting to go out and perform and being home often to enjoy my family.

Q How did you discover your penchant for opera?

A It was an accidental way. I was intending to become a recording engineer. I wanted to be the guy running a recording studio or mic and sound at a rock concert. In my senior year of high school I started to sing and then I got a little scholarship to sing in the choir at a small school in Houston called Houston Baptist University. I ended up taking it but still not really having a vision for singing. Once I started to look at what it might mean to be a classical singer - because that wasn't my music at that point - one of the first composers I found that really captured me was Benjamin Britten. It's partially because he wrote for tenor and I'm a tenor. He wrote in English so that was accessible. I fell in love with his music, but I wasn't mature enough to sing it yet.

Q Of course now you are, because your very first faculty recital is an all-Britten program, correct?

A It's all this music that I've always wanted to sing but never had the chance. It is an all-Britten concert; however, the first three pieces ("We Sing to Him," "Sound the Trumpet" and "Evening Hymn") are by (Henry) Purcell. Britten loved Purcell and he transcribed a bunch of his songs. The accompaniment part in Purcell's time wouldn't have been realized. It would have just had chord numbers and whoever was playing the harpsichord would make up some pattern. Britten, however, created a version of those songs for piano. So we're doing three of those.

We're doing two of his church canticles, which is like opera for church. The first one ("My Beloved is Mine and I am His") is based on Song of Solomon, and the second ("Abraham and Isaac") is based on Abraham and Isaac. In the second half, we're doing a cycle called "Winter Words" (Op. 52), which is set to a selection of poems from Thomas Hardy, and also a selection of Britten's folk song arrangements. He loved setting the natural folk music of the British Isles. Even though it's all Britten, it covers so many different musical styles and languages and colors. It's a very eclectic performance even though it's just one composer.

Q In addition to Trina Thompson on piano, I noticed a Julie Reid on the program. How did you get her to join you? And what are you hoping to get across during your first faculty recital?

A "Abraham and Isaac" has two characters so she's joining me and playing the role of Isaac. We've been performing together forever and a day. She taught for many years in the state of New Jersey and she actually started teaching some students adjunct at (Andrews) University. That was not my decision, by the way. That was the music faculty decision, but we're happy to have her (laughing).

As far as the recital, most people may not be familiar with Benjamin Britten. Some of his operas have been performed more than others, but for most people I think his music is largely unknown. And yet I think people will come away with the opinion that it is delightful, very accessible and hopefully very meaningful.

Network, standards growing for Adventist security professionals – Adventist News Network

Feb. 12, 2013 Silver Spring, Maryland, United States

Ansel Oliver/ANN

When Lewis Eakins learned about the mass shooting at Virginia Tech in 2006, he wanted to increase the level of preparedness for his campus safety officers at Oakwood University.

Eakins, the director of Public Safety at the Adventist university in Huntsville, Alabama, embarked upon a state procedure that allows a private university to create its own police department. The move, he says, has enhanced training and now allows several of his 15 officers to carry a firearm.

Oakwood University Security Director Lewis Eakins is interviewed by the local news affiliates on February 4 about an upcoming faculty and staff training series titled "Active Shooter Survival Training." The campus security team became a full-fledged police department in 2011. [photo: Tim Allston]

“We don’t have crimes to justify having a police agency, but we wanted to make sure we have the highest level of training so we can deal with any threat that comes on this campus,” said Eakins, a former assistant police chief who holds a master's degree in security management.

With recent mass shootings in Connecticut and Colorado, and increasingly similar incidents worldwide, Adventist security professionals say the issue of safety officers carrying firearms should be up for discussion. Though it’s a controversial issue in a denomination that has historically promoted non-combatancy and conscientious objection, top security directors at numerous Adventist institutions are urging a greater level of preparedness for responding to potential threats.

Moreover, they want the denomination to know that they are a resource for church leaders – there is a cadre of security professionals within the church who can offer experience, consulting and staffing to support public safety departments at campuses and institutions.

“Administrators don’t need to go to outside consultants. Many of us have 20 to 30 years of experience in law enforcement. We’re the missionaries who know this business,” said Paul Muniz, a former police chief and director of security for the Adventist Development and Relief Agency.

Muniz is a board member and chaplain of the Professional Adventists for Safety and Security (PASS), a group that will hold its third meeting from July 15–16 at Loma Linda University in California.

PASS launched in 2010 when nine Adventist security professionals met at Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Michigan. After the group’s first meeting, PASS again met in 2012 at Southern Adventist University in Collegedale, Tennessee, with roughly 15 in attendance.

PASS president Dale Hodges first organized the group as a networking opportunity for campus safety officials to share best practices and encourage standards for hiring staff.

Campus safety now more than ever includes working closely with information technology professionals to implementing tracking systems and immediate incident notifications. Officers also discuss methods of policing and stopping unidentified individuals. Despite advancing security practices, many security directors admittedly still trade tips on the usual struggles of trying to enforce parking policies and clearing a building of students before closing it for the night.

Hodges, a former homicide detective who serves as director of the Office of Campus Safety at Andrews University, echoed other PASS members saying that standards for hiring security directors has improved over the years. No longer are a uniform and a badge given to someone without experience and training.

“Historically in the Adventist community they hadn’t picked out professionals in these jobs. I think in today’s day and age the Adventist community as a whole is recognizing that and trying to make up for it.”

This year’s PASS meeting is being organized by Suzy Douma, director of security at Loma Linda University. She was a police officer for 22 years and holds a master’s degree in public administration.

“Over the years the qualifications have improved. We’ve become more strict in hiring,” Douma said. She oversees a staff of more than 50, including three K-9 units.

Douma said she feels strong support from her university administration, but admits it’s sometimes still a challenge helping people understand the role of a campus safety officer. “We’re the ones who have to take control when others haven’t been able to get control,” she said.

Now that mass shootings and appropriate responses are in the public spotlight, she said the key issue is the “timeliness” of the response. “Problems can be so emergent that you can’t wait.”

At Oakwood, the first three officers upon a scene would be required to engage a shooter. At Loma Linda, campus safety staff are trained to respond to shooting incidents by helping people evacuate, finding shelter and setting up a perimeter to maintain safety until armed officers arrive. Currently, however, "We are not prepared, trained or armed to mitigate the danger of shooter," Douma said.

“It’s not my decision, but I think our university is open to that kind of discussion,” Douma said.

“I’ve been trying to have this discussion for years,” said Jim Vines, director of security at the Adventist Church’s world headquarters in Silver Spring, Maryland. He said five officers on staff are licensed to carry a concealed firearm.

“The Bible says the world is just going to get worse. We want to be proactive and be prepared,” Vines said.

The board members of PASS all work in the denomination’s North American Division, but they represent organizations of the world church. Oakwood, Andrews, Loma Linda and ADRA are all institutions directly affiliated with the Adventist Church’s world headquarters in Silver Spring, Maryland.

Muniz, ADRA’s security director, says the issue comes down to how to best protect workers. He sets up protocols for humanitarian workers entering new areas worldwide. He holds a master’s of divinity degree from Andrews and says the story of Nehemiah is an apt example of the current debate.

“The workers doing God’s work of rebuilding the wall each had their swords on them just in case. They weren’t looking to kill people, but they were ready to address the enemy,” Muniz said.

“That’s more valid today than ever before. We need protection for our people who are involved in the upbringing of our children.”

For more information about PASS and its upcoming meeting, contact Dale Hodges either through email at dbhodges@andrews.edu, or by calling his office at 1–269–471–3321.

Berrien Springs Camera Club Meeting

Wednesday, March 6
7 p.m., Berrien Springs Community Library

The monthly meeting of the Berrien Springs Camera Club will offer a hands-on, creative program for Wednesday, Mar. 6, at 7 p.m. at its usual venue, the Berrien Springs Community Library at Cass and Union.

Club member Suzanne Anderson, who has taught elementary school for many years in Berrien Springs, will lead members in each making a calendar, using the online program Mixbook. After demonstrating the program, she will guide the members through the process. Anyone who wishes to make a calendar should bring their own computer, plus a selection of photos they might like to use for it. These could be seasonal, to fit with each month; topical, such as their favorite lighthouse pictures; maybe family-oriented, with pictures of reunions, birthdays, weddings, etc.; favorite landscape shots; or anything else they would like to view over the year. They could be used as gifts or kept for personal use.

If anyone does not have a laptop to bring, one of the members is planning to bring a couple extras for their use. They should just bring their pictures on a USB drive.

The company has also given Anderson a coupon code for a 30% discount on any calendar ordered. Members may not have time to complete their calendars during the evening, but they will have a good start and can finish them at home.

All are welcome to attend. Refreshments will be served.

Bicycles for Bible Workers

UPDATE
We are thrilled to see many people joining the BIKES FOR CUBA project. We are happy to report that out of the 50 bikes we need, we have cash or pledges for 20! Praise the Lord. But we still have 30 to go. If you want to participate in giving the "tool of a lifetime" to a Bible worker or pastor, mark your PMC envelope as "Bikes for Cuba" or bring your check to the Master of Divinity Office. On behalf of all the Bible workers and Pastors who will receive bicycles, thank you!

Original Announcement
Come along for a Ride! Want to participate in our Study Tour to Cuba? This Spring break, a group of students sponsored by the Master of Divinity program will travel to Cuba to lead out in 5 evangelistic meetings.

Here is how you can participate:
Bible workers in Cuba go from place to place on foot. With long distances to cover and hot weather, it makes it difficult to reach their Bible interests. To this end, we are raising funds to buy 30 bicycles for these Bible workers. Each bicycle costs about $150. Here is your opportunity (or team up with a friend) to sponsor a bicycle. We already have commitments for 13 bikes!

How about giving the "gift/tool of a lifetime" to a Cuban Bible worker? Here's how:

- If you attend PMC, you can write in the tithe envelope and in the subject line of your check: "Bikes for Cuba."
- Drop a check at the Master of Divinity office in the Seminary.
- Contact Fernando Ortiz for more information ortizl@andrews.edu.

On behalf of the 30 Bible workers who will receive bicycles, thank you!
