Spring Commencement One of the Largest Ever

One of the largest graduating classes in recent history—484 undergraduate students and 436 graduate students—received their degrees in the spring 2013 Andrews University Commencement services held Sunday, May 5, 2013. Three services were held to accommodate the large number of graduates. Two honorary doctorates were also awarded, as well as two J.N. Andrews Medallions. For the complete story go to Recent News on the Andrews website.
Two engineering students, Robert Jewett, a senior studying mechanical engineering, and Atniel Quetz, who graduated in May with a BS in engineering, won honorable mention in the student category of the 2013 International Aluminum Extrusion Design Competition for their design, "Custom Contour Furniture."

Jewett and Quetz’s design was one of more than 90 student entries, ranging from plans for a solar-powered outdoor bulletin board to a park bench that squeegees itself to sustainable refugee housing. The Andrews design duo created the plans for customizable furniture created out of a series of aluminum parts.

Jewett and Quetz’s design utilizes principles of extrusion, forcing heated metal out through a custom-shaped opening (like squeezing toothpaste out of a tube) that allows multiple copies of a part to be created.

The duo first heard of aluminum extrusion during an engineering class taught by Boon-Chai Ng, professor of engineering. Their classmates Andrew Roderick and Brian Booth had recently won a 3D redesign challenge, and their success inspired Jewett and Quetz to try their hand at competing too. Their first design was just a chair, but then they thought, “Why stop at the chair?”

Their submission to the contest ended up being a system of 12 interlocking aluminum parts that can be combined into a number of different furniture shapes, including several different tables and chairs. Because aluminum is rust-resistant and also aesthetically pleasing, the furniture can be used indoors or outdoors. Quetz and Jewett planned and designed the project in their spare hours last semester—“it was more or less a non-curricular activity, although the school was behind us the whole way,” says Jewett.

This May, 13 students’ designs were recognized with prizes of varying levels; Jewett and Quetz were awarded honorable mention and $250 for their “well-thought-out functionality of extrusion to create a system of parts that can be assembled into a variety of purposes,” said judge David Asher of Bonnell Aluminum in Newnan, Ga.

Jewett particularly enjoyed the experience and he hopes to do computer-aided design (CAD) for a company in the future. "There’s nothing more exciting than taking a concept and turning it into reality through the use of software," he says. "As a future mechanical engineer I would like to work in the automotive field or other field dealing with outdoor recreation, and I particularly enjoy designing."

The annual competition for students and professionals is sponsored by the Extrusion Technology for Aluminum Profiles Foundation (ET Foundation) and the Aluminum Extruders Council. The goal of the competition is “to promote the understanding and use of extruded aluminum profiles, as well as to highlight innovations and recognize excellence in aluminum extrusion design,” says the site’s website. Ledesma Wins Award for JAE Issue

Phone: 269-471-3348

The Journal of Adventist Education recently won the Distinguished Achievement Award for Whole Publication Design for its theme issue “Principalship and Administration” (Oct/Nov 2012) from the Association of Educational Publishers (AEP) on June 4. Janet Ledesma, associate professor of leadership and Educational Leadership coordinator in the Andrews University Department of Leadership, guest edited and coordinated this issue.

Ledesma spent most of the spring semester of 2012 assembling articles, arranging for peer review, conducting research, and doing editorial duties, including writing a guest editorial. Ledesma worked closely with Journal of Adventist Education editor Beverly Robinson-Rumble and leadership doctoral student Evelyn Savory in constructing the issue.

"I am extremely grateful for Dr. Ledesma’s assistance in bringing this project to fruition," says Robinson-Rumble, "as it had been stalled for several years and I had nearly given up on ever getting the issue into print." Robinson and Ledesma submitted the issue to both the Association of Educational Publishers and the Associated Church Press.

At the 2013 AEP Awards Gala in Washington D.C., Robinson-Rumble accepted the award, accompanied by Lisa Beardsley-Hardy, General Conference Director of Education, and Harry Knox, JAE art director. The Journal of Adventist Education also placed as a finalist in three categories: Learned Article, Whole Publication Design, and Feature Article.

The Journal of Adventist Education has won AEP awards on multiple occasions, including Distinguished Achievement Awards for separate articles, feature articles and entire publications.

The Journal of Adventist Education, begun in 1978, is a resource for Christian K–12 teachers, university professors and administrators of all levels. The journal publishes eight issues a year, and includes practical and theoretical articles on praxis, pedagogy and integrating faith in the classroom.

Adventist Review: Walking the Newsbeat
By Debbie Michel
I sat in my office overlooking the Rockefeller Plaza ice rink and was overcome with a mixture of anxiety and relief. Anxiety, because I had made the decision to leave my job at NBC News without any other prospects in sight; relief, in that the daily grind chronicling the latest devastation had reached its end.

It was the culmination of 11 years chasing leads showcasing the worst of humanity: the Heaven's Gate mass suicide; Washington, D.C., sniper shootings; JonBenét Ramsey murder; September 11; and stories labeled "nature's wrath," such as Hurricane Katrina. Read full story.

Guyanese academic gets top post at major U.S. university

June 1, 2013 By admin

A leading Guyanese-born academician has been promoted to a top position at a major university in the United States.

Dr Leon C Wilson, formerly the dean of Alabama State University (ASU) College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences, has been promoted to ASU’s interim provost and vice president for Academic Affairs, according to ASU’s president, Dr William H Harris.

Wilson had served as dean of ASU’s College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences since 2011.

Founded in 1867, ASU is a historically black university located in Montgomery, Ala. “Dr Wilson is a very seasoned academic administrator and is highly prepared to help lead the university during this time,” Dr Harris said. “We look forward to his tenure in this position.”

Wilson, who was born in West Coast Berbice, Guyana, told Caribbean Life that “any career elevation of any sort is never a singular effort.

“I am ever grateful to those who have helped along the way. From the time my grade school teacher (in Guyana, Gwendoline Reynolds) convinced my parents to ‘send me away’ from the countryside in search of better educational opportunities in New Amsterdam (Guyana), the climb has been steady,” he said.

“The drive for excellence is influenced by my convictions that maximising one’s gifts is a spiritual responsibility,” he added. “But accomplishments for me have always been a call to service.”

Dr Wilson said academic leadership, in the context of shrinking budgets and greater demands for excellence, is daunting, adding, however, that ASU is “ready for the challenge”.

“I would not have accepted this responsibility if I were not convinced that we have the will and capacity to make a difference,” he said.

“I will be deliberate about elevating the rich academic and professional legacies of ASU as the renewed catalyst for our future directions, and we will be a player that is imperative for educational change in this country,” he added.

In making the announcement, Dr Harris also praised the work of interim associate provost and vice president for Academic Affairs, Dr Sharron Herron-Williams, who “has helped to provide administrative leadership and support to the mission of the provost’s office for several months”.

Dr Wilson received his Master of Arts (MA) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph D) in sociology from the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, in 1986 and 1989, respectively.

He majored in social psychology, with a minor in social organisation, and had significant advanced training in statistics. He also holds an MA in religion and counselling from Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Michigan, and a bachelor of theology from Caribbean Union College (now University of the Southern Caribbean), Trinidad.

Before moving to East Carolina University as professor and chair of the Department of Sociology, Dr Wilson spent almost 20 years at Wayne State University in Detroit, Michigan, in the ranks of assistant professor to professor, and as department chair for...
Dr Wilson has taught courses in advanced statistical application, social psychology, family and applied sociology. He said he has either chaired or participated in more than 70 PhD dissertations and master's thesis projects, stating that he is very proud of his mentoring history. His research applies statistical models to understand the relationship of structural, interactional and socioeconomic factors to social, psychological, health and mental health outcomes in families, especially adolescents. His publications, which reflect these interests, appear in national and international journals. Dr Wilson has conducted some of the larger survey research projects on families and adolescents in Guyana and Trinidad and Tobago. The most recent are Adolescent Health and Protective Factors in Guyana (2012), Media Habits in Guyana (2007-2008) and Youth Trends in Trinidad and Tobago (2009).

Dr Wilson regularly contributes to and presents at U.S. national and international conferences, and is the recipient of several research, teaching, mentoring and civic awards. “I take this opportunity to congratulate my mentor and lifelong friend, Dr Leon Wilson, on his promotion,” Dr Janice Emanuel-Bunn, a Guyanese-born professor at the University of Phoenix told Caribbean Life. “He has always distinguished himself as a dedicated administrator who goes beyond the call of duty and a teacher who understands the needs of students, and motivates them to achieve academic excellence,” she added. Dr Emanuel-Bunn said Dr Wilson’s work in Guyana, the Caribbean and around the world has “surely made a difference”. (Caribbeanlifenews.com)

Bike Ride for a Good Cause
Sunday, June 23
Berrien County Cancer Service
7301 Red Arrow Hwy.
Stevensville, Mich.

Registration will take place from 7-11 a.m. and the ride will continue until 2 p.m.

The Berrien County Cancer Service Bike Ride is one of the major fundraisers for the Berrien County Cancer Service. All proceeds from this year's bike ride will benefit the Berrien County Cancer Service, Inc. The Cancer Service provides free nursing care for residents of Berrien County who have a cancer diagnosis. Your registration fee and/or contribution will help us continue our work on behalf of cancer patients and their families.

About the 2013 Berrien County Cancer Service Bike Ride

All of our routes were changed for our 2011 event and were enjoyed by everyone. We have kept those same routes for 2013. Experienced cyclists will enjoy going east of BCCS on long, straight, country roads with minimal traffic. You will ride through the rolling hills, farmlands and fruit orchards of Eau Claire and Berrien Springs.

The 25- and 15-mile routes are family oriented with flat terrain and some rolling hills with the Sag at scenic Hess Lake Park in Baroda.

Our goal is to have all routes Safe-Smooth-Scenic. We're confident you'll find your route so nice that you'll want to ride it twice!

Visit http://bccancerservice.org/PDF/Regist%20form%202013.pdf to obtain a registration form.

2004 Toyota Corolla S - $5,000

I'm selling my 2004 Toyota Corolla S. It has a spoiler on the trunk. The car runs great. Very good on gas. It has 109,xxx miles.
Black interior, silver exterior.
It has some body issues, which does not affect the frame of the car.
It will eventually need a new tensioner for the fan belt. As a result, it makes some noise when the engine's cold. Once it warms up, the noise eventually fades. The mechanic says it is not an immediate detriment and it will not leave you stranded any time soon.
The car also needs a new AC compressor (or if you can rebuild it).
I am the original owner. Clean title.
KBB suggests that it is worth more than what I am asking so jump on this deal FAST.
I'm asking $5,000 O.B.O. All serious offers will be considered. Interested? Call CJ at 770-728-2480.
