Celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month

Celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month at Andrews University

National Hispanic Heritage Month (September 15 to October 15) recognizes the contributions made and the important presence of Hispanic and Latino Americans to the United States and celebrates the group's heritage and culture. Hispanics have had a profound and positive influence on our country through their strong commitment to family, faith, hard work and service. They have enhanced and shaped our national character with centuries-old traditions that reflect the multiethnic and multicultural customs of their community.

Hispanic Heritage Month, whose roots go back to 1968, begins each year on September 15, the anniversary of independence of five Latin American countries: Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua. Mexico, Chile and Belize also celebrate their independence days during this period and Columbus Day (Día de la Raza) is October 12. The term Hispanic or Latino, refers to Puerto Rican, South or Central American, or other Spanish culture or origin regardless of race.

Enjoy the following events at Andrews University:

University Vespers—Celebrate Hispanic Heritage, Friday, Sept. 20, 7:30 p.m., Pioneer Memorial Church

¡Arriba! ¡Abajo! Fiesta—Thursday, Sept. 26, Mutch Recreation Center, Campus Center Basement. Come join the party and enjoy Mexican cuisine provided by Dining Services (One-time meal charge of $7. The Terrace Café will be closed for the Spirit of Philanthropy Homecoming Dinner.) There will also be Mexican games and music sponsored by the AUSA.

Puerto Rican and Caribbean Cuisine—Thursday, Oct. 3, 5–7 p.m., Terrace Café
Fiesta Night—Saturday, Oct. 5, 8 p.m., location TBD. An evening of fun and games sponsored by Adelante.

Latino Americans, Part 1—Tuesday, Oct. 8, 7 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall. PBS documentary chronicling the rich and varied history and experiences of Latinos, who have helped shape North America over the last 500-plus years and have become, with more than 50 million people, the largest minority group in the U.S. Discussion afterward led by Kathryn Silva-Banks. Co-curricular credit available.

Costa Rican and Central American Cuisine—Thursday, Oct. 10, 5–7 p.m., Terrace Café

Latino Americans, Part 2—Tuesday, Oct. 15, 7 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall. PBS documentary chronicling the rich and varied history and experiences of Latinos. Discussion afterward led by Kathryn Silva-Banks. Co-curricular credit available.

Brazilian and South American Cuisine—Thursday, Oct. 17, 5–7 p.m., Terrace Café

Latin Night Concert—Saturday, Oct. 19, 8 p.m., Newbold Auditorium, Buller Hall. Sponsored by Adelante, featuring students from Latin countries performing traditional and contemporary Hispanic music.

Latino Americans, Part 3—Tuesday, Oct. 22, 7 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall. PBS documentary chronicling the rich and varied history and experiences of Latinos. Discussion afterward led by Kathryn Silva-Banks. Co-curricular credit available.

Flag Raising & Parade

We invite YOU to be a part of TWO Andrews traditions – The Alumni Parade and the International Flag-raising
Whether you are simply proud of your international roots, have served as a missionary outside the U.S. or are currently part of our international campus family, we invite you to participate in both of these meaningful Alumni Homecoming events on Friday, September 27. You're welcome and encouraged to bring your friends and family to participate. You can carry your flag and walk in the Alumni Parade, which will organize at 4:30 p.m. in the PMC parking lot. The flag raising is immediately following, with flag-raisers organizing between the library and PMC at 6 p.m.

Please keep in mind that flag-bearers do not need to be natives of the specific country. Also, if you have international dress, you are invited to wear it for both occasions. Let us know by emailing your name and country you’d like to represent to Rebecca May at rmay@andrews.edu, or you can call Integrated Marketing & Communication at 269-471-3345.

Be in touch soon because the flags will run out fast! We will provide further details upon receipt of your message.

Adventist Forum Presents: The Religious Roots of the First Amendment

Adventist Forum presents "The Religious Roots of the First Amendment: Dissenting Protestants and the Separation of Church and State." The presentation is by Nicholas P. Miller, Associate Professor of Church History and Director of the International Religious Liberty Institute at Andrews University. Come to Chan Shun Hall on the campus of Andrews University Saturday, September 28, 2013 at 3:30 p.m. and join in the discussion.

Nicholas P. Miller is a lawyer (JD, Columbia University) who has worked on a number of cases before the U.S. Supreme Court. He is currently an associate professor of church history at Andrews University Seminary, where he also directs the International Religious Liberty Institute.
His book "The Religious Roots of the First Amendment: Dissenting Protestants and the Separation of Church and State" was published by Oxford University Press in May 2012. Miller argues that traditional understandings of the genesis of the separation of church and state rest on assumptions about 'Enlightenment' and the republican ethos of citizenship.

Professor Miller is also an editor of Homosexuality, Marriage, and the Church: Biblical, Counseling, and Religious Liberty Issues published by Andrews University Press.

Adventist Forum is open to the public. All are welcome. For information, contact Art Robertson at robertsa2@earthlink.net or call 471-7150.

Honduras Mission Trip

Deadline for the Honduras Mission Trip application is September 20.

On Thursday, December 12, our flight leave from South Bend at 6:35 a.m. and arrives in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, at around noon.

The return flight leaves Honduras at 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 23, and arrives in Atlanta then we transfer for our flight to South Bend, arriving at 9:29 p.m.

We also have a few tickets to and from Ohare Airport that link up with the group from Atlanta to Honduras and from Honduras back to Atlanta with the group then returning to Chicago.

It is possible to arrange a different final destination if needed but there is a $150 ticket charge after Dec. 13.

The children at the Hogar are already starting to talk about the team coming!

Revive Vespers
Join us this Friday for an evening of worship and study of the Bible with Daniel Ferraz, the pastor of the Kalamazoo Church! The title of the presentation is "Experiencing the Faith of Jesus". Did you know that Adventist Church has a special message of "keeping the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus" in these last times. Have you ever wonder what the "Faith of Jesus" really meant? Is it merely a "faith in Jesus" or is it the Jesus' faith, a faith which Jesus possessed while on this earth, the faith OF Jesus? Come to find out the answer and what that might mean for your spiritual life!

SPEAKER: Daniel Ferraz is a native from Portugal but he spent many years in England working as a missionary and a pastor. He is currently serving as a pastor in the SDA Kalamazoo Church, a congregation which has doubled since his arrival!

TIME: Friday, Sept 20 @ 7:30pm at the Biology Amphitheater, Science Complex, Andrews University
Sabbath, Sept 21 @ 9:45 at Fil-Am Michiana Church, Revive Sabbath School

The Joy of Research
AICER continues the Fall Symposia on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 5:30 p.m. in Bell Hall, Room 013, with a presentation entitled, "The Joy of Research."

Duane McBride, chair, Department of Behavioral Sciences, has had an extensive research career at Andrews University, publishing more than 100 articles in peer reviewed journals. He will share with the students why he has a passion for the discoveries of research, how it contributes to the advancement of one’s career and the reputation of our University, and even how to include your family in the success of your research. He will also discuss the barriers to research at Andrews, how to address those barriers and the hope he has for the future of research at Andrews University.

Everyone is invited.

Prayer Power Hour

Wanting to commune with others in prayer? Searching for a way to spiritually connect with fellow students?

Join Kevin Wilson, AUSA Religious Vice-President, and other AU students every weekday between 7AM-8AM for a spiritual start to the school day. Partake in prayer at the fireplace near the student life office in the student center.

In Isaiah 43:19, God promises that he will do a new thing for this campus and our lives. Let us seek him in prayer in order to make this a reality. Let this be our power hour.

Annual Harvest Run and Fitness Expo

Come participate with us in this 5k, 10k, and Fitness Expo!
Phonathon 2013

The annual Andrews Phonathon kicks off Monday, September 16! The Phonathon benefits the Fund for Andrews, which supports student scholarships, academic research opportunities and the heart of campus life.

Our student callers are excited to speak with our wonderful alumni about all the exciting things happening on campus!

This amazing team of students includes:

- Alidania Calderon
- Alysha Blackman
- Arleni Calderon (Supervisor)
- Ashley French
- Brittany Crawford
- Candace Neufville
- Chenelle Roberts
- Danielle Pilgrim
- Darren Smith (Supervisor)
- Francia Pierre
- Joyce Mathai
- Kristina Burke (Supervisor)
- Lillian-Marie Drew
- Lydia Levy
- Melissa Fatal
- Natalie Permaul
- Nolan Baker
- Rebecca Fortune
- Rose Pierre
- Tasha Philidor
- Travis Campbell
- Vivian Laughlin

If you see them in class or around campus, be sure to give them an encouraging word and show your support for the great job they're doing as ambassadors and fundraisers for the University.

Even though Andrews faculty and staff are not called during Phonathon, we'd still love for you to help make this year a success! You can do so by visiting:

Alan Mitchell, professor of music at Andrews University, has been awarded the 2013 Michiana Outstanding Music Educator Award by Quinlan & Fabish Music Company. The award recognizes excellence in the field of music education in the Michiana area.

Mitchell's name was placed in nomination by a peer and selected by a committee made up of previous award winners and the company's Blue Ribbon Selection committee.

"I feel especially honored to be recognized by my fellow public school music teachers in Southwest Michigan," says Mitchell.

Mitchell was the only recipient who teaches in higher education; the other six 2013 award winners were high school and middle school educators. A special awards presentation was held in Plymouth, Indiana, and included a luncheon and special guest speaker.

The Quinlan & Fabish awards have been presented annually since 1989 in the Chicago area and the Michiana awards began in 2010.
Student Interviewed in "Bahamas Weekly"

Bahamian artist and illustrator Jace McKinney began a new chapter in his career this year; he returned to the classroom to pursue studies in Theology at Andrews University in Michigan. Over the past few months, this experience has not merely enriched his spiritual life, but also informed his creative practice.

Jace was the 2012 winner of the prestigious Central Bank of The Bahamas Art Competition's open category under the theme 'Redefining the Landscape". He is currently preparing for his upcoming show 'Decoding Salvation' at the bank's gallery this September.

Bahamian artist and illustrator Jace McKinney began a new chapter in his career this year; he returned to the classroom to pursue studies in Theology at Andrews University in Michigan. Over the past few months, this experience has not merely enriched his spiritual life, but also informed his creative practice.

Jace was the 2012 winner of the prestigious Central Bank of The Bahamas Art Competition’s open category under the theme ‘Redefining the Landscape’. He is currently preparing for his upcoming show ‘Decoding Salvation’ at the bank’s gallery this September.

Jace and I discuss his seminary experience and how his studies and religious beliefs have informed his recent body of work.

When and how did you decide it was important for you to enroll in seminary?

Last year I had taken on several roles within my church. At times, when I felt it was too much, members and leaders in the ministry would reassure me that “This is God’s calling on your life”. I was a teacher, a deacon, youth leader and publisher. I think it was the fifth time that I was approached to serve in another area, that I decided serving in four different ministries was my limit. Although it proved to be challenging, as I look back now I see it as an invaluable experience, as God’s preparation ground for what he has in store for my future.

I imagine this was a decision that you battled with. What was the major deciding factor?
I feel like it was definitely a calling by God to go into ministry. I’ve had this feeling for years and could see my work as an artist also moving in this direction. I’ve always felt a call for my work to reflect God's existence in my life and experiences. My art has always been a testimony to what I believe and what I live by. This decision was more about getting to another plateau and not necessarily about becoming a pastor.

How did your friends, family, and peers in the art community respond to this decision?

That's funny. Early this year, I attended a few art show openings, whilst feeling a little unsure of my decision. I often said to myself “Am I actually doing this?” I remember having a conversation with John Beadle and he said, “So I hear you're taking up the cloth” and everyone else chiming in with ‘Reverend and Pastor’ and I couldn't help, but say woah, wait a minute, slow down, I'm not even there!

What have you learned most about yourself in your first semester in seminary?

I’ve learned that there was more of a back-story to my belief system and I gained a better understanding of the purpose God has in and for my life. More than learning, this experience has been about my relationship and personal journey with God. It is no longer just one part of my life, where I have to take time out of my schedule to study his word, but I’ve enjoyed having time that is solely devoted to focusing on the things of God.

I am a person who struggles with anxiety. I've evaluated how this has a certain affect on how I interpret things. I found myself addressing this more in my prayer life and realizing that we all have to surrender to something bigger than ourselves by allowing God to take care of problems like this. I’ve become more carefree and observant of my environment, with the realization that even though God’s presence can be seen in the big things, he also exists in the small things in our lives.

How do you balance theology and art now?

My studies take up most of my time so I haven’t been practicing much art over the past few months, but I find myself using my artistic skills to enable and enhance my learning experience. For one of my classes we had to learn the names and work of 40 people. I’m a visual learner and I needed to see the faces in order to remember each character, so I illustrated all 40 of them. During a conversation with a lecturer on taking notes it was interesting to learn from him that some students who doodle in class retain more information than those who actually take notes.

What future do you envision for yourself as an artist with a degree in Theology? Do you plan on practicing in both fields as separate entities or in unison?

A lot of people have already pegged me as being a preacher, but I’m a flexible person. I think the role I take on is heavily dependent on the project that I am engaged in. As a Christian existing in a world with people of other faiths, its all about interaction and sharing; this touches on the theme of my show Decoding Salvation. This recent body of work reflects on the human desire to be saved. It also touches on other salvific themes in relation to loss, struggle, celebration and transformation.

Do you see yourself committing full time to ministry in a church? Arts pastors typically oversee worship and creative arts ministries. Is this a role that you see yourself assuming in the future?

It's hard to say if I'll take on the role of an arts pastor in the future, but this type of ministry is always fun to play a role in, especially as it relates to youth ministry. Last year, I was able to organize a camp. One of my favorite parts of this experience was helping the kids make costumes, which they wore while reenacting biblical stories. It was an awesome experience to reach out to the kids in a way that facilitated their learning of biblical stories through art and interaction.

Do you think your studies will drastically change the direction of your creative work or your approach as an artist?

I am definitely seeing a change. One of the things I have been wrestling with as an artist is religious iconography, especially when looking at the Renaissance period. In this period, it is evident that a religious language exists within art. My work is definitely taking a different direction, but is gradually giving its own testimony in that conversation. I am not interested in using an iconic religious graphic language, because they are pretty concrete and a little closed off. When a person talks about their beliefs, they tend to use language that cannot be fully comprehended by others from different backgrounds and cultures. In the case of religion each faith has certain belief systems that are often attached through a specific language. It’s like saying “Oh we need a revival” and realizing the person is either not familiar with the term or associates it with an entirely different meaning. Ultimately, I want the direction of my work to be conscious of the universal perspective and how it can be translated to different types of people.

In 2012 when working on your painting entitled Creation based on the biblical story of the creation of the world you said ‘I love serving God through my talents’. Ultimately is this how you view your creative practice, as a form of Christian servant hood?
Yes, I would definitely agree that I am serving God through my talents. Gifts like this are definitely given to us to reveal God’s glory. Many including myself have deemed this gift as God’s calling on my life. I’ve been wondering about that and what a ‘calling’ is. I guess it’s simply just connecting with God and allowing him to direct you towards his purpose for your life. So by definition I would say it is a calling, but sometimes we do things in our lives for a number of years, and then we can be directed by God to go off to do something else. Moses is a perfect example of this. He was first a prince then he became a shepherd for about forty years and then he was called to be a prophet. I appreciate his journey, in that he wasn’t a prophet his entire life, but was called at the age of 80. Sometimes when looking at these biblical characters we observe their life story in such a short span of time, but by looking at their stories we see that it can take a while before God calls you to your ultimate purpose.

As an artist you embrace the titles illustrator and storyteller; Christians often refer to Jesus as the ‘Greatest storyteller’ who made the connection of earthly places with heavenly realities. Do you see your gift as an opportunity to visualize these stories?

Recently I’ve been pondering the idea of the gift as being the tool to spread the truth. There was once a time when I believed the truth was in the gift. Sometimes we confuse the two. When looking at Jesus and his ministry, he used miracles. It has been very interesting to take a deeper look at his life story and the fact that he often used miracles, but they weren’t something that people were supposed to find the truth in. The miracle was supposed to point to the words he was speaking. So miracles weren’t seen as something that his ministry was hung on; these miracles were merely being used as a vehicle to arrest his audience. This perspective is very similar to how I view my art. The art is almost secondary to whatever the truth or the message is I am trying to convey to my audience. It is a means to get people to open up and start the dialogue.

You talk about their being many stories in the Bible and the Bible being a book of stories in a sense. Are you interested in visualizing those already written stories or are you more interested in creating your own stories from modern reality?

I’d say a little of both. There have been many artists who have illustrated biblical stories throughout the ages. So many interpretations exist today. I would like to illustrate stories of the creation as well as stories relevant to modern society. When looking at international disasters, a few months ago there was a tsunami in China and a lot of people are wondering what’s going on in the world today. I think stories that are related to these events are relevant to give us an idea on reflection on where we are going as a world.

Looking through the history of art, it can be said that art that incorporates religion and spirituality are inextricably linked. Have you been inspired by artists or a period of art that incorporates both?

Recently I’ve been exploring Michelangelo, his life and his approach to art. He saw it as a gift from God and a gift to praise God. He definitely seemed to commune with God through his art. There came a point in his career where he earned a lot of money from the work he produced, but there was also a period where he was just committed to the work because it was his passion.
Like Michelangelo do you see the direction of your work over the years as your way of communicating with God?

Yes. There have been times I find myself feeling compelled to create an image. I’m not entirely sure why, but while doing research its meaning is revealed and I question whether if in fact it was a revelation from God. I feel that artists are very close to God and one of the roles often overlooked is God as creator. Appreciating God as the master artist is a part of him I am learning more about. In fact, this is a part of him that he actually calls us to remember, if you look in the scriptures, particularly in Genesis when God created the world.

Do you feel the subject of art in religion ignites controversy?

Oh Yea! Having been able to delve into its history recently through my Christian History class, has revealed this controversy. Just to see the influence of why we feel the way we do about certain religious beliefs… I think in today’s society there is an ear of relativism where people are like “Don’t step on my belief system and I won’t step on yours.” So typically whenever someone begins to talk about their beliefs others begin to interpret it as a sermon, attack, or chastisement. Christianity above all other religions by far has so many things tacked to it, having had a very bloody history of suppression and oppression of people all around the world. It was also a suppressed and oppressed religion itself, where it went through a period of persecutions and being torn apart. An irony that many are unaware is that Christians were actually considered atheists because they were seen by the Romans as non-believers of the Greek Gods. It’s interesting how the roles switch, where Christianity becomes this authoritative religion in the world and hence, the oppressor.

Your first solo exhibition in 2010, Theophany, focused on spirituality and the nature of dystopia and the industrial age. It included pieces like The Great Architect: Theatre of Oblivion and That’s the Spirit and has been followed by a stream of work like The Song of Moses, 2013 that follow a trend of expressing spirituality. What were you trying to convey through these works?

One of the things I see from living today is the extreme detachment from spiritualism and the awareness of other-worldly powers. I think if we observe simple things in nature and then ask the question of whether we’re alone in the universe you would receive a resounding “No”. We look straight past the things considered mundane, like the fact that we live on a planet that orbits around a ball of fire. That’s pretty mind blowing when you really ponder it. We take so many things like this for granted. The work that I create gives birth to conversations that ask us to take notice of the things that exist and are happening around us.

Your second solo exhibition Decoding Salvation continues the trend of exploring spirituality. Is it more likely to show a similar tone and style of work or can we expect something completely new?

When working on Theophany, it was a moment where I felt like God was really moving in my life. That show was about getting a vision from God like Moses did in the burning bush. As it relates to my current body of work, one of the things that is like an Achilles’ heel coming from a religious standpoint is that this type of art can come off as sermonizing. This is why I take a less direct approach where there is still a sense of openness allowing viewers to make their own impressions on the work. It is in our nature to make our own impressions for what we hear, see and read. So this new work is giving a testimony of my beliefs and faith with hope that my viewers use it as a starting point to ask deeper and more interesting questions.

What was your inspiration behind the theme Decoding Salvation?

Death moved close to home, having taken away a few loved ones recently, I began to realise that death was becoming more of a reality. It’s amazing how detached we can be when we hear news of natural disasters and respond with brief moments of sympathy. If a tsunami were to come to The Bahamas, there would be total chaos and possibly many declaring it ‘the end of the world’. People would be throwing their clothes off like “it’s over, Government shut down and KFC closed” (laughs). Sadly we only begin to reflect on these things when they touch us.

The roots of the show started from exploring the idea of the hero. One of the people who inspired my work in this area was writer and lecturer, Joseph Campbell, an all time favourite of mine. He shares many interesting concepts on the hero’s journey. As I look through history, saviors and heroes have always had the objective of serving; a purpose to save a society or offer an ideal of hope. Today it seems heroes are movie and basketball stars and have lost the ‘save me’ factor, and possess more of an awe factor, ‘look like me and be like me’. It begs the question ‘What use is a hero that can’t save you?’ An important aspect of my life is coming to understand ‘What is salvation and why we as humans need to be saved from death’. If it’s something that’s natural, why then does it still hurt when people we know die?

Other than Jesus, what other biblical heroes are you most drawn to?

I am interested in the heroes that give up their lives and huge opportunities for a greater cause. One of the greatest heroes I’ve recently looked at in the Bible was John the Baptist. The fact that he saw Christ dip into the water and saw the Holy Ghost come upon Christ, but he wasn’t there to witness any of the miracles, and was merely this voice crying out in the wilderness. He finds himself in prison locked away to be beheaded and has a dark moment of doubt. When you look at his story closely he wasn’t caught up with expectation that it was his season to be blessed or delivered from this situation. His story ended in his tragic death. It made me look at society today, realising people simply wish to be happy, but there is a cost and for heroes this price is great. We all really just wish to live happily ever after. John the Baptist for example could’ve not gone to prison, by remaining silent like many religious leaders today. No one wishes to give up their comfort to stand up for what they believe in. This is something that is strongly lacking in our world today.

Even Moses, who is one of my favourite characters in the Bible, was a hero. One of the things I found intriguing about his story is that he sinned because he struck the rock when God told him to speak to the rock. And by disobeying God he was barred from going to the Promised Land. Now Moses was a prophet whose whole life and ministry was about getting to the Promised Land. God was merciful enough to allow him to stand on the top of a mountain to see it. In the end, Moses had to humble himself and accept his fate of dying without entering the Holy Land. This was heart breaking for me.

What can be expected from Decoding Salvation?

I'm simply looking to convey a story to my audience; a great love story that illustrates that there is hope after this life and within it. I wish to give a testimony of my experiences of the ideas and interpretations of biblical stories and principles. The show will reflect on celebration. Something I think most people even those who are non-believers hope exists after death. Picture a Bahamian rake and scrap band and a birthday party in heaven. Instead of religious iconography, I have used symbols of festivity like party hats instead of crowns to give birth to the universal nature of the discussion.

In today's market, more employees are boosting their education and training and implementing other career-enhancing strategies to stay relevant and to get ahead.

Clara Lippert Glenn, president and CEO of The Oxford Princeton Programme, a company with a U.S. office in New Jersey that provides energy training courses, says that in the last decade the number of professionals in the energy industry seeking advanced education and training has increased significantly. In 2007, 2,922 professionals took Web-based training courses at The Oxford Princeton Programme. In 2012, that number increased to 12,968.

Bob Makarowski, technology instructor at Baruch College in New York, agrees that more workers feel the need to update their skills as their career progresses.

"In my 20 years of teaching at Baruch College, I have seen a shift in the students attending evening and weekend professional courses who are willing to pay out-of-pocket costs. Unlike the 1990’s when companies lavished employees with endless training perks, today’s students are self-funded and driven by the realization that increased competence equals continued employment," he says.

Below are some ways that workers are staying relevant in their career by keeping up with their changing workplace.

While seeking an advanced degree is one way for workers to boost their careers, certifications and discipline-specific training programs are more focused alternatives and often less costly, Makarowski says. For example, there are industry-standard certifications for desktop application development, stockbroker licensing, international trade, supply chain management, finance, real estate or bookkeeping, he says.

In his role, Richard Console Jr., managing partner of Console & Hollawell, a personal injury law firm in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, says he reads books about traditional marketing, Internet marketing, management and search engine optimization in addition to attending 12 to 15 hours in seminars of continuing legal education to expand his business skills.

"I attend seminars through the American Lawyer Academy, which I am a member of, where I meet with the heads of other law firms and their marketing departments to stay on the cutting edge," Console says. Since graduating law school, he's also expanded where he is licensed to practice law to enable him to bring in more clients.

Don't have time for continuing classroom education? Kevin Gazzara, senior partner of Magna Leadership Solutions LLC, in Phoenix, says when he found a mentor, it paid big dividends for him. The mentor, who he didn't identify, advised him to focus on expanding his skill set rather than on the next job opportunity. Eventually, it allowed him to move into a different career field with a work schedule that better fit his needs.
"A great mentor will help you stay focused on the long-term future. Otherwise, you are always caught up in the tactics, and you end up somewhere long term where you don't want to be," he says.

In addition to being mentored, becoming a mentor has its benefits. Gazzara says teaching what you've learned keeps you fresh and helps you realize how much you don't know as you try to educate others.

Who do you know?
Another way of putting your career on an upward trajectory is adding contacts in your field, says Caroline Ceniza-Levine, co-founder of SixFigureStart, a career coaching and consulting firm in New York. Such people might be helpful later in alerting you to job openings and recommending you, should you apply for a new job.

One way to increase your list of career contacts is to become a thought leader in your profession.

"Thought leaders publish, speak at conferences, and are active in professional associations and events. You want to be doing these things on a regular basis," Ceniza-Levine says.

Leslie Samuel, assistant professor of physical therapy and foundation science coordinator at Andrews University in Michigan, created a biology blog that is dedicated to making biology fun. Over time, he expanded his readership and started a website to teach biology that now gets 50,000 visitors per month.

To be sure, the website also has helped increase his exposure and reputation by helping him show what he's accomplished while distinguishing him from others.

"It's interesting to see that what you do online affects what you do offline, and there is a strong connection there. And, by doing something to stand out from the crowd, you are staying relevant," Samuel says.

Take time to network
Keeping up with your career can seem like a full-time job on top of your real full-time job. Dorie Clark, author of "Reinventing You: Define Your Brand, Imagine Your Future," says it's easy to stop attending outside networking events or making an effort to meet new people if you've been at a firm for a lengthy period of time. Eventually, most of the people you know are fellow workers at your company or in your industry.

Clark recommends building a network of trusted contacts who work at companies in a diverse range of fields who then could help you find your next career.

And traditional networking isn't the only way to advance your career. It is also helpful to develop your connections through social media networks, says Villanova University psychology professor Katina Sawyer. LinkedIn is a great tool for getting started, particularly for job seekers.

"You can always use your LinkedIn network to find a new job role. Being sure not to make assumptions about others and being open to different ways of doing things are the keys to collaborating and growing as an employee," Sawyer says.

Clark stresses the importance of social media for the 50-plus crowd. If you don't know what a hashtag is, it's time to find out.

"The online world has impacted almost every profession in some way, and if you're a worker over 50, there may be doubts about whether you're comfortable or familiar with these changes. Go out of your way to demonstrate your expertise with a robust LinkedIn profile, a blog or general familiarity with social tools," Clark says.

University, Google, Microsoft and Facebook. A former newspaper reporter and party guy, Sam became a Christian during his college years through a homeless man and an energetic African-American Church near Chicago. Now he loves to share the joy he’s found in Christ with anyone who’s searching for something more.

Sam served as a youth pastor and lead snowboarder at churches in Colorado and California before becoming the senior pastor of the Sunnyvale Adventist Church (CA), which serves the people of Silicon Valley. His church was full of young adults, many of whom worked at high-tech companies like Google, Apple and Intel. The church launched 36 Life Groups around the Bay Area and touched many lives. In 2008, he moved to the Portland, Oregon area to plant a church for people who are far from church but hungry for God.

In his free time, Sam enjoys hockey, football, snowboarding and especially hanging out with his surfer/pastor/actress wife. They keep busy rafting, snowboarding and exploring the beautiful Northwest with their two children, who have more energy than the sun.

GO!Encounters Conference is free and open to the community, sponsored by Younger Generation Church, the vibrant young adult ministry of the Arlington Seventh-day Adventist Church. For information go to www.YGchurch.com

Seeking Adventist Ministry URLs
Do you know any excellent Seventh-day Adventist websites in various foreign languages? Please send us the link. We are collecting all the Adventist sites that have Bible studies, pamphlets, radio and television programs, etc. in all the languages of the world that we can possibly find. These will be made available at one place so Christians can share the truth with anyone they meet regardless of being able to speak each other’s languages.

Please send the information to scott.griswold@asapministries.org. If we won’t understand the site, please give us a short description of it in English. For an example of what we are looking for visit www.reachthelowndnextdoor.org under Resources.

Festival of the Animals w/BAC

REDUCED more than $10,000! The cutest interior redo you ever did see! Especially the bathrooms and the master bedroom... Don't miss it! Also, you can walk to everything in the Village: all the public schools, the Adventist elementary school and church, the library, restaurants, grocery store, hardware--everything! And you can utilize the school grounds for exercising, biking, playgrounds, and tennis. Though the garage is a one car, it is oversized with plenty of room for storage.
