AICER Panel Discussion

Are you in the dissertation process or entering this phase? Do you have questions in any of the following areas: topic selection, literature review, dissertation proposal, theoretical framework, methodology options, the IRB process or the selection of a dissertation committee?

AICER is inviting students and faculty to attend a panel discussion on "Questions and Answers Regarding the Dissertation Process," on Thursday, September 26, 2013 at 5:30 pm in Bell Hall, Room 013. This panel discussion centers on questions from graduate students regarding all phases of the dissertation process.

Panel Discussants include:
- Dr. Larry Burton (Professor of Curriculum & Instruction)
- Dr. Lee Davidson (Professor of Teacher Education)
- Dr. Tevni Grajales (Professor of Research & Statistical Methodology)
- Dr. Faith-Ann McGarrell (Professor of Curriculum & Instruction)
- Mordekai Ongo (Research Integrity and Compliance Officer - IRB)
- Bonnie Proctor (Dissertation Secretary)

Online participants need to login as 'Guest' at https://andrews.adobeconnect.com/_a877709416/research/ or <http://www.andrews.edu/sed/aicer/researchwebinars/> whether or not they are registered Andrews students.

Children's Church

Children's Church is back! Don't miss out on a single exciting program. The first event is coming soon on Saturday, September 28, at 5pm in the Burman Hall Auditorium on the campus of Andrews University.

Join Captain Squid, Barney, our marine biologist, Dusty & Feather and the rest of the crew on an adventure of DIVING INTO GOD’S LOVE! There will be live music, puppets, crafts, videos, skits, prizes and more. Don't miss out! This is a monthly "VBS style" event for all children K-5th grade and it is free of charge. The purpose of these events is to present Jesus to young minds at their level, as well as provide opportunities for kids to evangelize by inviting their friends to a "kid friendly" outreach event.

For more information contact:

Communicate Expo!

October 1, 2013 from 11:30 a.m. – 12:20 p.m. This grand event takes place at Chan Shun Lobby and Auditorium and will showcase several departments on campus that teach courses related, to or corresponding with, communication. Whether you are interested in photography, or writing, or even app development, there is something here for you. Come learn about courses offered at various departments on campus or activities going on across campus that you can be a part of that will help you improve, update, or use your communication abilities.

A special feature this event will be the launch of the much-talked-about and anticipated app for the Envision magazine – a first of its kind!

Undergraduate and graduate students are all welcomed. And, as an extra touch, food for all will be provided by Bon Appetit!

Hope to see you there.

For more information, contact the Communication Department: commdept@andrew.edu or 269-471-6314

The Molecular Basis of Organ Regeneration

Dr. Ryan King received his bachelor’s degree in Genetics from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. As an undergraduate he used X-ray crystallography to visualize trioxolane macrolide toxin binding to actin. His interests in visualizing biological processes led him to his graduate studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. During his graduate studies he became fascinated with the ability of some animals to regenerate amputated tissues.

His continued interest in this field led him to a postdoctoral fellowship in the lab of Phil Newmark at the University of Illinois, where he has been studying regeneration in the freshwater planarian. King is particularly interested in understanding how the primitive kidney-like system, called protonephridia, of planarians is reestablished following injury.

Recently King has taken an unbiased screening approach to identify genes required for normal regeneration. His long-term goal is to identify genes with conserved functions in the vertebrate kidney or factors that are specific to protonephridia that could serve as targets for treating parasitic flatworm infections.

Advanced Connections Training
Andrews University is dedicated to providing excellent service to all the individuals that interact on its campus, whether that be students, parents, vendors, faculty and staff. Advanced Connections was developed with the intent of improving the service to internal and external customers of an educational institution, and Andrews University is proud to offer this professional development opportunity to its faculty and staff.

We will be offering Advanced Connections Training during the month of October, and it will be offered in the following two (2) ways:

- Three-parts: Wednesday, October 2, 8:30am-12:00pm (Session 1)
  Wednesday, October 16, 8:30am-12:00pm (Session 2)
  Wednesday, October 30, 8:30am-12:00pm (Session 3)

- One full day: Tuesday, October 15, 8:30am-4:30pm (Sessions 1, 2, and 3)

To RSVP, please send an email to training@andrews.edu and specify which training and format you are registering for. When sending in an RSVP, please include your full name, ID#, email address, and your department of employment.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact Anita Gonzalez at training@andrews.edu or at (269)471-3884.

Celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month

Celebrating Hispanic Heritage Month at Andrews University

National Hispanic Heritage Month (September 15 to October 15) recognizes the contributions made and the important presence of Hispanic and Latino Americans to the United States and celebrates the group's heritage and culture. Hispanics have had a profound and positive influence on our country through their strong commitment to family, faith, hard work and service. They have enhanced and shaped our national character with centuries-old traditions that reflect the multiethnic and multicultural customs of their community.
Hispanic Heritage Month, whose roots go back to 1968, begins each year on September 15, the anniversary of independence of five Latin American countries: Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua. Mexico, Chile and Belize also celebrate their independence days during this period and Columbus Day (Día de la Raza) is October 12. The term Hispanic or Latino, refers to Puerto Rican, South or Central American, or other Spanish culture or origin regardless of race.

Enjoy the following events at Andrews University:

University Vespers—Celebrating Hispanic Heritage, Friday, Sept. 20, 7:30 p.m., Pioneer Memorial Church

¡Arriba! ¡Abajo! Fiesta—Thursday, Sept. 26, Mutch Recreation Center, Campus Center Basement. Come join the party and enjoy Mexican cuisine provided by Dining Services (One-time meal charge of $7. The Terrace Café will be closed for the Spirit of Philanthropy Homecoming Dinner.) There will also be Mexican games and music sponsored by the AUSA.

Puerto Rican and Caribbean Cuisine—Thursday, Oct. 3, 5–7 p.m., Terrace Café

Fiesta Night—Saturday, Oct. 5, 8 p.m., location TBD. An evening of fun and games sponsored by Adelante.

Latino Americans, Part 1—Tuesday, Oct. 8, 7 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall. PBS documentary chronicling the rich and varied history and experiences of Latinos, who have helped shape North America over the last 500-plus years and have become, with more than 50 million people, the largest minority group in the U.S. Co-curricular credit available.

Costa Rican and Central American Cuisine—Thursday, Oct. 10, 5–7 p.m., Terrace Café

Latino Americans, Part 2—Tuesday, Oct. 15, 7 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall. PBS documentary chronicling the rich and varied history and experiences of Latinos. Co-curricular credit available.

Brazilian and South American Cuisine—Thursday, Oct. 17, 5–7 p.m., Terrace Café

Latin Night Concert—Saturday, Oct. 19, 8 p.m., Newbold Auditorium, Buller Hall. Sponsored by Adelante, featuring students from Latin countries performing traditional and contemporary Hispanic music.

Latino Americans, Part 3—Tuesday, Oct. 22, 7 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall. PBS documentary chronicling the rich and varied history and experiences of Latinos. Co-curricular credit available.

LLU Pre-Pharm Interviews

On Wednesday, October 16, Shastin Rains, Director of Marketing & Recruitment for Loma Linda University School of Pharmacy, will be here to interview Andrews University students who are interested in pursuing a career in pharmacology. If you would like to make an appointment to meet with her, please come to the Chemistry Office in Halenz Hall 225 and talk with Dana Johnston.

To ensure that you are able to choose an appointment time that best accommodates your schedule, I would suggest that you sign up for an interview as soon as possible.
Flag Raising & Parade

We invite YOU to be a part of TWO Andrews traditions – The Alumni Parade and the International Flag-raising ceremony!

Whether you are simply proud of your international roots, have served as a missionary outside the U.S. or are currently part of our international campus family, we invite you to participate in both of these meaningful Alumni Homecoming events on Friday, September 27. You're welcome and encouraged to bring your friends and family to participate. You can carry your flag and walk in the Alumni Parade, which will organize at 4:30 p.m. in the PMC parking lot. The flag raising is immediately following, with flag-raisers organizing between the library and PMC at 6 p.m.

Please keep in mind that flag-bearers do not need to be natives of the specific country. Also, if you have international dress, you are invited to wear it for both occasions. Let us know by emailing your name and country you'd like to represent to Rebecca May at rmay@andrews.edu, or you can call Integrated Marketing & Communication at 269-471-3345.

Be in touch soon because the flags will run out fast! We will provide further details upon receipt of your message.

Adventist Forum Presents: The Religious Roots of the First Amendment

Adventist Forum presents "The Religious Roots of the First Amendment: Dissenting Protestants and the Separation of Church and State." The presentation is by Nicholas P. Miller, Associate Professor of Church History and Director of the International Religious Liberty Institute at Andrews University. Come to Chan Shun Hall on the campus of Andrews University Saturday, September 28, 2013 at 3:30 p.m. and join in the discussion.

Nicholas P. Miller is a lawyer (JD, Columbia University) who has worked on a number of cases before the U.S. Supreme Court. He is currently an associate professor of church history at Andrews University Seminary, where he also directs the International Religious Liberty Institute.

His book "The Religious Roots of the First Amendment: Dissenting Protestants and the Separation of Church and State" was published by Oxford University Press in May 2012. Miller argues that traditional understandings of the genesis of the separation of church and state rest on assumptions about 'Enlightenment' and the republican ethos of citizenship.

Professor Miller is also an editor of Homosexuality, Marriage, and the Church: Biblical, Counseling, and Religious Liberty Issues published by Andrews University Press.

Adventist Forum is open to the public. All are welcome. For information, contact Art Robertson at robertsa2@earthlink.net or call 471-7150.

Steamboat Ski Trip Study Tour Now Open for Registration

We would like to invite all students to register to our Stemboat Ski Trip Study Tour!
Honduras Mission Trip

Deadline for the Honduras Mission Trip application is September 20.

On Thursday, December 12, our flight leave from South Bend at 6:35 a.m. and arrives in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, at around noon.

The return flight leaves Honduras at 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Dec. 23, and arrives in Atlanta then we transfer for our flight to South Bend, arriving at 9:29 p.m.

We also have a few tickets to and from Ohare Airport that link up with the group from Atlanta to Honduras and from Honduras back to Atlanta with the group then returning to Chicago.

It is possible to arrange a different final destination if needed but there is a $150 ticket charge after Dec. 13.

The children at the Hogar are already starting to talk about the team coming!

New Music Material Center Hours
The Music Materials Center, a branch of the James White Library located in the basement of Hamel Hall, has new Fall hours!

- Sundays, 1:30-6:30
- Monday & Tuesday, 8:25-6:30
• Wednesdays & Thursdays, 8:25-8:30
• Fridays, 8:25-3:00.

Andrews University students, faculty, and community members are invited to visit us and check out a wide variety of printed music for piano, voice, and other instruments. We also have many dictionaries and reference books on music, as well as hymnals for personal use or Friday night vespers! The music librarian is available for research consultations if your English, History, or other paper brings in aspects of music scholarship.

Reminders: Materials may be returned to the main library 24/7. Also, many music resources are available online via Naxos, RLIM, JSTOR, and Oxford Music Online. Access to these resources are FREE for Andrews University students and staff with the use of an AU id and password from off-campus. Special access to the MMC outside of regular hours may be made in advance by contacting Marianne Kordas, the music librarian, at either kordas@andrews.edu or (269) 471-3114.

Revive Vespers

Join us this Friday for an evening of worship and study of the Bible with Daniel Ferraz, the pastor of the Kalamazoo Church! The title of the presentation is "Experiencing the Faith of Jesus". Did you know that Adventist Church has a special message of "keeping the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus" in these last times. Have you ever wonder what the "Faith of Jesus" really meant? Is it merely a "faith in Jesus" or is it the Jesus’ faith, a faith which Jesus possessed while on this earth, the faith OF Jesus? Come to find out the answer and what that might mean for your spiritual life!

SPEAKER: Daniel Ferraz is a native from Portugal but he spent many years in England working as a missionary and a pastor. He is currently serving as a pastor in the SDA Kalamazoo Church, a congregation which has doubled since his arrival!

TIME: Friday, Sept 20 @ 7:30pm at the Biology Amphitheater, Science Complex, Andrews University
Sabbath, Sept 21 @ 9:45 at Fil-Am Michiana Church, Revive Sabbath School

Prayer Power Hour

Wanting to commune with others in prayer? Searching for a way to spiritually connect with fellow students?

Join Kevin Wilson, AUSA Religious Vice-President, and other AU students every weekday between 7AM-8AM for a spiritual start to the school day. Partake in prayer at the fireplace near the student life office in the student center.

In Isaiah 43:19, God promises that he will do a new thing for this campus and our lives. Let us seek him in prayer in order to make this a reality. Let this be our power hour.
Eric Paddock has been hired as the interim Gymnics coach for the 2013–2014 school year at Andrews University. Paddock holds an associate's degree in pre-physical therapy, and a bachelor's degree in sport studies with a concentration in human performance from Southern Adventist University.

With a background as boys' director at two youth summer camps and coaching in the Gym-Kids Gymnastics Program in Collegedale, Tenn., Paddock brings excellent experience in leadership, coaching and teambuilding to his new role.

"We are committed to doing everything within our power to ensure the Gymnics team has a successful and rewarding year under the leadership of Mr. Paddock," says Emmanuel Rudatsikira, dean of the School of Health Professions where the Gymnics program resides.

Paddock began coaching on Sept. 15, 2013, and will lead the Gymnics team for the entire school year during which time the School of Health Professions will be coordinating the search for a permanent coach.

"I'm very honored and excited to have this opportunity to become a member of the Gymnics family," says Paddock. "The tradition of Adventist gymnastics is rooted deeply here at Andrews University, and I aim to continue the pursuit of excellence here with the help of God, the University, and the community. We appreciate your prayers as we endeavor to positively affect our community throughout the year."
Andrews University invites alumni, friends, and community members to enjoy a special campus-wide exhibition Sept. 26–Oct. 27, 2013. The event will showcase several of the campus’ most treasured artifacts, antiques, and more.

During the course of its 112 years on the Berrien springs campus, Andrews University has amassed a significant collection of treasures, donated by generous individuals who wanted their possessions to inspire future generations, or pieces acquired through research and other scholarly activities of the university. Many of these treasures have been organized for public viewing for this first-time-ever comprehensive exhibition.

Installed in nine locations across campus, this exhibition will educate and enthrall audiences of all ages. Items on display include the largest complete woolly mammoth skeleton in Michigan, Sir Isaac Newton manuscripts, an authentic Rembrandt etching, Picasso etching, and two Chagall prints, a Syrian bronze statuette from 1500 B.C., mission artifacts, and a display of the last 150 years of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

On Saturday, September 29, experts will provide special lectures and presentations on various items in the exhibition.

Display locations:
- Architecture Resource Center, School of Architecture, Art & Design
- Adventist Heritage - Center for Adventist Research, James White Library
- Art Treasures – Art & Design Gallery, Smith Hall
- Archaeology Treasures - Horn Museum
- Music Treasures – Music Materials Center, Hamel Hall
- Natural History Treasures - Price Hall, Science Complex
- Antique Furniture – Sutherland House
- Antique Furniture - Art & Design Gallery, Smith Hall
- Mission Artifacts – Seminary Hall

Andrews Treasures will be open for campus and community guests as follows:

Opening of Andrews Treasures – Thurs., Sept. 26, 8 p.m., Campus Center. Homecoming Tours (also open to the general public) – Sat., Sept. 28, 3-5 p.m.

Community Open House – Monday, October 7, 3-8 p.m.

Special weekend hours – Sat. Oct. 19, 3-5 pm

During regular business hours: Mon-Thurs, 9-5, Fri, 9-1

To make arrangements for group tours, contact Rebecca May at rmay@andrews.edu or 269-471-3345.

Andrews University invites the community to join them for a variety of events during their annual Alumni Homecoming Weekend Sept. 26-29, 2013. A full schedule and description of events, including RSVP forms for select events, is available at alumni.andrews.edu/homecoming.

The weekend begins with the opening of the Andrews Treasures Exhibition, a special showcase of various items brought out of storage for a first-time-ever comprehensive showing, installed in nine locations across the Andrews campus. Items include a Rembrandt sketch, a woolly mammoth, cuniform tablets, 15th Century sheet music (which will be performed live), mission artifacts and more. The opening night, including a brief overview and brochures for planning your visit to each of the exhibition locations, is Thursday, Sept. 26, at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. The exhibition remains open during regular business hours through October; for special group tours, call Becky May at 269-471-3345.

On Friday, Sept. 27, all are invited to participate in the Wes Christiansen Memorial Golf outing at Harbor Shores Golf Club located at 201 Graham Ave., Benton Harbor, Mich. Registration for this family friendly event begins at 8 a.m. with the shotgun start at 9 a.m. The regular entry fee is $100, which includes 18 holes of four-man/woman scramble golf with a cart, lunch, and prizes. Proceeds will support the Alumni Scholarship fund. Course requirements are collared shirts, soft spikes and no denim pants or shorts. RSVP is required.

Friday’s events also include a presentation by guest speaker and alumnus Wes Youngberg entitled, “Goodbye Diabetes: The lifestyle medicine approach to defining, detecting, defying and defeating diabetes.” Youngberg will share current research on the most effective lifestyle-medicine strategies for the prevention, detection, and reversal of prediabetes and Type 2 diabetes. This event is free and open to the public.

The 26th annual homecoming parade begins at 5 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 27, in the parking lot of Pioneer Memorial Church. Guests can enjoy free elephant ears, popcorn and cotton candy while watching the parade of floats, marching bands and fire trucks from the bleachers available across from the Howard Performing Arts Center in the Chan Shun Hall parking lot. All are invited to attend. Immediately following the parade, join us in celebrating diversity at the International Flag Raising Ceremony on the flag mall at 6:30 p.m. All are encouraged to wear native dress and participate in both the parade and flag raising. Call 269-471-3345 to sign up and reserve your flag.

Also of interest on Friday is an open house for the Department of Chemistry & Biochemistry Renovation Open House in Halenz Hall, Room A-107 in the Science Complex from 2-4 p.m.

On Saturday, Sept. 28, explore the campus of Andrews University through a variety of open houses across campus all occurring from 3-5 p.m. These include the Architecture Resource Center in the Architecture Building, the Art & Design Gallery in Smith Hall, the Center for Adventist Research in the lower level of James White Library, the Department of Speech-Language Pathology & Audiology in Bell Hall, James White Library tours, the Natural History Museum in Price Hall of the Science Complex, the Institute of Archaeology and Siegfried H. Horn Museum, Ruth Murdoch Elementary School, and the Undergraduate Learning Center in Buller and Nethery Halls.

The community is also invited to attend the annual Homecoming Concert at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 28, in the Howard Performing Arts Center. This free concert features Andrews University Department of Music ensembles, including University Singers directed by Stephen Zork, Symphony Orchestra conducted by Claudio Gonzalez and Wind Symphony conducted by Alan Mitchell. A dessert reception precedes the concert at 7:30 p.m.

Among the notable events on Sunday, Sept. 30, is the Aviation Breakfast and Fly-In from 8 a.m.-noon at the Andrews University Airpark. Guests can enjoy a pancake breakfast before touring the airpark to see the fleet of planes and visit the Flight Simulation Center. The price is $7 for adults, $3 for children ages 10 and under. Food will be served until 11 a.m.

For those who enjoy some morning exercise, the annual Harvest Run, a 5K run/walk, 10K run and 1K family walk, will begin at 9 a.m. at Johnson Gym. Preregister for lower registration fees at alumni.andrews.edu/run. Race day registration begins at 8 a.m.

Starting at 9:30 a.m. on Sunday, Sept. 30, is the annual Health & Fitness Expo, a free, family-focused event designed to provide health and fitness information in a fun and interactive way. Event includes mini workouts, cooking demos, nutrition information, games for children and adults, local health service information, opportunities on the Andrews University campus, and more. All participants are eligible to enter a drawing for a home elliptical trainer.

The weekend’s events will conclude Sunday with the 6th annual Ride for AU at 1 p.m. when motorcyclists can enjoy a scenic trip through Southwest Michigan. If the 25-bike minimum is met, the ride will be escorted by the Berrien County Sheriff’s Department Motorcycle Team. RSVP now at alumni.andrews.edu/homecoming.

Alan Mitchell, professor of music at Andrews University, has been awarded the 2013 Michiana Outstanding Music Educator Award by Quinlan & Fabish Music Company. The award recognizes excellence in the field of music education in the Michiana area.

Mitchell's name was placed in nomination by a peer and selected by a committee made up of previous award winners and the company's Blue Ribbon Selection committee.

"I feel especially honored to be recognized by my fellow public school music teachers in Southwest Michigan," says Mitchell.

Mitchell was the only recipient who teaches in higher education; the other six 2013 award winners were high school and middle school educators. A special awards presentation was held in Plymouth, Indiana, and included a luncheon and special guest speaker.

The Quinlan & Fabish awards have been presented annually since 1989 in the Chicago area and the Michiana awards began in 2010.

Hansen Wins Best of Show at Michiana Annual Arts Competition
Bahamian artist and illustrator Jace Mckinney began a new chapter in his career this year; he returned to the classroom to pursue studies in Theology at Andrews University in Michigan. Over the past few months, this experience has not merely enriched his spiritual life, but also informed his creative practice.

Jace was the 2012 winner of the prestigious Central Bank of The Bahamas Art Competition’s open category under the theme ‘Redefining the Landscape’. He is currently preparing for his upcoming show ‘Decoding Salvation’ at the bank’s gallery this September.

Jace and I discuss his seminary experience and how his studies and religious beliefs have informed his recent body of work.

When and how did you decide it was important for you to enroll in seminary?

Last year I had taken on several roles within my church. At times, when I felt it was too much, members and leaders in the ministry would reassure me that “This is God’s calling on your life”. I was a teacher, a deacon, youth leader and publisher. I think it was the fifth time that I was approached to serve in another area, that I decided serving in four different ministries was my limit. Although it proved to be challenging, as I look back now I see it as an invaluable experience, as God’s preparation ground for what he has in store for my future.

I imagine this was a decision that you battled with. What was the major deciding factor?
I feel like it was definitely a calling by God to go into ministry. I've had this feeling for years and could see my work as an artist also moving in this direction. I've always felt a call for my work to reflect God's existence in my life and experiences. My art has always been a testimony to what I believe and what I live by. This decision was more about getting to another plateau and not necessarily about becoming a pastor.

How did your friends, family, and peers in the art community respond to this decision?

That's funny. Early this year, I attended a few art show openings, whilst feeling a little unsure of my decision. I often said to myself “Am I actually doing this?” I remember having a conversation with John Beadle and he said, “So I hear you're taking up the cloth” and everyone else chiming in with ‘Reverend and Pastor’ and I couldn’t help, but say woah, wait a minute, slow down, I'm not even there!

What have you learned most about yourself in your first semester in seminary?

I've learned that there was more of a back-story to my belief system and I gained a better understanding of the purpose God has in and for my life. More than learning, this experience has been about my relationship and personal journey with God. It is no longer just one part of my life, where I have to take time out of my schedule to study his word, but I've enjoyed having time that is solely devoted to focusing on the things of God.

I am a person who struggles with anxiety. I've evaluated how this has a certain affect on how I interpret things. I found myself addressing this more in my prayer life and realizing that we all have to surrender to something bigger than ourselves by allowing God to take care of problems like this. I've become more carefree and observant of my environment, with the realization that even though God's presence can be seen in the big things, he also exists in the small things in our lives.

How do you balance theology and art now?

My studies take up most of my time so I haven't been practicing much art over the past few months, but I find myself using my artistic skills to enable and enhance my learning experience. For one of my classes we had to learn the names and work of 40 people. I'm a visual learner and I needed to see the faces in order to remember each character, so I illustrated all 40 of them. During a conversation with a lecturer on taking notes it was interesting to learn from him that some students who doodle in class retain more information than those who actually take notes.

What future do you envision for yourself as an artist with a degree in Theology? Do you plan on practicing in both fields as separate entities or in unison?

A lot of people have already pegged me as being a preacher, but I'm a flexible person. I think the role I take on is heavily dependent on the project that I am engaged in. As a Christian existing in a world with people of other faiths, its all about interaction and sharing; this touches on the theme of my show Decoding Salvation. This recent body of work reflects on the human desire to be saved. It also touches on other salvific themes in relation to loss, struggle, celebration and transformation.

Do you see yourself committing full time to ministry in a church? Arts pastors typically oversee worship and creative arts ministries. Is this a role that you see yourself assuming in the future?

It’s hard to say if I’ll take on the role of an arts pastor in the future, but this type of ministry is always fun to play a role in, especially as it relates to youth ministry. Last year, I was able to organize a camp. One of my favorite parts of this experience was helping the kids make costumes, which they wore while reenacting biblical stories. It was an awesome experience to reach out to the kids in a way that facilitated their learning of biblical stories through art and interaction.

Do you think your studies will drastically change the direction of your creative work or your approach as an artist?

I am definitely seeing a change. One of the things I have been wrestling with as an artist is religious iconography, especially when looking at the Renaissance period. In this period, it is evident that a religious language exists within art. My work is definitely taking a different direction, but is gradually giving its own testimony in that conversation. I am not interested in using an iconic religious graphic language, because they are pretty concrete and a little closed off. When a person talks about their beliefs, they tend to use language that cannot be fully comprehended by others from different backgrounds and cultures. In the case of religion each faith has certain belief systems that are often attached through a specific language. It’s like saying “Oh we need a revival” and realizing the person is either not familiar with the term or associates it with an entirely different meaning. Ultimately, I want the direction of my work to be conscious of the universal perspective and how it can be translated to different types of people.

In 2012 when working on your painting entitled Creation based on the biblical story of the creation of the world you said ‘I love serving God through my talents’. Ultimately is this how you view your creative practice, as a form of Christian servant hood?
Yes, I would definitely agree that I am serving God through my talents. Gifts like this are definitely given to us to reveal God’s glory. Many including myself have deemed this gift as God’s calling on my life. I’ve been wondering about that and what a ‘calling’ is. I guess it’s simply just connecting with God and allowing him to direct you towards his purpose for your life. So by definition I would say it is a calling, but sometimes we do things in our lives for a number of years, and then we can be directed by God to go off to do something else. Moses is a perfect example of this. He was first a prince then he became a shepherd for about forty years and then he was called to be a prophet. I appreciate his journey, in that he wasn’t a prophet his entire life, but was called at the age of 80. Sometimes when looking at these biblical characters we observe their life story in such a short span of time, but by looking at their stories we see that it can take a while before God calls you to your ultimate purpose.

As an artist you embrace the titles illustrator and storyteller; Christians often refer to Jesus as the ‘Greatest storyteller’ who made the connection of earthly places with heavenly realities. Do you see your gift as an opportunity to visualize these stories?

Recently I’ve been pondering the idea of the gift as being the tool to spread the truth. There was once a time when I believed the truth was in the gift. Sometimes we confuse the two. When looking at Jesus and his ministry, he used miracles. It has been very interesting to take a deeper look at his life story and the fact that he often used miracles, but they weren’t something that people were supposed to find the truth in. The miracle was supposed to point to the words he was speaking. So miracles weren’t seen as something that his ministry was hung on; these miracles were merely being used as a vehicle to arrest his audience. This perspective is very similar to how I view my art. The art is almost secondary to whatever the truth or the message is I am trying to convey to my audience. It is a means to get people to open up and start the dialogue.

You talk about their being many stories in the Bible and the Bible being a book of stories in a sense. Are you interested in visualizing those already written stories or are you more interested in creating your own stories from modern reality?

I’d say a little of both. There have been many artists who have illustrated biblical stories throughout the ages. So many interpretations exist today. I would like to illustrate stories of the creation as well as stories relevant to modern society. When looking at international disasters, a few months ago there was a tsunami in China and a lot of people are wondering what’s going on in the world today. I think stories that are related to these events are relevant to give us an idea on reflection on where we are going as a world.

Looking through the history of art, it can be said that art that incorporates religion and spirituality are inextricably linked. Have you been inspired by artists or a period of art that incorporates both?

Recently I’ve been exploring Michelangelo, his life and his approach to art. He saw it as a gift from God and a gift to praise God. He definitely seemed to commune with God through his art. There came a point in his career where he earned a lot of money from the work he produced, but there was also a period where he was just committed to the work because it was his passion.
Like Michelangelo do you see the direction of your work over the years as your way of communicating with God?

Yes. There have been times I find myself feeling compelled to create an image. I'm not entirely sure why, but while doing research its meaning is revealed and I question whether if in fact it was a revelation from God. I feel that artists are very close to God and one of the roles often overlooked is God as creator. Appreciating God as the master artist is a part of him I am learning more about. In fact, this is a part of him that he actually calls us to remember, if you look in the scriptures, particularly in Genesis when God created the world.

Do you feel the subject of art in religion ignites controversy?

Oh Yea! Having been able to delve into its history recently through my Christian History class, has revealed this controversy. Just to see the influence of why we do about certain religious beliefs… I think in today’s society there is an ear of relativism where people are like “Don’t step on my belief system and I won’t step on yours.” So typically whenever someone begins to talk about their beliefs others begin to interpret it as a sermon, attack, or chastisement. Christianity above all other religions by far has so many things tacked to it, having had a very bloody history of suppression and oppression of people all around the world. It was also a suppressed and oppressed religion itself, where it went through a period of persecutions and being torn apart. An irony that many are unaware is that Christians were actually considered atheists because they were seen by the Romans as non-believers of the Greek Gods. It’s interesting how the roles switch, where Christianity becomes this authoritative religion in the world and hence, the oppressor.

Your first solo exhibition in 2010, Theophany, focused on spirituality and the nature of dystopia and the industrial age. It included pieces like The Great Architect: Theatre of Oblivion and That's the Spirit and has been followed by a stream of work like The Song of Moses, 2013 that follow a trend of expressing spirituality. What were you trying to convey through these works?

One of the things I see from living today is the extreme detachment from spiritualism and the awareness of other-worldly powers. I think if we observe simple things in nature and then ask the question of whether we’re alone in the universe you would receive a resounding “No”. We look straight past the things considered mundane, like the fact that we live on a planet that orbits around a ball of fire. That's pretty mind blowing when you really ponder it. We take so many things like this for granted. The work that I create gives birth to conversations that ask us to take notice of the things that exist and are happening around us.

Your second solo exhibition Decoding Salvation continues the trend of exploring spirituality. Is it more likely to show a similar tone and style of work or can we expect something completely new?

When working on Theophany, it was a moment where I felt like God was really moving in my life. That show was about getting a vision from God like Moses did in the burning bush. As it relates to my current body of work, one of the things that is like an Achilles' heel coming from a religious standpoint is that this type of art can come off as sermonizing. This is why I take a less direct approach where there is still a sense of openness allowing viewers to make their own impressions on the work. It is in our nature to make our own impressions for what we hear, see and read. So this new work is giving a testimony of my beliefs and faith with hope that my viewers use it as a starting point to ask deeper and more interesting questions.

What was your inspiration behind the theme Decoding Salvation?

Death moved close to home, having taken away a few loved ones recently, I began to realise that death was becoming more of a reality. It's amazing how detached we can be when we hear news of natural disasters and respond with brief moments of sympathy. If a tsunami were to come to The Bahamas, there would be total chaos and possibly many declaring it 'the end of the world'. People would be throwing their clothes off like “it's over, Government shut down and KFC closed” (laughs). Sadly we only begin to reflect on these things when they touch us.

The roots of the show started from exploring the idea of the hero. One of the people who inspired my work in this area was writer and lecturer, Joseph Campbell, an all time favourite of mine. He shares many interesting concepts on the hero’s journey. As I look through history, saviors and heroes have always had the objective of serving; a purpose to save a society or offer an ideal of hope. Today it seems heroes are movie and basketball stars and have lost the ‘save me’ factor, and possess more of an awe factor, ‘look like me and be like me’. It begs the question ‘What use is a hero that can’t save you?’ An important aspect of my life is coming to understand ‘What is salvation and why we as humans need to be saved from death’. If it's something that's natural, why then does it still hurt when people we know die?

Other than Jesus, what other biblical heroes are you most drawn to?

I am interested in the heroes that give up their lives and huge opportunities for a greater cause. One of the greatest heroes I've recently looked at in the Bible was John the Baptist. The fact that he saw Christ dip into the water and saw the Holy Ghost come upon Christ, but he wasn't there to witness any of the miracles, and was merely this voice crying out in the wilderness. He finds himself in prison locked away to be beheaded and has a dark moment of doubt. When you look at his story closely he wasn’t caught up with expectation that it was his season to be blessed or delivered from this situation. His story ended in his tragic death. It made me look at society today, realising people simply wish to be happy, but there is a cost and for heroes this price is great. We all really just wish to live happily ever after. John the Baptist for example could’ve not gone to prison, by remaining silent like many religious leaders today. No one wishes to give up their comfort to stand up for what they believe in. This is something that is strongly lacking in our world today.

Even Moses, who is one of my favourite characters in the Bible, was a hero. One of the things I found intriguing about his story is that he sinned because he struck the rock when God told him to speak to the rock. And by disobeying God he was barred from going to the Promised Land. Now Moses was a prophet whose whole life and ministry was about getting to the Promised Land. God was merciful enough to allow him to stand on the top of a mountain to see it. In the end, Moses had to humble himself and accept his fate of dying without entering the Holy Land. This was heart breaking for me.

What can be expected from Decoding Salvation?

I’m simply looking to convey a story to my audience; a great love story that illustrates that there is hope after this life and within it. I wish to give a testimony of my experiences of the ideas and interpretations of biblical stories and principles. The show will reflect on celebration. Something I think most people even those who are non-believers hope exists after death. Picture a Bahamian rake and scrap band and a birthday party in heaven. Instead of religious iconography, I have used symbols of festivity like party hats instead of crowns to give birth to the universal nature of the discussion.
In today's market, more employees are boosting their education and training and implementing other career-enhancing strategies to stay relevant and to get ahead.

Clara Lippert Glenn, president and CEO of The Oxford Princeton Programme, a company with a U.S. office in New Jersey that provides energy training courses, says that in the last decade the number of professionals in the energy industry seeking advanced education and training has increased significantly. In 2007, 2,922 professionals took Web-based training courses at The Oxford Princeton Programme. In 2012, that number increased to 12,968.

Bob Makarowski, technology instructor at Baruch College in New York, agrees that more workers feel the need to update their skills as their career progresses.

"In my 20 years of teaching at Baruch College, I have seen a shift in the students attending evening and weekend professional courses who are willing to pay out-of-pocket costs. Unlike the 1990's when companies lavished employees with endless training perks, today's students are self-funded and driven by the realization that increased competence equals continued employment," he says.

Below are some ways that workers are staying relevant in their career by keeping up with their changing workplace.

Read all about it

While seeking an advanced degree is one way for workers to boost their careers, certifications and discipline-specific training programs are more focused alternatives and often less costly, Makarowski says. For example, there are industry-standard certifications for desktop application development, stockbroker licensing, international trade, supply chain management, finance, real estate or bookkeeping, he says.

In his role, Richard Console Jr., managing partner of Console & Hollawell, a personal injury law firm in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, says he reads books about traditional marketing, Internet marketing, management and search engine optimization in addition to attending 12 to 15 hours in seminars of continuing legal education to expand his business skills.

"I attend seminars through the American Lawyer Academy, which I am a member of, where I meet with the heads of other law firms and their marketing departments to stay on the cutting edge," Console says. Since graduating law school, he's also expanded where he is licensed to practice law to enable him to bring in more clients.

Don't have time for continuing classroom education? Kevin Gazzara, senior partner of Magna Leadership Solutions LLC, in Phoenix, says when he found a mentor, it paid big dividends for him. The mentor, who he didn't identify, advised him to focus on expanding his skill set rather than on the next job opportunity. Eventually, it allowed him to move into a different career field with a work schedule that better fit his needs.
"A great mentor will help you stay focused on the long-term future. Otherwise, you are always caught up in the tactics, and you end up somewhere long term where you don't want to be," he says.

In addition to being mentored, becoming a mentor has its benefits. Gazzara says teaching what you've learned keeps you fresh and helps you realize how much you don't know as you try to educate others.

Who do you know?
Another way of putting your career on an upward trajectory is adding contacts in your field, says Caroline Ceniza-Levine, co-founder of SixFigureStart, a career coaching and consulting firm in New York. Such people might be helpful later in alerting you to job openings and recommending you, should you apply for a new job.

One way to increase your list of career contacts is to become a thought leader in your profession.

"Thought leaders publish, speak at conferences, and are active in professional associations and events. You want to be doing these things on a regular basis," Ceniza-Levine says.

Leslie Samuel, assistant professor of physical therapy and foundation science coordinator at Andrews University in Michigan, created a biology blog that is dedicated to making biology fun. Over time, he expanded his readership and started a website to teach biology that now gets 50,000 visitors per month.

To be sure, the website also has helped increase his exposure and reputation by helping him show what he's accomplished while distinguishing him from others.

"It's interesting to see that what you do online affects what you do offline, and there is a strong connection there. And, by doing something to stand out from the crowd, you are staying relevant," Samuel says.

Take time to network
Keeping up with your career can seem like a full-time job on top of your real full-time job. Dorie Clark, author of "Reinventing You: Define Your Brand, Imagine Your Future," says it's easy to stop attending outside networking events or making an effort to meet new people if you've been at a firm for a lengthy period of time. Eventually, most of the people you know are fellow workers at your company or in your industry.

Clark recommends building a network of trusted contacts who work at companies in a diverse range of fields who then could help you find your next career.

And traditional networking isn't the only way to advance your career. It is also helpful to develop your connections through social media networks, says Villanova University psychology professor Katina Sawyer. LinkedIn is a great tool for getting started, particularly for job seekers.

"You can always use your LinkedIn network to find a new job role. Being sure not to make assumptions about others and being open to different ways of doing things are the keys to collaborating and growing as an employee," Sawyer says.

Clark stresses the importance of social media for the 50-plus crowd. If you don't know what a hashtag is, it's time to find out.

"The online world has impacted almost every profession in some way, and if you're a worker over 50, there may be doubts about whether you're comfortable or familiar with these changes. Go out of your way to demonstrate your expertise with a robust LinkedIn profile, a blog or general familiarity with social tools," Clark says.
Funeral Arrangements for Judy Chittick

Monthly Camera Club Meeting
Berrien Springs Camera Club Monthly Meeting
Wednesday, Oct. 2, at 7 p.m.
Berrien Springs Public Library

As usual, there will be two select topics for the month. In addition, "Nature" is always an acceptable category, as are "Open" (any subject) and "Portraits." The two select categories for the October competition are "Action" and "Cracks and Crevices." "Nature" photos are to show nothing from human hands (no wires, fences, cultivated flowers, etc.). Thus a member can submit images in any of five categories or a combination thereof, though extra points are given for acceptances in the two select categories.

Prints, at least 5” x 7” in size, should be mounted, with the title and photographer's name on the back. Digital submissions, however, need to be sent in ahead, with instructions for submitting them on the club's blog site: http://berrienspringscameraclub.blogspot.com/

Any member may submit up to 10 projected images and/or 10 prints for the competition. Pictures are shown one at a time, and three judges score them by machine. The total points determine whether a photo is rated "honor," "acceptance," or "out." From the "honors," a Slide-of-the-Month and a Print-of-the-Month are selected. All are welcome, either to observe or to join. Refreshments will be served.

Free Counseling Services
The Andrews Community Counseling Center (ACCC) has openings for a number of new clients. Doctoral students provide FREE services and have training in counseling adults, adolescents and children.

Each counselor is supervised by a licensed, doctoral-level psychologist.

Types of referral issues accepted include (among others):

- personal growth
- anxiety
- relationship issues
- academic problems
- behavioral problems
- social skills problems
- bullying problems (victims and perpetrators)
- depression
- parent-child conflict
- many others...

Counselors work with children, teens or adults; with individuals, couples or families. We also have a play therapy room to accommodate young clients. Therapy sessions are completely confidential.

To make a confidential appointment or if you have any questions, please contact the ACCC at 269-471-6238.
If the ACCC is closed, please leave a message (which is kept confidential) and someone will return your call as soon as possible.
END THE STATUS QUO!
(While you study at Andrews University)

Your Education is important! Learn how to serve God and still be fully committed to earning your degree.

Benton Harbor Spanish Church invites you to join us to a Welcome Lunch and Worship September 21 @ 10:00 am.

For more information text/call Raquel at (269) 815-8310.

Transportation will be provided from Lamson Hall.
