Student Writes on Learning from Holidays
Katelyn Ruiz, communications graduate student, writes for U.S. News & World Report

As an international student, I miss my folks, but being away from home over the holidays makes the distance between us seem much greater.

To combat this calendar-induced bout of seasonal homesickness, I committed to celebrating in my own way with whatever traditions I could sneak across the border.

First, I realized that I was not alone in feeling lonely. Many of my fellow international students, whom I came to know through classes or campus-sponsored activities, also missed their own holiday celebrations.

Summit challenges students to create sustainable campuses

During a chilly November weekend, 45 student leaders from eight colleges and universities gathered for a sustainability summit at Goshen College’s Merry Lea Environmental Learning Center.

The goal of the sustainability summit was to bring students from area institutions together to learn, network and brainstorm ways to make their home campuses more sustainable. This year’s focus was on food.

“We discussed issues involving our current food systems and ways that we might work to improve these for ourselves and for our campuses,” said Lisa Zinn, assistant professor of sustainability and environmental education at Goshen College and one of the conference organizers. “We hoped that all the participants would go home refreshed, inspired and equipped with concrete ideas about how to work toward sustainability on their own campuses.”

The eight colleges and universities that were represented include Allegheny College (Meadville, Pa.), Andrews University (Berrien Springs, Mich.), Calvin College (Grand Rapids, Mich.), Goshen College, Indiana University – South Bend, Indiana Wesleyan University (Marion, Ind.), Sienna Heights University (Adrian, Mich.) and Taylor University (Upland, Ind.).

At the summit, students were given the opportunity to hear from students and faculty who had been working to implement more sustainable food systems on their campuses through projects like community gardening, composting and providing more local food in the dining halls. Students were able to hear the challenges, failures and successes that people faced in the process.

“We had a chance to talk about our aspirations for not just a better campus, but a better world,” said Melanie Drinkwater, a Goshen College first-year biology major from West Sayville, N.Y. “We were expecting to hear how impossible our goals were, but instead heard the opposite.”

“It was incredibly inspiring for everyone involved,” Zinn said. “The students were so pleased to spend time talking with other students from other schools who share their passion for making their communities and campuses more sustainable. It filled me with hope to see these young people so dedicated to bringing positive change to their communities, their nation and the world.”

Students also explored the connections between faith and sustainability. “Most of the colleges represented are Christian colleges, so addressing faith amidst their passion to live more sustainably on the earth was a very important piece,” Zinn said.

Additionally, students were given a chance to do some hands-on work at the Merry Lea sustainable farm, where they worked on building a compost pile, saving seeds, making soil blocks and moving chicken tractors. Students also visited local sustainable farms and learned about the challenges they face.

“We went on hikes and learned about composting and animal care. There were so many options for how to spend our time,” Drinkwater said. “Merry Lea is a beautiful place, and it was great to spend time there and learn about the area and explore.”

Participants worked together to create a statement of the transformative outcomes for the people on their campuses and agreed to work to find ways to move toward these goals. See the five transformative outcomes developed by participants at the Sustainability Summit.

“I was particularly interested in helping students see the value of working with others to educate their campuses and to think beyond their own individual actions to ways they can make change in the larger community,” Zinn said. “I think that was successful and they came away feeling empowered to make real changes on a campus-wide scale.”

Five transformative outcomes were developed during the 2013 Sustainability Summit at Merry Lea:

In four years, we want the people who are part of our campus communities to:

1. Have the resources and skills to prepare and eat food in ways that are healthy and sustainable.
2. Understand the need for limits, be satisfied with less and make a shift away from a consumption attitude toward food and other resources.
3. Experience growing food for themselves or the local community with their own hands.
4. Be aware and informed about food and food cycles, including where food comes from, how it is processed and prepared and what happens with the waste.
5. Better understand the relationship between faith, the creation and sustainability, including the injustices and brokenness in our current food systems both in our own communities and around the world.

Andrews students think big for M-139 corridor improvements

Posted: Thursday, December 12, 2013 5:00 am | Updated: 9:13 am, Thu Dec 12, 2013.
By DEBRA HAIGHT - HP Correspondent | 0 comments

BERRIEN SPRINGS - Chicago’s visionary planner Daniel Burnham famously said “Make no little plans.”

Berrien Springs isn’t Chicago, but Andrews University graduate architecture students aren’t thinking small. The students unveiled their vision Wednesday of Berrien Springs and Oronoko Township being on the same page regarding business corridor M-139.

“I think and hope that the community has a bright future. ... I hope this will serve to motivate people and will be used to attract investment,” architecture professor Andrew von Maur told the 50 or so gathered to examine the ideas.

The students studied how ordinances can be crafted to manage the growth expected to follow water and sewer line installation along M-139 at the U.S. 31 interchange in Oronoko Township. M-139 follows Cass and Ferry streets in Berrien Springs.

The question on most people’s minds was voiced at the end of the hour-long presentation: what’s the chance of the vision coming true?

“The chance of making a change to the ordinances is pretty good,” von Maur said. “The primary role of what we’re proposing is enabling development. ... It’s about enabling, not predetermining.”

The vision

Von Maur’s students analyzed what could be done with the right rules changes. For instance, “form-based zoning” could be used to advance a mix of townhouses and office buildings in the village parking lot at Pitt and South Main streets.

At the corridor’s northern end, examples were shown for the areas around M-139 and Redbud Trail/Edgewood Drive and between Hinchman and Linco Roads.

The area at Redbud Trail/Edgewood Drive is seeing development with a new Honor Credit Union facility.

The students are further looking to preserve the rural character of the interchange area while having clusters of residential development with some businesses.

Students proposed a median down the middle of Cass Street in the village, more pedestrian-friendly development along St. Joseph Avenue and another median in the area around the fairgrounds and Apple Valley Market.

They envision more commercial development across from the Andrews entrance and mixed residential/commercial developments on both sides of M-139, close to U.S. 31.

Von Maur and his students developed the plan after meeting with property owners in the corridor from the St. Joseph River bridge to the township northern limits.

The rules

The M-139 corridor study moves to the next phase where the Williams & Works planning firm takes the proposals developed by Andrews to see how existing zoning ordinances need to be changed.

Another question Wednesday was whether the Michigan Department of Transportation would allow boulevards and adding sidewalks and bike paths.

MDOT might be convinced, von Maur said, if local officials can show that adjacent land uses merit changes to reduce traffic speed.

Von Maur said the township and village have zoning ordinances that place unnecessary burdens on existing property, and the ordinances don't match the visions set down in the master plans of each entity.

Mac for Sale $350 obo
Selling my Super-upgraded 2010 Mac mini
It has been upgraded with a new 128 gb Samsung Solid State drive inside. It also has the latest operating system Mavericks and 8gb of memory.

It turns on in less than 20 seconds because of the Solid State Drive and Mavericks optimization.

It’s super fast, and in great condition. I need a laptop so I would like to sell it. I’m willing to go with you to have it certified by Apple or to have you come over to try it out before you purchase. I am a former Apple Inc. employee and have only let certified Apple "Geniuses" work on my machine.

Works very well as a media computer, just connect an external drive.

Modern queen, cherry, sleigh bed frame, $270 OBD

Modern queen, sleigh bed frame. This Cherry-colored elegant structure, will add subtle sophistication to any room. Headboard curves slightly back for added comfort when sitting up on bed. Footboard curves slightly forward to match. Bed frame allows for bedding to fall nicely between the bed and frame without being squeezed/squashed.

Side rails, headboard, and footboard included. Frame sits high enough off the floor to allow for under-bed storage. Each of the three slats that support mattresses are supported with legs that run down the middle of the frame, in addition to the four corner legs. Box spring and mattress not included. Minor wear (see images) can easily be fixed with a little staining, or brown marker. Small cracking on footboard (see image), though hardly noticeable.

Purchased from store in 2011 by seller.

If interested in queen-sized box spring please let me know. I have another one in guest room that's barely been used ($100 selling price).

Live-In Men's Dean Needed

We need a live in dean for our 6 adult men. He would need to get them up in the morning, have morning and evening worship with them, check to make sure their rooms are clean, have them load their laundry, turn the washer and dryer on for them (they are not allowed to add the detergent, the dean does that), client supervision. The present dean also gets their breakfast and supper. With more help, that could change.

The pay is $300, per month.
BERRIEN COUNTY, MICHIGAN

JOB DESCRIPTION

TITLE: Domestic Investigator

CLASS CODE: C5

DEPARTMENT: Trial Court Family Division, Friend of the Court

Massage Therapist

Are the stresses of work and study getting to you? Would you like to boost your athletic performance? Do you have a muscle ache that just won’t go away?

Ray McAllister, an Andrews alumnus who despite total blindness is now a licensed massage therapist, invites you to visit Healing's Rays Massage. Proficient in deep tissue, sports, and relaxation massage, Ray can relieve aches, help you tone muscles, and give you the energy boost to finish studies. He also offers hydrotherapy, hot stone massage, reflexology and now hot bamboo massage. His wife, Sally, is a certified aromatherapist and will be present for female clients. She sells home-made aromatherapy blends.

Introductory cost is only $25 for your first hour, $15 per half hour, for students all the time. Contact Ray for regular, competitive rates. 30 no-cost massages are available for those with Adventist Risk Management insurance, including sponsored seminary students.
