Food Fundraiser for Manado, Indonesia

If you have not heard, at the beginning of this month, disaster struck Indonesia in the region of Manado. As you can see in the images below, flash floods and landslides have hit the region hard, killing 18 and displacing over 80,000 people from their homes. So to help, the Andrews Indonesian Student Initiative Society (AISIS) will be having a food fundraiser on Friday January 31 in Chan Shun Hall from 12:00-4:00 PM. We will be selling and serving authentic and delicious Indonesian cuisine made fresh by your local Indonesian community. During the week, AISIS will also have a booth set up in the Student Center during the day from Monday to Thursday. At the booth we will be collecting donations; Food (Non-Perishable), clothes, or money—anything that can help with the relief effort to the region some of our officers call home. Spread the word and tell your friends!!

More info to come during the week. So please keep your eyes and ears out!!

Blessings, and have a wonderful week.

Correlates of Perceived Abuse of Pastors’ Children- Dr. Wendy Thompson

You are invited to attend an AICER Symposium presentation on Thursday, January 30, 2014 at 5:30 pm.

Presenter: Wendy Thompson, DrPH, MSW, Associate Professor of Social Work, Andrews University.

Correlates of Perceived Emotional/Verbal and Spiritual Abuse of Adult Children of Pastors

Data analysis of an on-line survey of 120 pastors, spouses, and adult children for the North American Division showed relatively high correlations between perceptions of being emotionally/verbally or spiritually abused and self-reports of concern about substance abuse, mental health, pornography, gambling, domestic violence, extra-marital sex and difficulty with personal prayer. These findings strongly suggest that abuse may occur within a context of family dysfunction and result in a wide range of chemical and behavioral addictions and a diminished prayer life. The church needs to be aware of these issues and provide support and intervention services to improve the spiritual life and retention of pastor’s children.
Face-to-face participants meet in Bell Hall 013.

Online participants to login as "Guest" at https://andrews.adobeconnect.com/_a877709416/research/ or http://www.andrews.edu/sed/aicer/researchwebinars/ whether or not they are registered Andrews' students.

AU's Got Talent: Hollywood Red Carpet

AU's Got Talent is this Saturday, January 25 at 7:00pm in the Howard Performing Arts Center! The theme this year is Hollywood Red Carpet! Come dressed to impress and you will receive priority seating. The talent this year is amazing so you will definitely want to be there. See you this Saturday night on the red carpet.
Berrien Springs Camera Club Meeting

The Berrien Springs Camera Club will meet Wednesday, Feb. 5, at 7 p.m. in the Berrien Springs Public Library at Cass (Old 31) and Union. This month's program consists of a competition of prints and digital images submitted by members. The selected topics for the month include: 1) Patterns and 2) Shadows. Three additional categories are appropriate for all of our competitions: 1) Nature (nothing domesticated, nothing of a human origin), 2) Portraits, and 3) Open (any other subject).

Photographers and other artists like to find patterns in what they observe. These might be the parallel veins of a leaf, or boats lined up neatly at a marina, or the center of a sunflower. Many options are possible, and it is fun to see what patterns others find in everyday things. Shadows also can bring out creativity—how a subject is positioned in relation to the sun, maybe a whole picture of just an elongated shadow.

Prints, at least 5” x 7” in size, should be mounted, with the title and photographer's name on the back. Instructions for submitting images in digital form are available on the club's Website: http://photoclub.berrienspringsmi.us/

All are welcome, either to observe or to join. Anyone who wishes to join may submit photos to the competition, up to 10 projected images and/or 10 prints. Refreshments will be served.

Advanced Connections for Student Employees--Tuesday Choices

The Office of Human Resources is excited to provide an opportunity for our student employees to participate in Advanced Connections training during Tuesday Choices this spring semester, beginning January 28th.

Advanced Connections was developed with the intent of improving the quality of service provided to internal and external customers of an educational institution, and Andrews University has been offering this professional development opportunity to its faculty and staff for several years now. We recognize that a significant portion of our workforce on campus is student employees, with many of these students on the "frontlines," providing customer service to many individuals here on campus.

In an effort to improve our culture of service, we are excited to be able to provide this opportunity for student employees to attend Advanced Connections training! Topics to be discussed will include building a service culture, overcoming barriers, effective communication, checking for customer satisfaction, meeting service challenges and more.

Student employees wanting to attend Advanced Connections training during Tuesday Choices will need to RSVP by emailing training@andrews.edu, and they will need to provide their full name, ID#, email address, and the department in which they work. Please note that in order for them to receive the certification, you will need to attend all 6 sessions being offered during Tuesday Choices. There are only 35 seats available for this training.

If you thought you had to travel all the way to the Field Museum in Chicago, Ill. to see a real wooly mammoth, think again. In fact, the most complete skeleton of a mammoth to be found in Michigan is on display in Berrien Springs, Mich., at the Andrews University Museum of Natural History.

BERRIEN SPRINGS—If you thought you had to travel all the way to the Field Museum in Chicago, Ill. to see a real wooly mammoth, think again. In fact, the most complete skeleton of a mammoth to be found in Michigan is on display in Berrien Springs, Mich., at the Andrews University Museum of Natural History.

“It’s not a Field Museum, obviously,” said Dr. H. Thomas Goodwin, professor of paleobiology and chairman of the biology department at Andrews, “but we do have quite a nice collection of stuff.”

“Certainly, our most famous draw is the mammoth. We have what we call the ‘Prillwitz mammoth,’ which was found on the Wesley Prillwitz farm back in the early 1960s,” Goodwin said. “By direct line of flight, it would be two miles away from here, but it’s slightly further by car.”

“When Mr. Prillwitz was having a pond excavated, dredging it to make it deeper, he ran across this mammoth, and it is the most complete mammoth ever found in Michigan up to this point,” Goodwin said. “It’s a very nice specimen.”

While the museum has a nearly-complete skeleton of a mammoth on display, it also has the tusk of a mastodon which was discovered in southwest Michigan.

“We have the tusk of a mastodon, what we call ‘the Carmichael Mastodon,’” Goodwin said. “These tusks were excavated near Watervliet back in the 1970s.”

According to Dr. Goodwin, “Mastodons were more common here in Michigan than the mammoths, in a ratio of about four to one, probably because of the environment.”

Visitors can learn more about the differences between the two species of extinct mammals when they visit the museum, and they can also learn about animals that currently live in both Michigan and in other parts of the world.

“We have two areas of better coverage,” Goodwin said. “One would be local specimens, and we have quite a collection of both mammals and birds from Peru.”

“The museum, really, is kind of an old-fashioned museum with the stuffed specimens, but it also has a quite a nice teaching collection of specimens, especially mammals and birds,” Goodwin said. “We also have quite a few insects and a shell collection.”

“The shells were donated by an individual. They really don’t have significant scientific value, but they have a nice display value,” Goodwin said. “They’re cool. They have nice variation.”

“We have a crocodile skull. We have bears, just lots and lots of different things. And then, we have a series of casts, including an extinct lion that used to live here in the United States, a saber-toothed cat — the smilodon, and a giant beaver. We have a number of Ice Age casts,” Goodwin said. “We have various teeth of mammoths and mastodons. We have a number of hominid skull casts as well.”

“If a school group is doing something on diversity, and they want to do something locally, we have quite a nice collection of specimens,” Goodwin said.
“Typically, when groups come here to visit, they spend a half an hour or 45 minutes,” Goodwin said. “We also have a green house up on the top floor that has a tropical room and a desert room and so on, so sometimes when school groups come, some of them will want to do that — visit the museum and the greenhouse.”

Individuals and families with children are also welcome to visit the museum. Although it is not open on a regular basis, visits to the Andrews University Museum of Natural History can be arranged by calling Mayra Robertson in the Biology office at (269) 471-3243 during normal business hours. The museum is located in G. McCready Price Hall, 4280 Administration Dr., on the Andrews University campus.

“With a little bit of advanced notice, we’re happy to do that — to open it up and let people come take a look,”
Goodwin said. “We have that happen on a fairly regular basis.”
Social engineer
Prof teaches computer skills to help rebuild Benton Harbor

BENTON HARBOR — George Agoki has a dream that technology can be used to help people, to re-build communities and heal the world.

Agoki, 63, is a native of Kenya and chairman of the engineering and computer science department at Andrews University. He learned the practical applications of machines while studying at a missionary boarding school in Uganda. He was taught how to repair lawn mowers and ran the water pump for the farm, before working with rudimentary computers that used punch cards and took up entire rooms.

The philosophy of the school was “Teach the head, the heart and the hand,” Agoki said.

Since September, he has been passing along that belief to participants in a computer literacy class at the Benton Harbor Housing Commission, volunteering four days a week. He plans to recruit students from Andrews to assist him.

JOHN MATUSZAK / HP Staff

Agoki has volunteered four days a week since September, and also visits men at the Berrien County jail.

Agoki has taken part in numerous community service projects in Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, often recruiting young people to pitch in. Since 2005 he has participated in a ministry that visits men at the Berrien County jail (he prefers to call them “residents,” rather than inmates).

Agoki is the son of a pastor and holds a master’s degree and a Ph.D. from the University of Nairobi, where he previously taught. He is a resident of Berrien Springs and has taught at Andrews since 2001. He and his wife, Elizabeth, have four children.

He spoke with Herald-Palladium Staff Writer John Matuszak about his work and his vision for transforming lives through technology.

What kind of computer skills did your students have at the beginning?

We were starting on a very basic level. They can’t handle a computer. “Do you have an email address?” “No. What is email?” So this is an introduction to computer tools, to help them in everyday living. We show them how to use the keyboard. Showing them how to search on the Internet about anything you want. A couple of them are applying for jobs on the Internet. This is great.

Now that they have gained basic skills, what kind of projects are they involved in?
People are so insulated. They have lived in Benton Harbor all of their lives. They have not had much exposure to how people in other parts of the world live. So I ask “Would you like to have a trip to Africa? Would you like to go on a safari? Where would you like to go? Can you plan a trip? Do you need a passport? How can you do that on the Internet?” They get excited. This way they begin to see the need for computer literacy. It’s not just learning the computer for the sake of learning the computer. It’s a tool.

How do your students react when they begin to master these skills?

They go from searching the alphabet on the keyboard, spelling out the words, to composing sentences. They realize “Hey, this is do-able. Those baby steps, something we thought was so hard, now we’re doing it.” You can see their faces lighting up, “This is useful. We can do it.” Now it comes naturally, and they’re asking what is the usefulness of this. ... We are working on something now, as a team, answering the question “Can anything good come out of Benton Harbor?” through poetry. It’s all painted a bleak picture, that’s where you start. Then farther down, you can see something good about it. This is helping them beyond just computer literacy to something they can use. I do feel that they need to tell their own story.

What was your motivation for getting involved with the jail ministry?

I was reading Scripture, Matthew 25, about the end of time, Judgment Day, when Christ separates people into two groups, the sheep and the goats. And he says to the sheep on his right “You saw me hungry and you fed me. You found me naked, and you clothed me. I was sick, and you came to see me. I was in prison, and you came to see me.” Well, my wife was a nurse, so we were able to see a lot of sick people. I ticked than one off. Food—I’ve given food. Clothing—we’ve given that. What about this prison thing? I don’t want Christ to tell me on Judgment Day, ‘I was in prison and you didn't come to see me!’

What has that experience been like?

I found all kinds of people there. Hispanics, whites, black. I ask “What brings you here?” “Well, I didn't pay my child support,” “I was caught at this and that.” “How many times have you been here?” “Maybe this is my second time.” So we have repeat offenders.

My interest is, when you get out of here, where do you go? Do you have a job? They can’t find a job, they don’t have a driver’s license, their record is not clean. So it’s really a complex cycle of problems. And I’m trying to find a way to help these people. Some need training, some just need support. ... I was told in training “Don't proselytize, don't try to convert them. Share Jesus with them—period.” (Laughs). Fair enough. But I wasn’t quite satisfied. I’m sharing Jesus, but this guy wants a job, this guy wants to reform, this guy wants to be rehabilitated. I asked, “Couldn't we mount a more integrated program?” (The minister) didn’t seem to get my point, at all, so when this call came last summer (to head the computer literacy program) I said I’m going to grab this.

You have a background in urban planning. How does this connect with your interest in renewal for Benton Harbor?

Part of my engagement here is defining the problem, so I can understand the problem. (And) the students can also help me provide solutions. Engineers don’t ask the users what the problem is. Yet the people who are having the problem perhaps could help us define the problem and give us a peak into the solution. So that's why I’m here. ... Someone needs to hold hands with these people and help them. Who knows? If Benton Harbor succeeds, it could be a model to provide solutions around the globe. We must forget about thinking insular. We must think globally.

And technology can help with that.

Exactly.

Thank You from the Paynes
On behalf of my daughter, Sheri, and her family, I would like to thank my campus community for the outpouring of caring and concern and especially the prayers for my grandson, Ewan, as he underwent chemo for a massive abdominal lymphoma. I am happy to report that he completed all five rounds of chemo in three months (half the time they initially indicated) and was discharged from BC Children’s Hospital on December 23, cancer-free and just in time for Christmas. God’s fingerprints could be found all throughout this very difficult but amazing journey. I am particularly thankful for His grace and mercy and of course, your prayers. Ewan turned three years old two weeks ago and is eating well and driving his two older sisters crazy, so all is well in his house!

Resident who fell at mailbox thanks local doctor for helping her

Dear Editor,

On January 2 when it was cold and snowing, I drove my car out to my mailbox which is on M-139 about 10 p.m. I am handicapped. I was going from my car to my mailbox when I slipped and fell. Cars were going by—although there was not a lot of traffic. I was wondering how I was going to get up; I did manage to pull myself up enough to reach some advertisements sticking out of the box and started waving them in hopes someone would see me and help me. I only had my night clothes on and shoes, I was freezing and could feel my fingers freezing. An SUV went by and turned around and came back. The driver introduced himself as Dr. Jason Hamel, an emergency room doctor, and asked me if I needed help. He was on his way to work at the time. He picked me up and drove me into the garage, and helped me into the house. He told me to get my wet clothes off right away. As it was, the next day I had huge blisters from the cold on one of my hands—if I had been out there any longer I would have had frost bite. I want to thank him; others went by and did not stop to help. I want to thank the local doctor for taking time to help a local resident.

Lyndon G. Furst: A Different Perspective

Some Thoughts on Income Inequality

In an attempt to get the eyes of the people of the country surrounding his introduction of the Affordable Care Act, otherwise known as Obamacare, the President has announced a new legislative agenda for the coming year. One of his major initiatives is dealing with income inequality within the American population. There is a growing disparity between those who social scientists would consider to be within the working-class and people at the upper end of the economic scale. America has for most of its history been a nation of middle-class people. They are not working to drive the economy through their demand for consumer goods. However, it is to remain the case that the middle class has been shrinking rather rapidly. Historically, the middle class has been defined as working class and middle income people. (Please note that the working class is interchangeably used with the middle class.) Republicans by contrast have been engaged in even a discussion of the issue as being "class warfare." There are a number of reasons for the decline of the middle class. Among those most prominently mentioned is competition from low-wage workers in other countries which has come about as a result of the increasing globalization of the world economy. Another factor is the rapid development of automation and computer technology. For example, when I was a college student there were no secretaries, secretaries were from the government. Eventually I ran out of money and had to drop out of school and go to work in a factory as a welder. I had no skills other than those needed to do that work and was given three days to learn how to operate the different types of welders at my workplace. I worked for $2.20 an hour which was 2½ times the minimum wage. In today's terms, the minimum wage being $7.25 that would be an equivalent of a little over $18 an hour. I doubt that there are very many unskilled jobs which pay that kind of wage today. Thus, while 30 years ago it was possible with minimal skills to earn a middle class income its not that way today.

So, how should the federal government relate to such a situation? Democrats have suggested various forms of government: As a bailout as well as a radical increase in the minimum wage. (Some have suggested that it should be doubled which is what it is now) Obama's goal is well-intentioned. He suggests that a person in America who works hard should be able to enjoy the benefits of a middle class lifestyle. Republicans will have nothing to do with a huge increase in the minimum wage or additional entitlement programs. They view all lower income people and those living in poverty as basically lazy and in need of some motivation. If they want to improve their lot in life they need to get off welfare and into the workforce.

The Republican’s primary response so far is to suggest that low income workers should get the additional training needed to obtain higher paying jobs. They strongly resist what they refer to as the "redistribution of wealth" in America. They vision with alarm any attempt by the federal government to assist low income or impoverished people with entitlement type benefits. From my perspective, they are at least partly right. Keeping people on the dole is not a sustainable policy. Neither are radical increases in the minimum wage which would no doubt cause some degree of economic disruption and thus result in unintended consequences for the very people it is intended to help.

From my perspective, the better approach a public policy would be to combine federal assistance for job training with a concerted effort by the captains of industry to reward those who do do faithful work and thus provide a foundation for the huge profits that American corporations have experienced in recent years. Progressives are correct in that a person who works hard and leads a law-abiding life should be rewarded for his/her efforts by more than a subsistence wage. This is not a newfangled idea. A hundred years ago author Herbert Creely, in his book The Promise of American Life, made the same suggestion. And for several years, especially following World War II, the growing middle class in America prospered and supported a growing economy. But in the past 30 years that has all changed as middle income people have rapidly disappeared from the workforce.

Of course, we cannot go back to the good old days of the mid twentieth century. But, from my perspective, it is time for our business leaders to do their part.

Letters to the EDITOR ...

Reader thanks community for helping him grow in the right direction

Dear Editor,

I have been a Maryland resident for the past 23 years, but I grew up in Berrien County. My parents still live there, and over the years I’ve made many trips back here. On one of these trips I reflected on the gift of growing up in this small southwest Michigan town. The village has changed over the years, but the people have remained the same. Mrs. Prillwitz, Ruth Kaiser, and Rhoda Willis helped to educate me, or at least they gave it their best shot—I wasn’t exactly a model student. Vic Fost and Jim Reuter saw to it that I was protected from the bad guys, and the team at Whetstone Garage helped to keep my less-than-perfect vehicles in good working order. As for my tax returns, Martin Fishell did, and Martin Fishell did do these. (True, this was especially convenient since I lived in his house for free, but he did a really good job, too.)

This list could go on and on, but I have a job and work as much as I did many years ago at Twisted Nursery and later at Edward Furniture. Today this fine community’s legacy lives on, even beyond genetic lines as represented in Don Damren and Herb Schug. I often read in this very newspaper of the exploits and good deeds of other businesspersons such as Ric Sterleman, Garrett Dent, Dave Nelson, the Bidlys and many more. True, Schug Drug is now Simple Updates and Schrader’s Supermarket has become Harding’s. This simply means that progress continues in Berrien Springs, and that the present and future are in good hands.

It’s true that I have a tendency to avoid taking adulthood too seriously. But I also accept my sincere gratitude for being a community that helped me to grow in the right direction.

Music and English Vespers

The Departments of Music and English invite members of the university and the wider community to join in their annual winter vespers service, “Love Encompassing All: A Vespers in Music and Poetry.”

Borrowed from a hymn lyric, the theme for this year’s service traces a spiritual and artistic journey encompassed by God’s inescapable love. This hour of worship through music and poetry will take place Friday, January 31, 2014, at 7:30 p.m. in the Howard Performing Arts Center. Co-curricular credit is available for students.

On March 18, United Way of Southwest Michigan and Honor Credit Union are taking action to promote the impact reading has on our youth. This annual Reading Day of Action asks PreK-5th grade classrooms from all corners of Berrien and Cass County to open their doors to our community members and allow volunteers to share their love of reading with the students. Volunteers will be reading to over 10,000 on one day! Please be a part of raising awareness of the importance of reading on the development in a child’s life.

Schools and Classrooms- will be able to specify a time range they would like volunteers to come and will have the ability to signup a whole school! After that, United Way will coordinate volunteers to come to you! Volunteers will have a 20 minute appointment at the classroom. Though we strongly encourage volunteers to bring books we ask that classrooms have 5-6 books available just in case.

Volunteers- can volunteer from 9am-Noon or Noon-3pm. Typically volunteers read to multiple classrooms and are asked to bring an age appropriate book if available. Teachers and students love to hear new books! Volunteers can signup in a group of two or as a single. We will do our best to keep multiple volunteer groups from one company at the same school building.

Interested?
Go to www.uwsm.org/reading to sign-up

Desperately in need of a job
Hello, my name is Grace, I am an MSW student who is desperately in need of a job. I am open to anything that will give me some sort of income so I can pay for my voice lessons and my upcoming music project. I love music with passion (write my own songs by Gods grace) and desire to share the love of God with others through my music ministry. I am 27 years old, warm, obedient, God fearing woman. I design and customize little girl's church, birthday and party outfits if anyone is interested, I am highly interested in any singing opportunities if anyone knows of such or will be willing to give me the chance. I will also write and sing songs for special occasions if needed. Thanks

Regular Caregiver Needed for Infant
I am a single mother of my infant and I am a young healthcare professional with Borgess. I live in Dowagiac, MI. and I am looking for a caregiver who will come to my residence and sit with my infant and provide care while I work Monday through Friday 8:00 am. to 4:30 pm. This would be ideal for an Early Childhood Education student and / or a student taking evening classes.

My current caregiver is providing care in my home for $100.00 / Wk. I also pay a steady paycheck to the caregiver, regardless if I have to take time off of work for doctors appointments, holidays, etc. My infant is almost a toddler and is exclusively breast fed, so it really makes the job easy. I come home at noon on my lunch break and nurse my daughter.

We are a small Christian family and the ideal candidate would respect our beliefs and wishes, not drink, not smoke, not do any drug of any kind, not have any criminal record, have a true passion for children, does not have a pet allergy as we have an elderly fixed feline, cpr certified preferred, and that is willing to commit to our little family.

Interested and qualified candidates should send their resume with at least 3 professional references to Tanya.Thomas@borgess.com as references will be checked.
