Bring Your Heart to Work: Invitation to Presentation
Faculty, staff and students are invited to a presentation being held as part of Lakeland HealthCare Hospital Week. The senior leadership team at Lakeland is presenting inspirational speaker Allison Massari, named one of the "Top 10 Best Speakers in North America for ‘Motivation’" by Meetings & Conventions magazine.

Thursday, May 15, 8:30 a.m. – 10:30 a.m.
Andrews University Howard Performing Arts Center
Berrien Springs

Allison will re-energize, invigorate and motivate our associates. She will talk to us about compassion and illustrate why bringing our hearts to work makes a difference.

Allison Massari knows that you have the power to transform lives. She has been a medical patient and educator, and she understands health care intimately. Allison has experienced firsthand the essential value of what personalized health care delivered by committed providers means when facing the horror of life-threatening conditions. As a burn survivor and traumatic brain injury patient she draws on her personal experiences with empathic devoted healthcare workers. It’s a passionate story of finding the internal strength and commitment for hope to flourish - and to inspire the collaboration of teams of medical personnel to profoundly demonstrate the power of authentic patient-provider relationships. Her desire is for you to feel reinvigorated for why you went into healthcare in the first place.

Those interested in attending the event at Andrews should RSVP to Peggy Juhl at pjuhl@lakelandregional.org.

We look forward to seeing you there!
Envision Magazine Wins National Awards
by Becky St. Clair

Envision, a regular publication produced by the Andrews University Department of Communication, was recently named the best mobile publication in North America by the Associated Church Press (ACP). The award was announced at the oldest and largest Christian Press Association's annual awards banquet, held in Chicago on April 25.

Envision's prestigious "Best in Class" honor was one of five awards won by the Andrews University student publication from among 1,200 entries submitted for judging in the yearly Best of the Christian Press Awards 2013.

"We are indeed proud of the achievements of Debbie Michel and her students," says Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences at Andrews University. "Particularly nice is the involvement of our students and their deserved recognition."

Other award-winning entries by the student-produced magazine are:

- Award of Excellence for Student Publications (entire Envision staff)
- Award of Excellence for Reporting and Writing: Feature Article, short format magazine ("Uncalled For? Women in the Seminary" by Melodie Roschman)
- Award of Merit for Reporting and Writing: Personally Useful Article ("Don't Follow Your Dreams: How to be Miserable, Waste Time and Live an Unsatisfying Life" by Melodie Roschman)
- Honorable Mention: Art/Design/Graphics: Design Spread or Story ("From Fear to Eternity" spread by Kristiana Mitacek)

In addition to the printed version of the magazine, Andrews alumnus Kenty Ramdatt designed the mobile app, available on iOS and Android devices.

"This is truly a great achievement," says Duane McBride, chair of the Department of Behavioral Sciences and research professor of sociology. "We are all benefitted as Andrews faculty and students are recognized for their creative achievements."

Envision magazine is produced jointly each spring among three classes: Publication Production in the Department of Communication, Studio Photography in the Department of Photography, and Publication Design in the Department of Visual Art & Design.

For more information on the publication, visit andrews.edu/envision.
Center for Reading, Learning and Assessment Receives Grant

By Eloise Ravell

The Andrews University Center for Reading, Learning and Assessment (UCRLA) recently received a grant from Versacare to cover the costs of providing interventions and learning opportunities to disadvantaged reading- and language-challenged individuals. With this project, Andrews can contribute even more to both the local community and local Seventh-day Adventist schools.

The UCRLA addresses learning- and reading-skill needs through classes and tutoring with services available to students, faculty, staff and the community. The center helps clients develop reading skills and provides classes for both individual and small-group support.

“There has always been a need for many people, both children and adults, to learn to read,” says Annie Lopez, consultant at UCRLA. “However, many do not have the means to pay for the service. We’ve tried to write requests for a grant, but got turned down time and time again. So we prayed and we started a fundraiser selling eggrolls to Andrews’ students, faculty and staff. We had great support.”

After ten years of being denied a grant, they finally received one from Versacare, an organization that annually distributes grants to various supporting ministries and other qualified organizations primarily within the Seventh-day Adventist Church, which supplied computers, laptops, projectors, books, software and proper licensing for the program.

“We want to be able to offer these services to more individuals, so that even the poorest can afford it,” continues Lopez. “We will now be able to do assessments and determine what the individual needs at a lower cost.”

This grant will allow the center to continue to provide quality care without struggling to make ends meet.

“I am both very grateful and humbled that God answered our prayers,” says Lopez. “He is a miracle-working God and He knows the needs of individuals who ask for help. It is my desire that the people we serve will understand God’s will for their lives as the world of reading is opened to them.”

Leadership Program Students Present Projects

By Eloise Ravell

On April 14, 2014, Andrews University held the Undergraduate Leadership Certificate and Minor Celebration to honor students who completed their Leadership Program requirements.

Students receiving their leadership certificate completed the Fundamentals of Leadership class, engaged in the Leadership practicum every semester, were involved in a Leadership Development project, created a portfolio from leadership implications in their classes and completed their Change Project. There were four students who received a minor in leadership in which they completed three additional classes including Creative Problem Solving, Introduction to Coaching and Theories of Leadership.

“The Change Project is essentially a two-credit course in which students identify something that they believe ought to be different and set out to make it happen,” says David Ferguson, director of Undergraduate Leadership Development.

Students have to lead some sort of change using problem solving and creative thinking to better something in their community.

“I started a language program at the Crayon Box, the child care and preschool center at Andrews, to emphasize language development,” says Kristin Wolfer, a speech-language pathology and audiology student working on her leadership certificate. “Often times, speech-language pathology and audiology is associated with only speech disorders, and people do not realize the importance of language development in young children.”

Ferguson explains that the leadership program helps propel students into their chosen field and sets them apart from individuals with no leadership experience.

“The honest truth is, the world around us is starving for people who can impact their surroundings and lead,” say Ferguson. “Leadership is a delivery system for whatever your ‘big deal’ is. Being a great leader with no mission, no vision, no big ‘something,’ has no direction. Being a great leader with a flimsy ‘something’ just takes people to the wrong place more efficiently.”

The leadership program not only encourages students to do what they love, but it gives the students an advantage in the workplace with their leadership experience.

“In my perspective, the leadership program is designed to teach young adults the importance of leadership and the concept of individualization,” says Wolfer. “The program was beneficial because it showcased a variety of leadership styles and it was encouraging to see the future of young leaders in our institution.”

Being an effective leader allows students to reach their educational and professional goals along with pursuing what they are passionate about.

“Part of it is to help our students dig around in who they are, what God is calling them to be, what they’re passionate about,” continues Ferguson. “We don’t just want students to graduate from Andrews capable of holding a job. That’s not enough. We want them to graduate Andrews pursuing a life that, in another 10 years, they will look back at and say, ‘This is the life I was meant to live.’”

Student Speaks On Nigeria Kidnappings
Lots of attention has come to Nigeria after the kidnapping of hundreds of schoolgirls by the terror group Boko Haram. A local woman born in Nigeria wants people to know this is not the way it normally is in her native land.

Ejiro Elems came to Andrews University with her family in 2005. She says it's okay for women to get an education in Nigeria. In fact, that's where she got her first college degree.

Elems says men are very respectful and protective of women in Nigeria, so she says the men involved in the kidnappings are not real Nigerians.

Bringing the Real World to Genesis
The late Siegfried Horn, who at the time was dean of the Theological Seminary at Andrews University, authored the following article. In it, we encounter reasons for thinking twice about using biblical chronology as a measure for the age of the earth. Dr. Horn points out that many dates we rely upon prophetically are not universally embraced for their historicity. He further notes that many dates about which there is little controversy are frequently derived by relying upon secular source material—not from Scripture itself.

Paying It Forward - FREE AIR MATTRESS

When I first came to Andrews University, I was faced with a difficult situation that resulted in me having no bed to lay my head. An old friend of mine, through God’s grace and mercy, was ever so kind enough to purchase an air mattress for me. I am no longer in need of it, as I now have a bed, and want to pay my friend's kindness forward. If you are in need of a bed, and currently do not have one due to difficult circumstances, you may have mine FREE of charge, kind of like the way God’s love is. :)

Available today and in excellent condition.
