Photo of the Week: The 2014 Bible Lands tour group smiles in front of the Trajan Temple in Pergamum, where emperors were worshiped as gods (divus, as part of the neokorus competition). The city had a special prestige and place of honor among the Greek cities, and proudly featured the second largest library in the ancient world. It was there that the pergaminum or parchment was developed. And, of course, it is the exalted city in the book of Revelation. IE Browser Vulnerability Resolved

Microsoft has released a patch for the Internet Explorer vulnerability that resulted in the recommendations to the university to restrict its use on April 30, 2014. This patch has been installed on most of the university owned Microsoft systems so that it is safe to resume use of Internet Explorer if desired. However, if you work in a department that provides its own personal computer support, you should check with that person to make sure that the patch has been installed on your computer before using IE.

For any personally owned computer systems, make sure that Windows updates have been applied so that the patch is installed. If you have any questions, please contact the Helpdesk at 471-6016 or by email at helpdesk@andrews.edu

Children Needed

I am an education graduate school here at Andrews and as a requirement for my reading assessments course I need two students- one in K-5 and one in 6-12- to conduct reading assessment on. There are approximately 3 sessions and each session will last between 30-45 minutes. All results will be discussed and explained to parents. Students are needed between Wednesday May 21st and Thursday May 29th. However, I am extremely flexible with meeting times. If you have/know children and are interested and available contact Tamara at gholston@andrews.edu. Thanks.

Bring Your Heart to Work: Invitation to Presentation

Faculty, staff and students are invited to a presentation being held as part of Lakeland HealthCare Hospital Week. The senior leadership team at Lakeland is presenting inspirational speaker Allison Massari, named one of the "Top 10 Best Speakers in North America for "Motivation"" by Meetings & Conventions magazine.

Thursday, May 15, 8:30 a.m. – 10:30 a.m.
Andrews University Howard Performing Arts Center
Berrien Springs

Allison will re-energize, invigorate and motivate our associates. She will talk to us about compassion and illustrate why bringing our hearts to work makes a difference.

Allison Massari knows that you have the power to transform lives. She has been a medical patient and educator, and she understands health care intimately. Allison has experienced firsthand the essential value of what personalized health care delivered by committed providers means when facing the horror of life-threatening conditions. As a burn survivor and traumatic brain injury patient she draws on her personal experiences with empathic devoted healthcare workers. It's a passionate story of finding the internal strength and commitment for hope to flourish - and to inspire the collaboration of teams of medical personnel to profoundly demonstrate the power of authentic patient-provider relationships. Her desire is for you to feel reinvigorated for why you went into healthcare in the first place.

Those interested in attending the event at Andrews should RSVP to Peggy Juhl at pjuhl@lakelandregional.org.

We look forward to seeing you there!

Student Gardens Offers Subscriptions

The Andrews University Student Gardens is gearing up for another season of their Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program. The program, which will run from early June through mid-October, allows community members to sign up for a weekly delivery of fresh local produce brought right to their door.

Each basket includes at least six types of fresh produce selected from more than 120 varieties, such as tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, broccoli, corn, kale, carrots, beans, onions and cucumbers. As add-on options, subscribers can also receive deliveries of fresh flowers and fruit, all grown in the Andrews University Student Gardens. The fruit basket includes blackberries, raspberries, apples, peaches and melons as seasonally available. Cut flowers or potted bouquets are offered as seasonally available. Herbs may also be included as they are available, such as basil, chives, mint, oregano, sage and more. Weekly newsletters accompany the baskets with fresh recipes and helpful information.

Delivery is free within a 20-mile radius of the Andrews University campus and will arrive on Thursdays. Those who prefer may pick up their share on Fridays at the local farm stand on Old U.S. 31 next to Neighbor to Neighbor.

Prices for participation in the CSA program for 18 weeks of delivery are as follows:

- Full share of produce: $600
- Medium share: $450
- Solo share: $350
- Flowers: Additional $60
- Fruits: Additional $120

For information and to sign up for the CSA program, visit augardens.com, call 269-471-6006 or email info@augardens.com.
Student Films for AFM in Benin

by Becky St. Clair

Alex Swensen, junior documentary film major at Andrews University, served as a student missionary with Adventist Frontier Missions (AFM) during the 2014–2015 school year. Based in Berrien Springs, Michigan, AFM recruits one University student each year to serve as a videographer and photographer for specific projects they maintain around the world.

"My role is to assist them with video production," says Swensen. "I'm currently working on three films. I've filmed them all and am now sitting in a little room editing film 40 hours a week."

AFM uses videos as promotional material to demonstrate to potential and current donors what they are doing with donor money. The missionaries on the ground write stories to keep donors updated, but Swensen points out that there's something about a visual medium used to tell stories that allows one to see the story unfolding that is much more powerful.

On a recent AFM trip to Benin, Swensen filmed two projects focusing on the Dendi and Odamari people. These communities are animistic and ritualistic with a strong Muslim influence, so reaching them with Christianity is a challenge.

"Benin is thought to be the birthplace of Voodoo," says Swensen. "They utilize strange ritualistic sacrifices, witch doctors, talisman, and other heathen practices. There is a basic Muslim dislike for Christians in general within these communities, and a lot of supernatural issues going on. It's interesting and sometimes frightening."

After months of scripting the film project and contact with the missionaries on-site, Alex traveled alone to Benin with four checked bags, each weighing 50 pounds, and several carry-ons. His trip was scheduled to last one month, during which time he was expected to gather enough footage to create three 30-minute productions.

"Any time I wasn't sleeping or eating and it was light outside I was shooting," he says. "There's essentially no Internet there; although it does exist it rarely works, and when it does it's extremely slow. It was an interesting change of pace for my life during that month."

Lack of Internet was only one of several challenges Swensen faced while on this project. Weather, the language barrier, lack of showers, and hauling so much luggage on his own were also difficult. The dry season had just started and most days were around 90 degrees. Although there was water, it wasn't heated, and "showers" were just buckets of cold water poured over one's head.

"Also, I don't speak French, which is the most commonly spoken language in Benin," says Swensen. "I worked with translators and a few of the locals were able to speak a little English, but I essentially just learned enough French to tell people that I don't speak French, and to greet people politely."

The challenges were worth it, however, for the experience and the education.

"I love traveling," says Swensen. "It's a great experience to be able to learn about different cultures by immersing yourself in them: seeing the sights, getting to know the people, trying local foods. I thrive on new experiences. The opportunity to hear about life and the world from the perspective of the people of Benin was amazing."

Now back in Berrien Springs, Swensen spends his weeks sifting through hundreds of hours of footage, pulling out clips and segments to tell a story in 30 minutes, three times over. The first of the three videos is completed and will appear on 3ABN on May 30 at 6 p.m. (ET), and will be released on DVD through AFM.

"I really enjoy the process of seeing something like this come together," says Swensen. "Though it's somewhat long and tedious at times, it's a wonderful learning experience for both me and AFM."

Though this was not his first time traveling for a film project, it was his first time traveling abroad for one. And while he does admit it's not work for just anyone, he encourages those who are interested to seriously consider working overseas for a mission organization.

"Do it," he says. "It will totally change your outlook and perspective on life and you will be a better person because of it. You will learn a lot about yourself, other people and God."

Once he finishes his film degree, Swensen hopes to work for the Adventist Church, helping to enhance the way the Church uses media to reach young people.

"What would happen if the Adventist Church took advantage of the fact that so many young people are spending so much time in front of technology?" asks Swensen. "What if they added to the mix something engaging with underlying positive messages and morals? It would change the world. I want to be a part of that change. I feel God has called me to do that. And I'm happy to do any other bits of good I can in the meantime on my journey there."

For more information on AFM and their work in Benin and around the world, visit afmonline.org. For updates on Swensen's Benin and other film projects, visit his website at alexswensen.us.
Envision Magazine Wins National Awards

by Becky St. Clair

Envision, a regular publication produced by the Andrews University Department of Communication, was recently named the best mobile publication in North America by the Associated Church Press (ACP). The award was announced at the oldest and largest Christian Press Association’s annual awards banquet, held in Chicago on April 25.

Envision’s prestigious “Best in Class” honor was one of five awards won by the Andrews University student publication from among 1,200 entries submitted for judging in the yearly Best of the Christian Press Awards 2013.

“We are indeed proud of the achievements of Debbie Michel and her students,” says Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences at Andrews University. “Particularly nice is the involvement of our students and their deserved recognition.”

Other award-winning entries by the student-produced magazine are:

- Award of Excellence for Student Publications (entire Envision staff)
- Award of Excellence for Reporting and Writing: Feature Article, short format magazine (“Uncalled For? Women in the Seminary” by Melodie Roschman)
- Award of Merit for Reporting and Writing: Personally Useful Article (“Don’t Follow Your Dreams: How to be Miserable, Waste Time and Live an Unsatisfying Life” by Melodie Roschman)
- Honorable Mention: Art/Design/Graphics: Design Spread or Story (“From Fear to Eternity” spread by Kristiana Mitacek)

In addition to the printed version of the magazine, Andrews alumnus Kenty Ramdatt designed the mobile app, available on iOS and Android devices.

“This is truly a great achievement,” says Duane McBride, chair of the Department of Behavioral Sciences and research professor of sociology. “We are all benefitted as Andrews faculty and students are recognized for their creative achievements.”

Envision magazine is produced jointly each spring among three classes: Publication Production in the Department of Communication, Studio Photography in the Department of Photography, and Publication Design in the Department of Visual Art & Design.

For more information on the publication, visit andrews.edu/envision.
Center for Reading, Learning and Assessment Receives Grant

By Eloise Ravell

The Andrews University Center for Reading, Learning and Assessment (UCRLA) recently received a grant from Versacare to cover the costs of providing interventions and learning opportunities to disadvantaged reading- and language-challenged individuals. With this project, Andrews can contribute even more to both the local community and local Seventh-day Adventist schools.

The UCRLA addresses learning- and reading-skill needs through classes and tutoring with services available to students, faculty, staff and the community. The center helps clients develop reading skills and provides classes for both individual and small-group support.

"There has always been a need for many people, both children and adults, to learn to read," says Annie Lopez, consultant at UCRLA. "However, many do not have the means to pay for the service. We've tried to write requests for a grant, but got turned down time and time again. So we prayed and we started a fundraiser selling egg rolls to Andrews' students, faculty and staff. We had great support."

After ten years of being denied a grant, they finally received one from Versacare, an organization that annually distributes grants to various supporting ministries and other qualified organizations primarily within the Seventh-day Adventist Church, which supplied computers, laptops, projectors, books, software and proper licensing for the program.

"We want to be able to offer these services to more individuals, so that even the poorest can afford it," continues Lopez. "We will now be able to do assessments and determine what the individual needs at a lower cost."

This grant will allow the center to continue to provide quality care without struggling to make ends meet.

"I am both very grateful and humbled that God answered our prayers," says Lopez. "He is a miracle-working God and He knows the needs of individuals who ask for help. It is my desire that the people we serve will understand God's will for their lives as the world of reading is opened to them."

Leadership Program Students Present Projects

By Eloise Ravell

On April 14, 2014, Andrews University held the Undergraduate Leadership Certificate and Minor Celebration to honor students who completed their Leadership Program requirements.

Students receiving their leadership certificate completed the Fundamentals of Leadership class, engaged in the Leadership practicum every semester, were involved in a Leadership Development project, created a portfolio from leadership implications in their classes and completed their Change Project. There were four students who received a minor in leadership in which they completed three additional classes including Creative Problem Solving, Introduction to Coaching and Theories of Leadership.

"The Change Project is essentially a two-credit course in which students identify something that they believe ought to be different and set out to make it happen," says David Ferguson, director of Undergraduate Leadership Development.

Students have to lead some sort of change using problem solving and creative thinking to better something in their community.

"I started a language program at the Crayon Box, the child care and preschool center at Andrews, to emphasize language development," says Kristin Wolfer, a speech-language pathology and audiology student working on her leadership certificate. "Often times, speech-language pathology and audiology is associated with only speech disorders, and people do not realize the importance of language development in young children."

Ferguson explains that the leadership program helps propel students into their chosen field and sets them apart from individuals with no leadership experience.

"The honest truth is, the world around us is starving for people who can impact their surroundings and lead," say Ferguson. "Leadership is a delivery system for whatever your 'big deal' is. Being a great leader with no mission, no vision, no big 'something,' has no direction. Being a great leader with a flimsy 'something' just takes people to the wrong place more efficiently."

The leadership program not only encourages students to do what they love, but it gives the students an advantage in the workplace with their leadership experience.

"In my perspective, the leadership program is designed to teach young adults the importance of leadership and the concept of individualization," says Wolfer. "The program was beneficial because it showcased a variety of leadership styles and it was encouraging to see the future of young leaders in our institution."

Being an effective leader allows students to reach their educational and professional goals along with pursuing what they are passionate about.

"Part of it is to help our students dig around in who they are, what God is calling them to be, what they're passionate about," continues Ferguson. "We don't just want students to graduate from Andrews capable of holding a job. That's not enough. We want them to graduate Andrews pursuing a life that, in another 10 years, they will look back at and say, 'This is the life I was meant to live.'"

Andrews Collects 10,000 Pounds of Electronics

Green Earth Electronics Recycling would like to thank Andrews University and the local community for keeping over 10,000 pounds of electronic waste out of our local landfills in 2014.

Last week Andrews University hosted an electronics recycling event that generated nearly 8,000 pounds. In addition to hosting this community-wide event, the University has recycled over 2,000 pounds of electronics to date in 2014.

Thanks to everyone who supported this event. Recycling helps preserve the beauty of Southwestern Michigan and our lakeshores for future generations to enjoy.

Please join us again on September 10 for Andrews University’s fall recycling event. Andrews University’s 2014 goal is to save over 30,000 pounds of electronic waste from our local landfills. Help us reach this goal: mark your calendars now!

Green Earth Electronics Recycling, headquartered in St. Joseph, is a local company whose focus is to keep unwanted electronics out of the landfill by using the best practices in information destruction and recycling.

Graduation Weekend

Andrews University's spring graduation will take place May 2–4. In order to provide more seating for graduates' families, Commencement is split into three separate services by school/college. Please make note of when your graduate will be marching to ensure you attend the appropriate service.

Graduation weekend events begin Friday evening, May 2, with Consecration in Pioneer Memorial Church, and continues through the weekend, finishing with commencement services on Sunday, May 4. For details on the various weekend events and each program's time and location, see below or visit andrews.edu/graduation.

June Price, associate dean of Lamson Hall, a women's residence hall at Andrews, will offer the Consecration address titled, "Not So With You" on Friday, May 2, at 8 p.m. in Pioneer Memorial Church.

Price holds a master's degree in counseling with an emphasis in marriage and family therapy from Southern Adventist University (Collegedale, Tenn.). She has been involved in education for many years, teaching religion at the secondary level and psychology at the college level. Price has been at Andrews University for eight years.

On Saturday, May 3, Daniel Jackson, president of the North American Division of Seventh-day Adventists, will present the Baccalaureate address for both the 9 a.m. and 11:45 a.m. services. His presentation for the first service is titled "Beautiful in Time" and for the second service he will present "Just Do It!"

Jackson was elected as president of the North American Division in 2010 by delegates of the world church. A native Canadian, Jackson is a graduate of Canadian University College (Lacombe, Alberta), and has lived and ministered in Canada with the exception of five years of service in the Southern Asia Division of Seventh-day Adventists. He also holds a master's degree in systematic theology from Andrews.

Additional departmental services are planned for Friday and Saturday. They are as follows:

Friday, May 2
School of Business Administration's Ethics Oath Ceremony
11 a.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall
Teacher Dedication Service
5 p.m., Andrews Academy Chapel

Saturday, May 3
Seminary Dedication Service
4 p.m., Seminary Chapel
Department of Religion & Biblical Languages Senior Dedication
4 p.m., Newbold Auditorium, Buller Hall
Department of Nursing Pinning Ceremony
5 p.m., Pioneer Memorial Church
Department of Public Health & Wellness Dedication Service and Reception
5 p.m. Howard Performing Arts Center lobby
Department of Social Work Recognition Service
5:30 p.m. University Towers Auditorium
Open House for Architecture Graduates
6 p.m., School of Architecture, Art & Design Resource Center
Vespers tribute to parents, faculty and students
8:30 p.m., Pioneer Memorial Church
President's reception for graduates & families Immediately following vespers (9:15 p.m.), Great Lakes Room, Dining Services, Campus Center.

On Sunday, May 4, Eric Rajah, co-founder of A Better World and president/owner of Advanced Systems, will be the speaker for the first and second Commencement services at 8:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. in Pioneer Memorial Church. His address is titled "Imagine It Better." Rajah will be receiving an honorary Doctor of Laws during the second Commencement service.

Born in Sri Lanka, Rajah was able to attend a community school administered by a group of Alberta missionaries who had visited in the late 1940s, where he was able to learn English. After his family moved to Canada, Rajah studied business at University of British Columbia and graduated from Canadian University College in 1981. As co-founder of the Alberta-based volunteer-run aid organization A Better World, Rajah and his team have developed projects that have met a range of needs and enlisted the services of various volunteers and experts to train workers in the community. Its focus has been on investing in the future of people in need in developing countries by providing education, health, food security, infrastructure and income-generating projects. By 2005, A Better World had expanded to 15 countries and launched a youth division that works with schools and universities to engage the next generation of community leaders. In recognition of his contribution to society, Rajah was inducted into the Alberta Order of Excellence in 2011, the highest honor the Province of Alberta can bestow upon a citizen.

Professor Develops Early Math Skills Test

Getting help early is critical, but unlike reading, there are very few math assessments for young students that may explain why they struggle to perform calculations such as addition and subtraction.

The remarkably simple test was created by Daniel Ansari, the Canada Research Chair in developmental cognitive neuroscience, and Nadia Nosworthy, now an assistant professor at Michigan’s Andrews University, because there was a need for math assessments in developing countries that did not require a computer to administer.

Bringing the Real World to Genesis

The late Siegfried Horn, who at the time was dean of the Theological Seminary at Andrews University, authored the following article. In it, we encounter reasons for thinking twice about using biblical chronology as a measure for the age of the earth. Dr. Horn points out that many dates we rely upon prophetically are not universally embraced for their historicity. He further notes that many dates about which there is little controversy are frequently derived by relying upon secular source material—not from Scripture itself.

Professor Quoted in Article

A couple articles ago I started a look at some popular food myths that have no real scientific merit. I love these things as they help people make better, more informed choices about food without being mislead by popular hearsay. Here are a few more food myths for you to ponder:

Your body can't use the protein from beans unless you eat them with rice.

This is a myth that I once believed in as it pertained to how we would design complementary ingredients when creating new dishes. Now we know better. Proteins - which our bodies need to make everything from new muscle to hormones - are made up of different combinations of 20 amino acids. Thing is, our bodies can make only 11 of these amino acids; we must get the other nine from food. Animal-based protein-rich foods like eggs and meat provide all nine of these "essential" amino acids, but nearly all plant foods are low in at least one. Experts used to say that to get what your body needs to make proteins, you needed to pair plant-based foods with complementary sets of amino acids - like rice and beans. Now they know that you don't have to eat those foods at the same meal. "If you get a variety of foods throughout the day, they all go into the 'basket' of amino acids that are available for the body to use," says Winston J. Craig, Ph.D., R.D., nutrition department chair at Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Michigan.
A two-minute test may show if a child needs early help in math – and it’s free online

Erin Anderssen

It’s basic math: seven is larger than five. Three dots represent less than eight dots. But what if some kindergarten students miss this step? Eventually, they land in Grade 3, facing multiplication, and math is a muddle.

Research has shown that a strong understanding of numerical quantity – both in symbols and actual numbers – is an important early predictor for future math success. That’s because math is a subject that builds upon itself; students who miss a key step quickly fall behind.

More Related to this Story

Getting help early is critical, but unlike reading, there are very few math assessments for young students that may explain why they struggle to perform calculations such as addition and subtraction.

Now, Researchers at the University of Western Ontario have developed a two-minute screening test to determine whether students as early as senior kindergarten have a handle on numeracy skills – and to catch those who may be showing signs of early learning problems or who just need extra help.

It’s easy to administer, and most of all – given how much both schools and parents pay for testing these days – it’s free: The researchers have put it online for anyone to download.

The Toronto District School Board is midway through a three-year trial using the screening test for senior kindergarten students at seven schools, though early results suggest a link between how children score and their Grade One math performance. The board will expand the study to 30 schools in September. If the test proves to be an evidence-based assessment tool, says Roula Anastasakos, the the school board’s executive superintendent of research and information services, “we would be using it to flag children who may potentially develop issues.”

The remarkably simple test was created by Daniel Ansari, the Canada Research Chair in developmental cognitive neuroscience, and Nadia Nosworthy, now an assistant professor at Michigan’s Andrews University, because there was a need for math assessments in developing countries that did not require a computer to administer. It can be downloaded at numeracyscreener.org, along with specific instructions to be followed in explaining the test to the student.

Given to children from senior kindergarten to Grade 3, the object is to identify which of two numbers or symbols are larger on a series of worksheets. Students answer as many questions as they can in two minutes, and Ansari recommends the screening test be given twice with at least a one-week break in-between. The results can then be entered into the website to see how the score compares with a standardized sample, created by Ansari and his research team after giving the test to hundreds of Southern Ontario students. (The scores that are entered into the site are not currently saved.)

“If you are not very good on this test, you are going to find learning arithmetic very hard because when you learn to calculate you need to know the meaning of the digits and relate those digits to one another,” Ansari says. “To us, as adults, it seems such an easy thing to learn. But if you think about it as a child growing up, when they first encounter numeric symbols they are just meaningless shapes, and then they have to connect those symbols to the quantity they represent.”
But poor performance on the test, Ansari cautions, is only an indication that a student may need extra help – it’s doesn’t diagnose a learning disability or replace more extensive testing. In an analysis, the test was only about 70-per-cent accurate in discriminating between students who had dyscalculia (a math disability defined as a difficult to understand or manipulate numbers) and those who didn’t.

“In two minutes, you simply cannot diagnose a learning disability,” Ansari says. The test is “just one building block in math.” Still, parents might use it to determine whether additional testing is needed. (And because it’s easily administered, the test may also be used to see how much students improved over the school year.) “It’s not going to tell the whole picture, but it’s going to tell you something. It can be a starting point to paying more attention to that child.”

The Toronto District School Board is beginning to test-drive some possible interventions for students struggling in this area, which Ansari hopes may eventually also be made available on the website.

His team is also considering whether there are other quick assessments to create a more complete “suite” of math tests that teachers might use in the classroom to identify struggling students, even as early as junior kindergarten.

BERRIEN SPRINGS - Nurses, doctors and other hospital personnel don't always get to hear the words "thank you" from patients, but they did Thursday from motivational speaker and burn survivor Allison Massari on behalf of all patients.

Massari, who survived a fiery car crash in 1998 and spent more than a year in the hospital, gave a moving talk to Lakeland Health System employees Thursday morning in a presentation at the Howard Performing Arts Center at Andrews University. Her speech was part of Lakeland's celebration of National Hospital Week.

The California resident told Lakeland workers their efforts are appreciated even if patients don't have the voice or the opportunity to express it. She explained how much it meant to have a nurse touch her hand or say a few words during her months of rehabilitation and recovery.

"I remember the kindness of the nurses. So many times they would stop and just hold my hand," she said. "Those memories have never left me. I was too drained and weak to say a word. ... I'm sure there are many times that you all have gone the extra mile and no one said thanks. You gave anyway. So on behalf of all of them, I say thank you.

"Sometimes you're so stressed and you think there's not enough time, but you can make a difference in a blink of an eye with a smile or a squeeze of a hand. ..."

"You are the healers of the world whether you are a nurse or a technician or other healthcare worker."

She said compassionate care is about workers being kind and being experts in their fields.

And compassion can be tiring.

"Compassion fatigue is very real," she said. "We have to fill up and nourish the people who are giving care. ... The people here have the most noble jobs in caring for people when they're most vulnerable."

Massari divides her time between art and public speaking. She spoke at length about her experiences and how her recovery taught her so much about life.

She began speaking publicly five years ago. She said she had to overcome fear and anger as she rebuilt her life. She discovered the importance of compassion, love and forgiveness.

One part of rebuilding her life involved finding the man who saved her. She described how one man walked through the flames and pulled her from the burning car while everyone else stood and stared. She was able to find him and hear his story about how saving her had changed his own life.

"What saved me was guts. I learned you can be tenderhearted and fierce," she said. "I learned that from so much pain came so many gifts ... I really believe that life keeps pushing me up to new places to learn..."
to love. It's never ending and it's exhausting but I look at it like everything has a lesson. I still say yes to life."
BERRIEN SPRINGS - Envision, a regular publication produced by the Andrews University Department of Communication, has been named the best mobile publication in North America by the Associated Church Press (ACP), the university announced.

The award was announced at the Christian Press Association's annual awards banquet in Chicago on April 25.

Envision's "Best in Class" honor was one of five awards won by the Andrews University student publication from among 1,200 entries submitted for judging in the annual Best of the Christian Press Awards 2013.

"We are indeed proud of the achievements of Debbie Michel and her students," said Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences. "Particularly nice is the involvement of our students and their deserved recognition."

Other award-winning entries by the student-produced magazine are:

- Award of Excellence for Student Publications - entire Envision staff;
- Award of Excellence for Reporting and Writing: Feature Article, short format magazine - "Uncalled For? Women in the Seminary" by Melodie Roschman;
- Award of Merit for Reporting and Writing: Personally Useful Article - "Don't Follow Your Dreams: How to be Miserable, Waste Time and Live an Unsatisfying Life" by Melodie Roschman;
- Honorable Mention: Art/Design/Graphics: Design Spread or Story - "From Fear to Eternity" spread by Kristiana Mitacek.

In addition to the printed version, Andrews alumnus Kenty Ramdatt designed the mobile app, available on iOS and Android devices.

"This is truly a great achievement," said Duane McBride, chair of the Department of Behavioral Sciences and research professor of sociology. "We are all benefitted as Andrews faculty and students are recognized for their creative achievements."

Envision magazine is produced jointly each spring among three classes: Publication Production in the Department of Communication, Studio Photography in the Department of Photography, and Publication Design in the Department of Visual Art & Design.

She says her husband goes back to Nigeria to visit from time to time, and she's just hoping there can be peace again soon.

Dr. Horn points out that many dates we rely upon prophetically are not universally embraced for their historicity. He further notes that many dates about which there is little controversy are frequently derived by relying upon secular source material—not from Scripture itself. Most importantly, he notes that the earliest periods referenced in the Genesis account represent some of the more tenuous periods when it comes to dating. In many cases it depends upon the translation being used (such as the Hebrew Massoretic text, the Septuagint, or the Samaritan Pentateuch), with wide dating variations existing between them. Such reasons form the basis for rejecting the credibility of the chronology published by Archbishop James Ussher that found its way into the margins of the King James Bible from 1679 until more recent times. While many Adventist are resistant to cosmological and geological data that would seem to point quite compellingly to massive expanses of time, generally do so on the basis of Ellen White’s understanding even though it is widely recognized that she was indebted to her own YEC views as a result of the widely circulated views of James Ussher. For those interested in some of the details of this discussion, this article is a good read.

Death of Gary Land

Gary G. Land of Berrien Center, Michigan, died on Saturday, April 26, at 12:48 p.m. at the St. Joseph Medical Center in Mishawaka, Indiana, after a long battle with cancer. A memorial service will be held at Pioneer Memorial Church on Friday, May 2, at 10 a.m. Please remember his family in your thoughts and prayers during this difficult time.

In lieu of flowers, the Land family has requested that gifts be made to the Andrews University Department of History & Political Science. Gifts may be given online at www.andrews.edu/go/give/history or mailed to the Office of Development. Please make checks payable to Andrews University and include "History Dept" on the memo line.

Land joined the faculty of Andrews University in 1970 as a teacher in the Department of History & Political Science. He served as chair of the department for more than two decades. He retired as emeritus professor of history.

For his undergraduate studies, Land attended Pacific Union College, Angwin, California, and graduated in 1966 with a Bachelor of Arts. He continued his studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara, California, and completed a Master of Arts in 1967 and a PhD in 1973.

Throughout his service at the University, he served as an instructor in history, assistant and associate professor of history. He also worked in administration and served as a graduate programs director and assistant dean to the College of Arts & Sciences. He became chair of the Department of History & Political Science in 1988.

Service was very important to Land. He was a member of the Berrien County Historical Association Board of Directors and served the group since 1983. He was active in the church as a Sabbath School teacher, leader and director, among other service activities. Land was also a member of the organizing committee for the Ellen White Project as well as the Spectrum editorial board.

An avid writer, Land edited several academic/professional books and has published three of his own. His writings appeared in many professional journals and periodicals, including the Journal of Adventist Education, College and University Dialogue, Spectrum: A Quarterly Journal of the Association of Adventist Forums and Adventist Heritage, among others. He also contributed chapters to books and wrote book reviews for academic publications. He was a co-editor of Ellen Harmon White: American Prophet, a new biography to be released by Oxford University Press in May 2014.

House for sale

The cutest interior redo you ever did see! Especially the bathrooms and the master bedroom... Don't miss it! Also, you can walk to everything in the Village: all the public schools, the Adventist elementary school and church, the library, restaurants, grocery store, hardware--everything! And you can utilize the school grounds for exercising, biking, playgrounds, and tennis. Though the garage is a one car, it is oversized with plenty of room for storage.

Summer Apt Rental for Male!
I am looking for a male to sublet one of the rooms of the two-bedroom basement apartment I am currently leasing until the end of July 2014. If you would like to then renew the lease for next year, you will be the first in line to do so!

This is a two-bedroom basement apartment with full access to the kitchen, living room and bathroom. It includes a twin sized bed, a nightstand, glass desk and couch. It is located on University Blvd at about a two-minute walk to PMC. Very close to campus and very affordable. You will be sharing the apt with my friend that is staying for the summer. The all-inclusive price is only $245, and that literally includes everything.

I will be graduating on May 4 and going back home about a couple days after that, so the place will be available on either the 5th or 6th of May. Contact me as soon as possible so I can set you up for a quick tour of the place to see if you are interested! Thank you.

Licensed Clinical Counselor Needed

Holbrook Indian School (HIS) is seeking to hire a licensed clinical counselor to provide much needed treatment plans, drug and alcohol counseling in individual and group sessions, and guidance for students who have, or continue to experience abuse and/or neglect.

HIS is an accredited 1–12th grade boarding school—near but not on the Navajo Reservation—operated directly by the Pacific Union Conference. As such, faculty and staff members receive remuneration and benefits according to the policies employed by all schools in the Pacific Union—it is not a self-supporting school. The current population at HIS is 60 students, split evenly between grades 1–8 and 9–12, with an additional seven students at our one-teacher school in Chinle, Arizona.

For more information, please contact Pedro L. Ojeda at 928-241-3356, principal@hissda.org. Our website is

Massage Therapist
Are the stresses of work and study getting to you? Would you like to boost your athletic performance? Do you have a muscle ache that just won't go away?

Ray McAllister, an Andrews alumnus who despite total blindness is now a licensed massage therapist, invites you to visit Healing's Rays Massage. Proficient in deep tissue, sports and relaxation massage, Ray can relieve aches, help you tone muscles, and give you the energy boost to finish studies. He also offers hydrotherapy, hot stone massage, reflexology and now hot bamboo massage. His wife, Sally, is a certified aromatherapist and will be present for female clients. She sells home-made aromatherapy blends.

Introductory cost is only $25 for your first hour, $15 per half hour, for students all the time. Contact Ray for regular, competitive rates. 30 no-cost massages are available for those with Adventist Risk Management insurance, including sponsored seminary students.
