Photo of the Week: Alf Andvik ('77) took ground school in 1976 while studying at Andrews. His dream was to one day have his pilot license, but he wasn't able to start flight school as a student. After graduating, he married Deby Makos ('78) and they moved to his homeland Norway. Alf took ground school a second time while doing his military service and the Andviks were co-owners of 2 planes during their 22 years in Norway. Moving to the U.S. in 2000 so their children could attend an Adventist university, Deby began working for Andrews. She recently discovered that the Aviation Department offered Discovery Flights and decided that was the perfect surprise birthday gift for Alf: his first opportunity to actually fly a plane. For more information on Discovery Flights, contact the Department of Aviation at 269-471-3547 or airinfo@andrews.edu. (Photo by Christa McConnell, IMC student photographer)

Gazebo Closed Saturday Nights
Dear Resident Hall Students,

Due to the low number of customers who use the Gazebo on Sabbath evenings, they will now be closing for Sabbath supper. However, they will be providing a small number of box suppers to each residence hall for those in need of a meal. These will be at no cost and will be given on a first-come first-serve basis.

If you are on a meal plan a box supper will be set aside for you until 7 PM tomorrow evening. If you choose to eat somewhere else and do not come to pick it up by that time, we will make it available to others who would like it.

Thank you for your understanding of this change. Feel free to speak with a dean if you have any questions or concerns.

AICER Symposium on Teacher Education Curriculum at Two Black Colleges

Andrews International Center for Educational Research (AICER) is inviting students and faculty to attend a presentation entitled, "The Impact of Accreditation on the Teacher Education Curriculums at Two Historically Black Colleges from 1920-1940."

Presenter: Denise Shaver, Seminary Assessment Coordinator, Andrews University Institutional Effectiveness

In this presentation, Ms. Shaver will argue that historically teachers served a pivotal role in the African American community. Since the education program from which teachers emerge influences their social, political, and economic outlook, it is important to understand some of the internal and external impetus for curricula changes in the teacher education programs during the accreditation process at historically black colleges.

Venue: Bell Hall, Room 13. June 18, 2012 at 12:00 noon

Online participants need to login as 'Guest' at https://andrews.adobeconnect.com/_a877709416/research/ or http://www.andrews.edu/sed/aicer/researchwebinars/ whether or not they are registered Andrews students.

Writing Presentation Proposals

Andrews International Center for Educational Research (AICER) invites you to attend a research symposium on, Tuesday, June 17, 2014 at 12:00 Noon

Title: Writing Presentation Proposals?
Presenter: Dr. Larry Burton, Professor of Teaching, Learning and Curriculum. Editor Journal of Research on Christian Education.

Would you like to write a successful conference proposal? During this session, Dr. Burton will share practical guidelines that are applicable to different conference settings. To benefit from the symposium, attendees are encouraged to bring "requests for conference proposals (proposal guidelines)" or proposals in process. Dr. Burton will provide individual feedback as needed to session participants after his presentation. This work session is particularly targeted to faculty and students who have presented papers at conferences or wish to present papers at a conference, although everyone will benefit from the session.

Face-to-face participants meet in Bell Hall.
Online participants to login as "Guest" at https://andrews.adobeconnect.com/_a877709416/research/ or http://www.andrews.edu/sed/aicer/researchwebinars/ whether or not they are registered Andrews students.

Mobile Farm Market Begins

By Becky St. Clair

On June 9, 2014, the Mobile Farm Market, provided by the Andrews University Student Gardens, opened for business for the first time, selling fresh produce in Benton Harbor for six hours.

The farmer’s market on wheels is a program sponsored by the Andrews University Student Gardens and partially funded by a Michigan State grant as part of the Be Healthy Berrien initiative. In partnership with the Berrien County Health Department and Planning Commission, the YMCA, Lakeland Healthcare, the cities of Buchanan, Niles and Stevensville, and United Way, the Gardens will be helping host a mobile farm market at strategic locations within the county in an effort to bring affordable healthy food to the community.

“Berrien County has identified seven locations within its borders with a high concentration of low income families who have limited access to produce and groceries,” explains Stephen Erich, mobile farm market coordinator. “These areas are classified as food deserts.”

The food truck takes fresh produce to specific locations within the neighborhoods in these “food deserts,” and sells it to local families for affordable prices. The mobile farm market accepts Bridgecard food stamps, cash and credit/debit cards.

“Everything we’re doing is working toward making Berrien County a healthier place,” says Erich. “We’re not just providing local families with tangible things; we’re also helping to educate them. It’s about building community and taking care of our neighbors.”

The Gardens also have a local intern who accompanies them to the mobile farm market locations. The intern will learn how to operate the market so they can create similar programs in their own neighborhood, all while gaining business skills and work experience. The Gardens also have about 20 student employees during the summer, planting, tending, harvesting and delivering to those signed up for its produce subscription service.

In addition to the partnerships they’ve established through the county, each location for the mobile farm market represents a positive relationship with a local community center or church.

“Providing good, organic food to the community at an affordable price makes me feel good about what I’m doing,” says Arthur Mulyono, gardens manager. “I’m giving something back to my community and serving others. That’s what being a Christian is all about.”

Though the program is in an experimental phase this summer, if the response is positive they may do it again in the future.

“It’s a wonderful witnessing tool,” says Erich. “Health is emphasized a lot within the Adventist Church. It’s important for us as Christians and as young people within the Church to encourage healthy living and do what we can to provide that opportunity for those in our community who may not otherwise be able to manage it.”

Piper Archer Joins Fleet
By Melodie Roschman

Andrews University announces the addition of a new airplane to its Department of Aviation, bringing the school's operational fleet to seven planes. The new plane, a single engine Archer TX, will be used by the department in its Aviation Flight program, which trains private commercial and airline transport pilots, and flight instructors as well as mission pilots.

A small crowd gathered on the tarmac on the morning of Wednesday, June 11, 2014 to watch the plane make its landing after a two-day flight from the Piper factory in Vero Beach, Florida. Despite a crosswind and rain earlier in the day, Duane Habenicht, chair of the Department of Aviation and the head pilot for the flight, brought the plane in for a smooth landing at 9:45 a.m.

As soon as the engines were stilled, the onlookers crowded around the new acquisition, eager to take in the plane's 35.5-ft wingspan, run their hands along the blue-and-white paint job, and see the brand-new glass cockpit, the most exciting feature.

A glass cockpit is an instrument array that uses computer screens instead of traditional steam gauges—and this one, says Jared White, recruiting & marketing coordinator, means a crucial improvement to the flight training program. "It finally puts us at a competition standard with other aviation departments in the area. Having a brand new aircraft with an all-glass cockpit prepares us for the future, since that's where aviation is going."

The Piper Archer TX, a single-engine piston-powered trainer with four seats, is part of a move by the Department of Aviation to change to a Piper fleet from its aging Cessna fleet, which dates back to the 1970s. Andrews already owns a Piper Arrow and a twin-engine Piper Seminole, and another Piper Archer will arrive next month. "It's on the assembly line now," Jim Doran, chief flight instructor, says excitedly. "This is the first time we've had a new airplane since 1984. It's a big deal; it means the University is invested in the program and they're strongly supporting it."

Pipers were chosen specifically, Habenicht explains, for financial reasons. Piper offered the University a package deal on the two new Archers, which were paid for through a combination of donations, selling older aircraft, and University support. Having a fleet consisting primarily of airplanes from one manufacturer will reduce overhead costs—and new equipment will save money in the long run. "It's a nice, new airplane so things don't have to be repaired as often," says Darrel Penney, assistant professor of flight and co-pilot for the Archer's first flight. "It's a step into the future for Andrews."

"I think it's a great improvement to the fleet," agrees William Stanley, chief dispatcher. "They've been needing this for a long time, so now the kids can get some really up-to-date training. The previous Cessna fleet, they're good trainers, but they're all over 30 years old...This is a Godsend to us."
June Board Report

By Melodie Roschman

Enrollment challenges and progress on the new Health & Wellness Center were highlighted at President Niels-Erik Andreasen's board briefing held on Monday, June 2, 2014.

In the President's Report, Andreasen reviewed notable news incidents on campus during the year and reaffirmed the University's commitment to the fundamentals of good quality Adventist education before turning his attention to progress on the planned Health & Wellness Center. Fundraising is going well, he noted, stating that they now have raised about two-thirds of their $18 million goal in cash and pledges.

In the Provost's Report, Andrea Luxton outlined progress on six strategic initiatives, asking "What Have We Done?" for each and then setting future goals. Each initiative focuses on a major theme: nurturing excellence in pedagogy and research, creating a strong and better-planned community, extending the reach of Andrews at all levels, maintaining spiritual foundations and growth on campus, ensuring financial resilience, and building a campus infrastructure that will support expectations for ten years in the future. She mentioned several practical accomplishments, including increased student and faculty publication, integration of Griggs University into Andrews University, and the development of several departmental service projects and social consciousness initiatives.

Vice President for Enrollment Randy Graves presented the board with the Undergraduate Enrollment Report, which addressed declining enrollment across the United States and at Andrews University. He began his presentation by noting that nationwide enrollment was down 2.3 percent across all sectors, and that Andrews is located in a region of the United States that is experiencing a decline in high school graduates. North American Division high school enrollment is at its lowest in ten years, with less than 3,500 students per grade, and a recent study indicates that only 7.8 percent of Adventists have children in the Seventh-day Adventist school system. All of these factors have contributed to Andrews experiencing lower than expected enrollment this year—a factor that led to $1.3 million less tuition than was originally budgeted.

In his briefing to the faculty and staff, Andreasen reviewed Graves's recommendations for increasing enrollment in light of these statistics: offering new scholarships, making contact with Andrews easier and more congenial, and working harder to communicate with all interested applicants. He noted that, in a market where the average Adventist family income is decreasing and parents are focused on receiving maximum value for their money, the personal touch is vital. Andreasen encouraged faculty members to call prospective students offering information and assistance, and noted that he was spending the next few days hand-signing a thousand letters to accepted students.

Andreasen also explained in his briefing how the enrollment decrease and an increase in fringe benefits, including medical expenses, affected the budget. Andrews did not go into debt this year, he explained, solely because "we are good bankers." The return on University investments compensated for the deficit in operations.

Andreasen concluded his address by making reference to Andrews's impact outside of the campus gates. He announced University participation in a 40-year partnership with Berrien County to improve local sewer and water lines with the ultimate goal of increasing the standard of living in the community. While this project represents a significant financial investment, he explained that the cost will not be problematic due to its spread-out nature, and emphasized the importance of Andrews University being "a good neighbor" to the community. Andreasen also made reference to what he called a flood of recent attention paid to LGBT issues prompted by the campus newspaper and two forums. While maintaining agreement with the Seventh-day Adventist Church's official stance on the issue, Chair of the Board Ben Schoun reiterated Andrews's commitment to creating an atmosphere of "care and compassion towards all students."

The board also voted the following new appointments and changes in rank/position:

Staff Appointments

Renato Mejia, Graduate Marketing and Recruiting Coordinator; Darla Smothers-Morant, Student Success Advisor

Faculty Appointments

College of Arts & Sciences
Paul Matychuk, associate professor of English/interim director of Center for Intensive English Program, Department of English

The Reflect Project

by Melodie Roschman

"If you could write a letter to your younger self, what would you say?" This is the question that commercial photographer and Andrews alumnus Trent Bell asks in "REFLECT: Convicts' letters to their younger selves," a 2013 portrait series that has since gained international recognition.

Bell, 37, received his master's degree in architecture from Andrews in 2003, but soon decided he preferred commercial photography. He now lives in Biddeford, Maine, and works as a personal and architectural photographer, with work published in publications such as "Conde Nast Traveler," "The New York Times," and "Good Housekeeping."

The decision to undertake "REFLECT" was motivated by personal circumstances. In early 2013, only a few days after his son was born, Bell received news that a friend of his, an educated professional with a wife and four children, had been sentenced to 36 years in prison. The news came as a shock and a wakeup call; a reminder of how quickly one bad decision could change his whole life.

"There were times when my son would look up and smile at me," Bell reflects on his website, "and the finality of my friend's situation would rush into my head and I would hear a cold thin voice say: '...there, but for the grace of God, go I...'"

With this in mind, Bell approached the Maine prison system with a proposal: he would photograph portraits of convicts, then have them write heartfelt letters to their younger selves, pre-crime, and superimpose the text over the portraits. He received permission, and in August 2013 he shot twelve portraits of inmates at Maine State Prison in Warren, Maine. After the photo shoot, he returned to the studio and spent hours painstakingly editing the photos and overlaying each man's handwriting over his portrait.

"There was a moment when I first saw the text overlaid around the inmates and the project really came together," Bell recalls. "It was an immediate realization that something powerful had been created."

Bell printed the portraits to be almost life-size, and displayed them in a gallery showing in February 2014 at Engine Gallery in Biddeford, Maine, to overwhelmingly positive responses from family and friends of the subjects, as well as the general public. In a video on Bell's website, visitors reflect on the portraits, describing them as "extremely powerful," "very touching," and bringing them "to tears."
The father of "Brandon," the youngest prisoner in the series, reflects that in viewing the gallery, "the biggest emotion [for me] is pride...[in light of] the mistake that my son made to get himself in prison—he's done so many other things to help others in his situation, and as I see his portrait on the wall and the letter that he wrote, it's sincere and it's my son, it's all him."

The project has since been profiled by national and international newsagents in North America, the UK and Australia, and Bell plans to develop it into a documentary and possibly a further photo series applying the concept to other aspects of society.

"The goal of this project," he explains, "was to encourage conversation; to create empathy, understanding and a heightened experience of standing in someone else's shoes."

View the whole project on Bell's website .

New Chaplain Named

Following a comprehensive search process that included participants from the University, campus church, and Lake Union Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, Andrews University announces the selection of a new University Chaplain. June Price, currently the associate dean of Lamson Hall on the Andrews University campus, is already beginning a transition to her new role and will be fully engaged as University Chaplain on July 1, 2014.

"We are delighted to provide an opportunity for June to share with our entire campus community the spiritual gifts and leadership she has so effectively honed and demonstrated over the last decade in her ministry to Lamson residents," says Frances Faehner, vice president of Student Life at Andrews University and chair of the Search Committee.

Price graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor's degree in psychology from Southern Adventist University in Collegedale, Tennessee. She also holds a master's degree in counseling with an emphasis in marriage and family therapy, also from SAU. Prior to her arrival at Andrews in 2006, Price was the women's dean at Bass Memorial Adventist Academy in Mississippi, where she also taught Bible and psychology. Previously she served as a school counselor and practiced as a clinician providing individual as well as marriage and family therapy.

During her tenure in Lamson Hall, Price designed a host of vibrant initiatives to help residents deepen their relationship with God. Students as well as colleagues have found Price to be a valued and trusted spiritual mentor.
"June brings the heart of a pastor, the skills of a dean and the passion of a spiritual leader to her new calling," says Dwight Nelson, senior pastor at Pioneer Memorial Church at Andrews University. "We're excited about this new chapter and eager to partner with our new lead chaplain."

Price fills this role following the departure of Chaplain Japhet De Oliveira, who left the position last January to pastor in Boulder, Colorado.

"My passion in life is the pursuit of God and His transforming power in our lives through changing the way we think," says Price. "I am humbled and honored to serve the family of God as chaplain at Andrews University, and I pray that the Father will make me useful and pleasing to His Kingdom agenda."

"Please join us in prayer and support for Chaplain Price and the Campus Ministries team as we work together in pursing God's dreams and plans for Andrews University," says Andrea Luxton, provost.

Renaissance Kids Architecture Camp

Andrews University School of Architecture, Art & Design invites the community to register soon for its annual Renaissance Kids summer program in which kids ages 5–15 are provided with fun, creative and educational hands-on activities relating to architecture. Space is limited and the first session begins next Monday, June 9. The theme this summer is "Design for All People" and will encourage kids to place themselves in the shoes of architects who cater to clients' unique needs. Architects realize the vast array of differences between people and must be able to accommodate everyone. Renaissance Kids participants are encouraged to use their imagination to problem-solve, draw and build throughout the program.

"I look forward to the annual challenges of developing a new and unique curriculum for the sessions of varied age groups," says Mark Moreno, associate professor of architecture, and developer/director of Renaissance Kids.

During the event, guests will attend the class to serve as 'clients' for which the students will design. If you or someone you know are interested in volunteering to be a 'client' for this event, contact Moreno at 269-932-5055 or mmoreno@andrews.edu.

This year the Krasl Art Center has approved two projects in which Renaissance Kids attendees will be involved. The first is a memorial art installation that will involve kids in each session. The second is this year's build project for Session 7 kids; a sitting space of benches and a bench swing hanging between masonry piers.

The camp will be held at the architecture building, located at 8435 E. Campus Circle Dr. The event schedule is as follows:
Session 1: June 9–13, 8:30 a.m.–12 p.m., ages 7–9, $150
Session 2: June 9–13, 1:45–5:15 p.m., ages 10–12, $150
Session 3: June 16–20, 8:30 a.m.–12 p.m., ages 10–12, $150
Session 4: June 16–20, 1:45–5:15 p.m., ages 7–9, $150
Session 5: June 23–27, 8:30–11:30 a.m., ages 5–6, $150
Session 6: June 23–27, 1:45–5:15 p.m., ages 7–9, $150 (held at Krasl Art Center in St. Joseph, Mich.)
Session 7: July 7–18, 9 a.m.–4 p.m., ages 12–16, $270 (week 1 held at Andrews University, week 2 location to be determined for hands-on construction project)

"Renaissance Kids is an absolute joy to operate," says Moreno. "My staff and I get to watch the kids imaginatively create designs and take on educational challenges all while having fun. The kids get to draw, build and create in a friendly environment. Together, we get to build lasting memories and produce artifacts in the community landscape that could last for generations."

For more information and registration forms, visit andrews.edu/go/renaissancekids.

Professor Creates Early Math Assessment Test

by Becky St. Clair

Nadia Nosworthy, assistant professor of education and developmental psychology, recently completed her doctoral thesis, a project that yielded a math skills assessment test for children as young as five.

"The test can be used even with kindergarten students, and it already shows a promising predictability for future math performance," explains Nosworthy. "Students who do well on this test tend to do better later on in math."

With a background in elementary education, Nosworthy felt a strong desire to create a project that would benefit both students and teachers. She wanted to develop a tool that was user-friendly, efficient, low-cost and reliable. Right now there are not very many standardized tests for math in general, and those that are available tend to test higher level skills.

"You have to start with the basics," says Nosworthy. "Math is an accumulative skill. For example, we know kids have to know letters and their sounds before they can comprehend words and sentences. Current math skills tests are basically asking kids to read sentences before we've taught them letters. You have to start from the beginning."

Nosworthy developed the test alongside her colleague at the University of Western Ontario in Canada, Daniel Ansari, Canada Research Chair in developmental cognitive neuroscience. The test was created partially based on the idea that developing countries needed a way to administer a math skills test without a computer. Once completed, the project was piloted in Cambodia, India, Kenya, and The Gambia. During the 2011–2012 school year the test was used in seven Canadian schools, with hopes of stretching that number to 30 this coming fall.

"Best case scenario, in two years we'll have better indicators as to the effectiveness of this test in predicting future math achievement," says Nosworthy. "More than likely, however, it will take several years, since the kids who have already taken the test in kindergarten need to continue to demonstrate their math skills before we can see if their initial test scores were able to accurately predict their later abilities."

The two-minute test has standardized instructions and two sections. The first section focuses on digits and recognizing how many each number symbolizes, therefore testing a child's ability to acknowledge which digits are bigger and which are smaller. The second section tests a child's ability to estimate and compare quantities
Alumnus "Exudes Confidence"

Youssef Yomtoob has yet to meet a school district on which he can’t have a positive effect.

The new School City of East Chicago superintendent, affectionately nicknamed “Dr. Joe” by those who know him, told the crowd of parents, teachers and administrators that everyone “is in it together” and that there will be no "they and us" once he takes over the reins July 1. The School Board voted unanimously to offer Yomtoob a five-year contract at a special meeting Friday night, the terms of which will be discussed during a public hearing at the June 30 meeting.

Yomtoob, whose career spanned 50 years before he retired from Hawthorn School District in Vernon Hills, Illinois, said his philosophy stems from research at a district he was in during the 1970s that revealed all students, despite their racial or economic backgrounds, have the potential to succeed. He carried those principles everywhere he went and said he left each place a little better than he found it.

Physics Alum Highlighted in Nature

Dewey Murdick (BS Physics 1999) made the news last month in the article "Text-mining offers clues to success" appearing in the May 2014 issue of Nature, an International Weekly Journal of Science of high repute. The article highlighted one of the many projects Murdick manages for the U.S. Intelligence Advanced Research Projects Activity (IARPA) Foresight and Understanding with Scientific Exposition (FUSE) program.

“So far, it has performed more than 2 million analyses of past data to pick out key advances,” says Murdick in reference to his innovative software that reviews multilingual data from scientific, technical, and patent literature. "From these, it has identified several hundred indicators, such as new collaborations or expressions of excitement in text, that highlight emerging areas now."

FUSE seeks to build capabilities and methodologies that assist a diverse set of analysts (e.g., national security, research evaluation, and business intelligence) in prioritizing new claims, methods, and technologies from around the world.

To learn more about this new software and its significant predictive power which puts it on track to forecast the launch of new products and other applications, refer to the full-text article.

Benton Harbor: Healthy & Mobile

The Be Healthy Berrien mobile farm market, a partnership with Andrews University's student garden, is ready to roll, starting today.

The truck, carrying locally grown produce to communities with limited access to fresh foods, will run five days a week to seven locations, reported Nicki Britten, Berrien County Health Department's director of community health.

Garth Woodruff, a professor of horticulture at Andrews who oversees the student garden, said 16 items, including Swiss chard, collard greens, kale, romaine lettuce, cucumbers and herbs, will be available in the first weeks.

That will grow to as many as 40 as the season progresses, he said.

Debbie Michel Interviewed by Local Paper

Debbie Michel has gone from growing up in Jamaica to working as a producer on various NBC news programs in New York City to now living in Berrien Springs.

Prof Talks On Food Consumption vs. Production
“It’s pretty well known that we’re second in crop diversity only to California,” said Lee LaVanway, president, CEO and market master of the Benton Harbor Fruit Exchange. “As a temperate zone, we’re probably number one.”

As such, residents and tourists should be able to find a cornucopia of Michigan produce in every supermarket in the region, but taking a trip to any of the local groceries will show you that, in 2014, such is not the case. Rather, finding produce advertised as “Michigan grown” is pretty rare—even during the peaks of the various harvest seasons.

“We have a $500 million gap between what we consume and what we produce in this county,” explained Mark Moreno, associate professor of architecture at Andrews University and founding director of the New Berrien Food Foundation. “We’re spending $680 million, and we’re producing less than $100 million.”

Business Alumnus Named CEO of Medical Center

John Harding has been named the interim CEO of Phoebe Sumter Medical Center, effective June 9.

“We are very pleased to have John come aboard and serve as the interim CEO at Phoebe Sumter as we continue to search for a permanent person for that role,” said Joe Austin, chief operating officer (COO) of the Phoebe Putney Health System. “He brings a wealth of knowledge and has tremendous success in leadership in the healthcare industry, and he will be a welcomed asset not only to Phoebe Sumter but to the community as a whole.”
EAST CHICAGO — Youssef Yomtoob has yet to meet a school district on which he can’t have a positive effect.

The new School City of East Chicago superintendent, affectionately nicknamed “Dr. Joe” by those who know him, told the crowd of parents, teachers and administrators that everyone “is in it together” and that there will be no “they and us” once he takes over the reins July 1. The School Board voted unanimously to offer Yomtoob a five-year contract at a special meeting Friday night, the terms of which will be discussed during a public hearing at the June 30 meeting.

Yomtoob, whose career spanned 50 years before he retired from Hawthorn School District in Vernon Hills, Illinois, said his philosophy stems from research at a district he was in during the 1970s that revealed all students, despite their racial or economic backgrounds, have the potential to succeed. He carried those principles everywhere he went and said he left each place a little better than he found it.

“I don’t believe in failing, I only believe in success,” Yomtoob said. “We’re going to work to show we have the best school system here in East Chicago.”

Much of that will come in the form of working on student achievement, his first priority, as well as earning and garnering the respect of other units in the city. Yomtoob has not yet met Mayor Anthony Copeland, for example, but he hopes they’ll be able to create a positive relationship.

The board agreed that Yomtoob will be a tremendous asset to the struggling district. Board trustee Frank Ramirez said there was no way he could let Yomtoob get by.

“I will sleep better knowing we made the right choice (in Yomtoob),” trustee Joel Rodriguez said.

Chris Gestiakowski, East Chicago Central High School instructional leader for early college, was impressed with Yomtoob’s confidence.

“He’s not intimidated by the problems we’re facing,” she said. “We have someone who wants to work.”

Yomtoob, who lives in Riverwoods, Illinois, with his wife, Parichehr, received his bachelor’s degree in mathematics from Manchester College; his master of arts degree from Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Mich.; a master of science degree from the University of Notre Dame; and his doctorate in philosophy from the University of Toledo in Toledo, Ohio. He’s also conducted post-doctoral studies at several Michigan universities.

He retired from Hawthorn in 2009 after 13 years and was asked to come back as a special consultant to Willow Run Schools in Ypsilanti, Michigan, in 2010, after spending seven years there previously.

TECHNOLOGY

Text-mining offers clues to success

US intelligence programme analyses language in patents and papers to identify next big technologies.

BY SARA REARDON

A project backed by a US intelligence agency might soon make it much easier to predict which technologies will one day become game-changers. Results revealed this week by the Intelligence Advanced Research Projects Activity (IARPA) suggest that clues in the wordings of, and relationships between, scientific papers and patents could foretell research successes.

The project, called Foresight and Understanding from Scientific Exposition (FUSE), could enable funders to pick winners, and help governments to keep an eye on ‘disruptive technologies’ — those that they feel might threaten national security or outpace regulatory technologies’ — those that they feel might threaten national security or outpace regulatory technologies. So far, it has performed more than 2 million analyses of past data to pick out key advances, and relationships between, scientific papers and patents could foretell research successes.

The project, called Foresight and Understanding from Scientific Exposition (FUSE), could enable funders to pick winners, and help governments to keep an eye on ‘disruptive technologies’ — those that they feel might threaten national security or outpace regulatory technologies. So far, it has performed more than 2 million analyses of past data to pick out key advances, and relationships between, scientific papers and patents could foretell research successes.

The analysis and indicators can predict whether a nascent field will become prominent or whether it is simply a source of excitement that will soon die out, says Olga Babko-Malaya, a research engineer at BAE Systems in Winchester, Massachusetts, who heads another FUSE team.

Her team uses software algorithms to analyse ‘sentiment’ in the natural language of papers. For instance, authors might say that their work builds on or contradicts a cited paper, or use descriptive language that expresses excitement.

The researchers also found that promising topics invent their own jargon and start using more acronyms. “Abbreviations imply acceptance by the community and are indicators of more mature technologies,” says Babko-Malaya.

The changes in group collaborations in a field over time can also be predictive. FUSE researcher Lance Ramshaw at Raytheon BBN Technologies in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and his team are analysing networks between different topics, keywords and authors. He says that a new topic may be emerging when prominent authors start contributing to a group of papers that share common traits, or when alliances between collaborations shift.

Alan Porter, who specializes in technology forecasting at the Georgia Institute of Technology in Atlanta, agrees that retrospective predictions, such as the solar-panel example, are useful for modelling what companies have been doing and for tracking the history of a product. The more difficult task, he says, would be to use such a network to identify the “white spaces”: areas between technology clusters that are ripe for new research.

Ideally, analysis will show patterns or tipping points that are common to success stories. Such patterns might eventually allow the project to forecast when a product might launch, or whether a drug will be approved by regulators, explains Babko-Malaya.

Although software is catching up, human analysts remain the best forecasters, says Murdick. “You can ask experts anything you want,” he says.

In another project, Forecasting Science & Technology, IARPA is funding an online crowdsourcing project called SciCast, run by George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia, and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. It aims to consult 10,000 scientists to help develop methods for generating accurate forecasts. “My personal bias is that it’s a combination of people and machines that will ultimately provide the most useful value,” says Murdick.
Benton Harbor: Healthy and mobile
By JOHN MATUSZAK - HP Staff Writer | Posted: Monday, June 9, 2014 6:00 am

BENTON HARBOR - The Be Healthy Berrien mobile farm market, a partnership with Andrews University's student garden, is ready to roll, starting today.

The truck, carrying locally grown produce to communities with limited access to fresh foods, will run five days a week to seven locations, reported Nicki Britten, Berrien County Health Department's director of community health.

Garth Woodruff, a professor of horticulture at Andrews who oversees the student garden, said 16 items, including Swiss chard, collard greens, kale, romaine lettuce, cucumbers and herbs, will be available in the first weeks.

That will grow to as many as 40 as the season progresses, he said.

Woodruff praised his students for embracing this project.

"They've really taken the bull by the horns. It's been amazing," he said.

Cooking demonstrations and educational talks on healthy eating will be part of the project.

Britten told the county Board of Health last week that the mobile market locations were selected using USDA guidelines for reaching low-income communities where fresh produce is not readily available, commonly called "food deserts."

Britten pointed out that the market is not a pantry giving away free food. "It's affordable, but you still have to pay."

Bridge cards, held by residents receiving government food assistance, will be accepted.

The project is being funded through a grant from Gov. Rick Snyder's 4x4 initiative to promote healthier lifestyles through better eating and regular exercise.

The Southwest Michigan Association of Realtors has awarded a grant of $1,000 to be used to purchase food for cooking demonstrations and advertising for the mobile market.

Be Healthy Berrien is a consortium that includes the Berrien County Health Department, Lakeland Healthcare, The Southwest Michigan Regional Planning Commission, United Way of Southwest Michigan, and the YMCAs of St. Joseph/Benton Harbor and Niles/Buchanan.
The mobile market, a refurbished Fed Ex truck, will be stocked with seasonal produce grown at the student garden in Berrien Springs, which includes 10 acres for vegetables, 3 acres of apples, 4 acres of peaches, patches for raspberries and blackberries, and three greenhouses.

Last year the garden produced 30 tons of produce, not including apples.

The student garden also maintains its own farm stand and a Consumer-Supported Agriculture program, in which residents can purchase a portion of the farm's yield in advance.

The Health Department will continue its weekly farmers market on Wednesdays at Mitchell Park in downtown Benton Harbor.

The mobile market joins another effort aimed at promoting a healthy lifestyle.

Be Healthy Berrien is again launching its Million Mile Challenge, encouraging residents to exercise and calculate their sweat equity into mileage to keep track of their own progress and meet the collective goal.

The challenge started June 1 and runs through Aug. 31. Miles can be logged on individual or team accounts. Community events will be planned throughout the summer.

According to its website, any physical activity counts, from "jogging, walking, swimming, dancing, cleaning, gardening, playing basketball, volleyball, or (playing) with your kids or dog - it all counts towards the final goal!"

Last year, the first year it was offered, residents logged 652,338 miles. Organizers have updated the website to make it easier to more accurately log fitness efforts.

The site, www.behealthyberrien.org, offers links that show places to exercise, as well as farmers markets and other locations where local goods can be purchased, along with recipes.

Debbie Michel has gone from growing up in Jamaica to working as a producer on various NBC news programs in New York City to now living in Berrien Springs.

She said it's been a great ride, and she is now exactly where she wants to be - in Berrien Springs working as an associate professor of communication at Andrews University.

Michel said she loves New York City, but likes the quieter life in Berrien Springs now that she and her husband have a daughter, Christiana Michel, 9. Michel said her husband, Jean-Ire's Michel, homeschools their daughter.

"I'd love to visit (New York City), not to live," she said. "I miss the people a lot. The people at NBC were like family. And then my church family, because that's where I got baptized. I met my husband there. We still have family there. I miss them, but I don't miss the hustle and bustle and noise around me. I like to be able to get out and smell the fresh air."

While at NBC, she said she worked on some of the biggest national stories, including the Sept. 11, 2001, airplane attacks on New York City and Washington, D.C.; the Monica Lewinsky sex scandal with President Bill Clinton in the 1990s; the Beltway sniper attacks that took place in October 2002 in Maryland, Va., and Washington, D.C.; and the death of Princess Diana on Aug. 31, 1997.

Michel grew up in Jamaica and moved to New York City in 1986 at the age of 16 to live with an aunt in Brooklyn while attending Brooklyn College.

After graduating with a degree in journalism, Michel said she couldn't get a journalism job because it is so competitive in New York City. So she worked a couple of years in advertising and a couple more in book publishing before attending Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism to earn a master's degree.

Michel lived in New York City until moving to Berrien Springs in 2008 to work at Andrews.

Michel spoke recently with Staff Writer Louise Wrege.

What made you decide to become a journalist?

While I was living in Jamaica and seeing the poverty around me, I had an aunt who was on the air. She wasn't a journalist, but she had a program where people would call in and complain about lights being out or potholes needing to be fixed. And I just saw the power in terms of before the caller could hang up, there was usually some agency outside fixing whatever they were complaining about. And I realized, 'Wow, this medium has the power in which to change people's lives for good.' From then on, that's what got me involved in terms of wanting to make a difference in people's lives and change them for good.

How long were you at NBC?

I was at NBC for 11 years. I was fortunate, because ... while I was at the Columbia School of Journalism, NBC came to Columbia to recruit for students because they had recently started this program where they wanted diversity. And when I say diversity, I mean diversity of everything - cultural, ethnic, gender, race, geographic, sexual orientation, the whole works. They were scouring the United States for candidates for this news associate program while I was at Columbia. So that's how I got recruited to NBC to work for NBC News.

... When I started there in the summer of 1995, I was working first with Nightly News with Tom Brokaw. The program was for 10 months. You were supposed to spend five months with one program and then rotate and go to another program for five months.

... Then, they put me on Dateline NBC ... with Jane Pauley, Stone Phillips. Before I even completed my rotation in March 1996, NBC said, "There's a position here. Would you like to work for us?" And I said, "Absolutely."

Why did you leave NBC?

After my daughter was born, I took six months (off) from NBC, and then I went back (to NBC) for six months. The last story that I did was Hurricane Katrina. ... My heart was just at home with my daughter. Even though she was staying with my sister-in-law, I thought I needed to do something different.

An important thing that happened, too, is that I discovered a relationship with Jesus Christ, which I did not have before. Because during that busy time of just chasing stories, you did not have time to hear that still, small voice. Being home with my daughter, I felt God was wooing me and saying to me He wanted me to do more for me. At that point, I felt like, "You know what, God? I'll follow you wherever you want me to go."

That's when I went into my manager and said, "I need to do something else. I don't know what it is and I thank you for all of these opportunities and I loved it."

What made you decide to leave New York City?

My husband and I decided we did not want to remain in New York with our daughter growing up there where when you came out of your apartment, you never knew what you would encounter. You would see people fighting. We'd hear curse words. You never knew and you couldn't really shield your child from that. That's one of the things for us that's refreshing. That we come and it's a child-friendly, wholesome environment for us.
Were you always a Seventh-day Adventist?

No. I had been raised an Anglican. Anglican is Church of England and Jamaica was one of the colonies of England. Then my husband, who wasn't my husband at the time, had a friend who was telling me about Jesus. But I didn't want to hear anything about it. I was busy with work. But the more I spoke to him, the more I realized how unique and interesting he was. He didn't drink. He didn't curse. He was like a total gentleman. As I got to know him, I came to realize that... he was a Christian, he was an Adventist. He's the one who started telling me about the Sabbath. ... I really, truly just pushed him to the side. But, I started studying and reading and realized that he was telling me the truth. That's how I ended up becoming a Seventh-day Adventist and leaving NBC and leaving New York and coming here.
BERRIEN COUNTY — Abraham Lincoln once said, “The greatest fine art of the future will be the making of a comfortable living from a small piece of land.”

Living in Berrien County, particularly in the summer, one might think that the future Lincoln spoke of is now. Alongside any country road, one can find a farm stand offering some variety of fruit or vegetable, and every town seems to have a farmers market that sets up at least once a week. It makes one think that we truly do live in the “Great Fruit Belt.”

“It’s pretty well known that we’re second in crop diversity only to California,” said Lee LaVanway, president, CEO and market master of the Benton Harbor Fruit Exchange. “As a temperate zone, we’re probably number one.”

As such, residents and tourists should be able to find a cornucopia of Michigan produce in every supermarket in the region, but taking a trip to any of the local groceries will show you that, in 2014, such is not the case. Rather, finding produce advertised as “Michigan grown” is pretty rare—even during the peaks of the various harvest seasons.

“The volumes that we’re producing of this vast diversity now are so minuscule that they don’t make a great impact,” LaVanway said. “For example, in 1954, over 150,000 16-quart crates of strawberries were delivered in a single day to the Benton Harbor Fruit Market, which is a phenomenal amount. Today, the amount for the entire season won’t be 1,000, so we’ve lost more than 99 percent of our strawberry industry. We just don’t grow them anymore.”

In fact, Berrien County—once “the genesis of the Great Fruit Belt” as LaVanway called it—is nowhere near the self-sufficiency that Lincoln described, and we rely heavily on the outside world to feed us.

“We have a $500 million gap between what we consume and what we produce in this county,” explained Mark Moreno, associate professor of architecture at Andrews University and founding director of the New Berrien Food Foundation. “We’re spending $680 million, and we’re producing less than $100 million.”

Chicken production and consumption in Berrien County provide a perfect example of the problem.

“We eat 2.7 million chickens in Berrien County,” LaVanway said, citing data collected by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the U.S. Department of Commerce, and the U.S. Census Bureau. “The problem is that we only grew about 1,500 of them. So, they’re not our chickens. It’s a huge shortfall between what we’re consuming and what we’re producing, and that’s true across the board—for every single food item.”

Beyond the production-consumption gap, Berrien County is also blighted by the existence of “food deserts” in Galien, Watervliet and Benton Harbor, and Eau Claire will soon join that list when their local Harding’s grocery store closes its doors.

According to the USDA, “food deserts” are “urban neighborhoods and rural towns without ready access to fresh, healthy, and affordable food. Instead of supermarkets and grocery stores, these communities may have no food access or are served only by fast food restaurants and convenience stores that offer few healthy, affordable food options.”

“It’s kind of sinful that, in the Fruit Belt, we will have four food deserts,” Moreno said.
Thus, instead of the robust agricultural legacy that Berrien County once had, we are now faced with food insecurity—relying on food that travels an average of 1,500 miles from farm to table. That could take up to a month in some cases.

That may not seem like a big deal as long as the food is not rotten when it gets to your dinner table. However, as LaVanway noted, produce begins losing its nutritional value as soon as it is harvested, and then there is the amount of fuel required by routinely transporting food such long distances.

That is why Moreno, coming from a background in New Urbanism, and LaVanway have joined forces with other concerned stakeholders, including local farmers and consumers, to form the New Berrien Food Foundation.

Their vision is that “Berrien County will be known for making local food a high community priority, restoring the strongest possible relationship between local farmers, fellow citizens and the agricultural land on which we live.”

To achieve that vision, Moreno, LaVanway and other supporters of the movement have prioritized three core goals.

“We want to make sure that we have local food in local schools, we want to have programs within the schools to educate kids and get them more involved in local foods, and we want to eliminate local food deserts in the county,” Moreno explained.

Together, they are working on plans to create and fund a processing facility large enough to provide a sense of security for farmers in the region. That facility would work on a principle of transparency, allowing consumers not only to see how the food is processed, but to know where it was grown and by whom, and the date it was harvested. Local markets would then sell the foods throughout the county. Those facilities could become integral parts of the growing agri-tourism trend in the region.

“The legacy of the Great Fruit Belt was that it could feed millions of people beyond its borders, and that’s all been reversed,” Moreno said. “So, we’re trying to create a new legacy for the Great Fruit Belt—that it can feed its own local people again and continue to feed others as well.”

If you are interested in learning more about the New Berrien Food Foundation or in joining them as they pursue their vision for self-sustenance in Berrien County, Moreno can be reached at mmoreno@andrews.edu, and LaVanway can be reached at llavanway@gmail.com.

Fruit Belt fading fast

AMERICUS — John Harding has been named the interim CEO of Phoebe Sumter Medical Center, effective June 9.

“We are very pleased to have John come aboard and serve as the interim CEO at Phoebe Sumter as we continue to search for a permanent person for that role,” said Joe Austin, chief operating officer (COO) of the Phoebe Putney Health System. “He brings a wealth of knowledge and has tremendous success in leadership in the healthcare industry, and he will be a welcomed asset not only to Phoebe Sumter but to the community as a whole.”

Harding has more than 30 years of healthcare experience and comes to Southwest Georgia from the Adventist Health System in Orlando, where he acquired increasingly responsible roles by leading turnaround, business improvement and physician recruitment initiatives for diverse hospitals and healthcare systems.

He was promoted the position of president and CEO of the Florida Hospital in Tampa in 2010, the market’s flagship facility and the second largest hospital in the Adventist Health System. During his tenure, Harding led a directive to expand market share, elevate the brand and implement internal process improvement and patient care initiatives. Before that, he served as president and CEO of the Pasco, Pinellas, Hillsborough Community Health System (2009-2012) and the president and CEO of Florida Hospital-Zephyrhills (2007-2010).

During his tenure as president and CEO of the Florida Heartland Division (1998-2007), he helped lead the turnaround for a three-hospital system following a relocation to a new site. This included growing market share, developing strong clinical service lines and elevating the overall financial and operating performance of this system.

Harding’s other previous titles includes a multifaceted leadership role with the Florida Health Systems (1994-1998), where he strategized with CEOs of seven hospitals in a five-county region to acquire physician practices, developed and strengthened physician relations and leveraged technology to optimize physician operations; CEO of Savannas Hospital-The Mediplex Group, Inc. in Wellesley, Mass. (1990-1994) and the administrator, Charter Hospital of Mobile-Charter Medical Corporation in Macon (1988-1990).

Originally from Greenville, Tenn., Harding also has Georgia roots as he also spent time in Valdosta and Macon during his childhood years. He earned a bachelor of science in business administration from Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Mich., and a maters of business administration from Avilla University in Kansas City, Mo. He and his wife Carol have two grown daughters, Julie and Stefanie and two grandchildren, Peyten, a four-year-old and Brady, a six-month-old. When he is not working, he enjoys listening to music and restores classic cars.

Clarence Lowe, Jr., Passed Away

Clarence "Rex" Lowe, Jr., 86, of Baroda, formerly of Berrien Springs, passed away on Sunday, June 8, 2014, at Hanson Hospice Center in Stevensville. Memorial services will be announced at a later date. Allred Funeral Home has been entrusted with cremation arrangements. Online messages for the family may be left at www.allredfuneralhome.com, and memorial donations may be made to Hospice at Home.

Sylvia Budd's Mother Passed Away

Aretta E. "Betty" Smith passed away on Wednesday, June 11, 2014, in Berrien Springs, MI. Her daughter and son-in-law are Sylvia Budd, internal auditor, and Marvin, ITS. She attended EMC from 1934-36. Services will be at Allred Funeral Home on Monday. Please keep the family in your prayers.

Death of Gary Land

Gary G. Land of Berrien Center, Michigan, died on Saturday, April 26, at 12:48 p.m. at the St. Joseph Medical Center in Mishawaka, Indiana, after a long battle with cancer. A memorial service will be held at Pioneer Memorial Church on Friday, May 2, at 10 a.m. Please remember his family in your thoughts and prayers during this difficult time.

In lieu of flowers, the Land family has requested that gifts be made to the Andrews University Department of History & Political Science. Gifts may be given online at www.andrews.edu/go/give/history or mailed to the Office of Development. Please make checks payable to Andrews University and include "History Dept" on the memo line.

Land joined the faculty of Andrews University in 1970 as a teacher in the Department of History & Political Science. He served as chair of the department for more than two decades. He retired as emeritus professor of history.

For his undergraduate studies, Land attended Pacific Union College, Angwin, California, and graduated in 1966 with a Bachelor of Arts. He continued his studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara, California, and completed a Master of Arts in 1967 and a PhD in 1973.

Throughout his service at the University, he served as an instructor in history, assistant and associate professor of history. He also worked in administration and served as a graduate programs director and assistant dean to the College of Arts & Sciences. He became chair of the Department of History & Political Science in 1988.

Service was very important to Land. He was a member of the Berrien County Historical Association Board of Directors and served the group since 1983. He was active in the church as a Sabbath School teacher, leader and director, among other service activities. Land was also a member of the organizing committee for the Ellen White Project as well as the Spectrum editorial board.

An avid writer, Land edited several academic/professional books and has published three of his own. His writings appeared in many professional journals and periodicals, including the Journal of Adventist Education, College and University Dialogue, Spectrum: A Quarterly Journal of the Association of Adventist Forums and Adventist Heritage, among others. He also contributed chapters to books and wrote book reviews for academic publications. He was a co-editor of Ellen Harmon White: American Prophet, a new biography to be released by Oxford University Press in May 2014.

Women-focused Scholarship Opportunity

Womenetics and Discover Financial Services are offering five undergraduates a total of $15,000 through the Advancing Aspirations Global Scholarship (AAGS). With this award-winning essay competition, Womenetics and Discover encourage students to research and create awareness about global issues that affect women in business.

In addition to the prize money, the five finalists will be invited on an expense-paid trip to share their insights at the 2014 Global Women’s Initiative – where the grand prize winner will be announced – in Chicago on Nov. 12. Finalists will also be featured on Womenetics.com, named one of Forbes top 100 websites for women for 3 consecutive years.

The 2014 Global Women’s Initiative will convene international thought leaders to explore Women as the Competitive Advantage: Redefining a Workplace that Works for Women and Men. The conference will address the need to create a workplace that more effectively aligns with the lives of today’s workforce so organizations are better able to harness diverse talent for their future success – particularly women.

Corresponding with that theme, students can choose from essay prompts about:
- Employee engagement in a world of competing demands
- Confidence and risk
- Men as catalysts for change
- Work environment & productivity

The competition is open to all undergraduates currently enrolled at accredited colleges and universities, and we hope you will encourage potentially interested students to apply.

Deadline for entries is July 25.
For more information and to enter, visit: https://www.womenetics.com/Events/Scholarships

Please contact Stephanie Proft with any questions at sproft@womenetics.com or 404-816-7224.

Invitation to attend Borneo Youth Leadership Conference 2014

Referring to the matter above, I Roohullah Qalandari, Committee member of Borneo Youth Leadership Conference 2014 would like to extend an invitation to your students to participate in our upcoming event, the Borneo Youth Leadership Conference 2014.

Borneo Youth Leadership Conference 2014 is an event that we at Curtin Sarawak Student Council hope will inspire and motivate students to pursue their dreams and goals, and ultimately becoming leaders in their own lives. This conference will introduce the students to a panel of successful, and accomplished speakers. Along with that it will also include workshops carried out by professionals, who will teach participants on how to apply their leadership skills via leadership simulations. Our ultimate goal is, through engaging with successful individuals, participating in our activities and workshops, to aid students in uncovering and their potential which will help mould them to be the leaders of tomorrow.

The following are the details of the camp:
Date: 4th of August 2014 – 8th of August 2014
Venue: Curtin University Sarawak Campus, Malaysia
Theme: Creating Tomorrow's Leaders

Representatives from your school will be charged a participation fee of USD$100.00 per student. We are expecting a total of 5 representatives from your institution. Please fill up the participation form(s) together with the signature of the person-in-charge and an official institute stamp. If you wish to send more participants you are welcome to do so, as long as we have empty slots available. This is due to the fact that this conference is limited to a total of 300 participants only.

The names of representatives are to be written in a letter authorized by the person-in-charge accompanied by an official institute stamp. Please fax your response letter, all participation forms and bank statements, with the name of your institute and address them to:

Need a place for July

I am looking for a place to stay for July. All I need is a bed in a home. It does not matter if it is a small apartment or house with a family. I am a female undergraduate going into my fifth year at Andrews. I am willing to help clean around the home or yard if it will help with accommodations or do work with benefit of cutting down rent costs. (walk pets, mow lawn, clean rooms, water plants, change lightbulbs, etc). I am SDA, like to meet new people, I love to learn about different cultures and languages and food :) and I am respectful of people's homes. I also have my own car and would be able to handle my own transportation. I do not have a lot of luggage to with me, so things will be spacious.

Preferences:
- No farther than 2 or 3 miles from Andrews University
- no smoking
- clean
- less than $300

If you know someone at least who might have a place, please ask. Thank you!

Home Wanted for Rent

We are an SDA family of four looking for a 3 bedroom home for rent. One adult will be a Seminary student at Andrews this Fall and the other adult has a full time job and will be graduating from Andrews this Summer. We are a clean and organized family. We enjoy gardening and beautiful lawncare. We do not have pets. A single family home is preferred, but would consider a duplex. To start we can only afford $650 or less. but take pride in proper maintenance and care of our living space.

We expect to live in close proximity to Andrews for the next 3.5 years. Can provide reference from present landlord in Berrien Springs.

Thanks much.

Black & Decker CHV1510 hand held vacuum only $45.00

I have a brand new Black & Decker CHV1510 hand held vacuum for sale. It’s is still in the original box. Perfect for cleaning inside your car or hard to reach places.

Asking only $45.00. This vacuum retails for $50+ online. Get in touch now before it goes.

The Black & Decker CHV1510 boasts an innovative shape that allow users to operate the tool in ways that traditionally-shaped hand vacs haven’t performed. The rotating, slim nozzle design targets dirt in tight spaces, and, with over fifty percent more reach than previous Black & Decker models, the extension crevice tool lengthens, gaining accessibility. Additionally, the flip-up brush offers multiple cleaning functions without the hassle of loose accessory pieces.

Features
- Translucent, bagless dirt bowl makes it easy to see dirt and easy to empty
- Removable, washable dirt bowl and filters allow for a thorough, hygienic cleaning
- 3 stage filtration means less clogging and cleaner air exhaust
- 3 versatile ways to store: horizontally, vertically, or mount on a wall
- Charging indicator light allows you to always know you have a good connection
- Lightweight and portable for quick clean-ups
- Energy star approved charging system saves energy and helps protect batteries

Serious inquiries only.
(Sorry for the mess in the photos I'm moving :) !!)
1992 Buick LeSabre for sale!! Great car!
Selling my 1992 Buick LeSabre for $1700 obo.

Odometer: 124611

The car needs a new paint job but literally other than that there is nothing wrong with it. I bought this car in February and am only selling it because I am leaving town. The car is literally perfect with such low miles considering its year. I have had no problems with it and it is great on gas. I haven’t had to fix or change anything on the vehicle.

The only thing that needs work is the paint job, but that would purely be for looks not at all how it functions. Serious inquires only!

Email me and I’ll give you my number from there.

Graco Stroller
I have a Graco Jogger stroller (FastAction™ Fold Jogger Click Connect™ Travel System) for sale. I am asking $75. It is barely used. It retails for $180. It has the ability to attach the graco carrier carseat on to it. It has a full sun shade, a large basket on the bottom, and the front wheel locks. It fully reclines so baby can sleep while you walk or jog. I just simply don't use it and it is taking up too much space in my house. Email water_bug23@hotmail.com or call or text 423-303-0709.
