Adventist Forum Nov 15, "Suffering and the Search for Meaning"

Adventist Forum Nov 15, Richard Rice "Suffering and the Search for Meaning"
Adventist Forum presents "Suffering and the Search for Meaning" by Dr. Richard Rice from the School of Religion at Loma Linda University in Loma Linda, California, on Sabbath Afternoon at 3:30 pm, November 15, 2014, Chan Shun Hall, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI.

Dr. Rice graduated from Andrews University with an MDiv degree and went on to earn MA and PhD degrees in Christian theology from the University of Chicago. He served as a church pastor and taught at La Sierra University before moving to Loma Linda University where he is professor of religion in the School of Religion. He teaches graduate courses and seminars dealing with the theology of suffering, science and religion, and other topics.

He has published several books including The Reign of God: An Introduction to Christian Theology from a Seventh-day Adventist Perspective published by Andrews University Press. This is a textbook for college religion classes. In 1980 he published what has proved to be a somewhat controversial book in Adventist circles. It was originally published by the Review and Herald Publishing Association under the title The Openness of God: The Relationship of Divine Foreknowledge and Human Free Will. However, the publisher stopped distributing the book before the production run was exhausted. But it was subsequently republished by Bethany House as God’s Foreknowledge & Man’s Free Will.

Dr. Rice is credited with introducing the term “open theism” into theological discourse. He has published a number of other books including: When Bad Things Happen to God’s People, Reason and the Contours of Faith, Believing, Behaving, Belonging, and Ministry Healing: Toward a Theology of Wholeness and Witness.

Adventist Forum is open to the public. All are welcome. For information, contact Art Robertson at robertsa2@earthlink.net or call 471-7150.

He Can Use Anyone
by Jenna Neil

Rachel Williams-Smith, chair of the Andrews University Department of Communication, was recently invited to share her life story on the Hope Channel and 3ABN. On October 21, Williams-Smith was on a live program on the Hope Channel called “Let’s Pray.”

“Let’s Pray” is a one-hour Tuesday night program where viewers call in and share their prayer requests with a waiting prayer team. The first half of the program features a story or testimony, and during the second half the prayer team goes through the prayer requests that callers have shared.

Williams-Smith was asked to share her story on “Let’s Pray” while at the Society of Adventist Communicators Conference in Jacksonville, Florida earlier that month.

“I was sitting at the table for Sabbath lunch and it turned out I was sitting with about three people from the Hope Channel,” says Williams-Smith. As she was sharing her vision for the Department of Communication and some of her background, she said they “latched onto” her story. When she mentioned that she would be sharing her story on 3ABN and the Dare to Dream channel, they asked if she would be willing to come on Tuesday to share with the Hope Channel viewers as well. Although Williams-Smith thought they were joking at first, she agreed to make the trip to Washington, D.C.

The discussion on the show segment centered on Williams-Smith’s statement that she was born in the 20th century but raised in the 19th. “It was a 19th century lifestyle in terms of how we lived day to day, with no conveniences including electricity, running water and so forth. It was a 19th century mindset especially when it came to women and what they can and can’t do and dress, when it came to wearing bonnets and long dresses. And we were more focused on what the 19th century Adventist and Adventism taught than we are today.”

Show hosts also asked about how the change from where she was to where she is now came about. Williams-Smith talked about when she went to a small, self-supporting high school.

“I learned something called principles, which are underlying truths that don’t change, and that gave me a foundation for beginning to be able to change myself,” says Williams-Smith. She used the example of modesty and how rules of modesty will change but the underlying foundation remains the same. When she attended Oakwood University, Williams-Smith gained an academic and professional foundation from which to begin moving forward.

The hosts also asked her about forgiveness, particularly in regards to Williams-Smith’s father. They asked how she forgave her father for such a strange upbringing. She explained it wasn’t difficult because he was actually the one who asked for her forgiveness.

“I had made a choice,” she stated. “Once again, learning about principles, and understanding that love and forgiveness are principles presents you with a choice to love and accept or not. It’s a choice you make."

As soon as Williams-Smith was done with the interview, she rushed to the airport for a flight to St. Louis and 3ABN. She was interviewed twice on 3ABN. Her main goal was to share about the Department of Communication and the different things she had in mind to revamp the program, including remodeling the television studio. However, the interviewer focused more on her book and life story than the department, which was frustrating but understandable to Williams-Smith.

Williams-Smith was very pleased with the afternoon program, which was a recording for “Urban Reports.” “I was completely in the moment, in the zone, and I loved every moment of being there,” she says. “So it turned out to be probably the best of all the interviews that we did.”

While attending Oakwood’s graduation in May, Williams-Smith approached John Lo McCain, a 3ABN producer, to see if 3ABN would be able to help with the television studio remodel. He suggested that Williams-Smith email him, which she did toward the end of the summer. At that point, McCain asked her to send a proposal for each presentation, sharing what she was doing. She did that and was asked to be a part of two programs to share about her dreams and goals for the communication department and the studio.

“I’ve sometimes watched where people are up there sharing on TV or in some public arena, sharing their testimony and how God has made a change in their lives," stated Williams-Smith. "I've often sat there and looked at it and gone, 'Wow, I wish I could do that, I wish I had that or was able to. But I feel too small, too inadequate, too tongue-tied just to do something like that and to be of use. But if God can take me and share my story on three channels and through a book, I believe He can take anyone who is just willing to share to make a difference."

Class Gifts Bell Hall Outdoor Study Area

by Jenna Neil

An outdoor patio and study space on the north side of Bell Hall, which houses the School of Education, was dedicated during Alumni Homecoming Weekend. The courtyard was something that Dennis Woodland, emeritus professor of biology, wanted to do for several years. However, until recently there wasn't enough money to begin the project.

That changed this year, thanks to the Class of 1964. Each year, the current 50-year class gives a gift to Andrews University—something that commemorates the years they spent at Andrews and their fond memories of campus. The reunion committee for the Class of 1964 thought this project would be the perfect gift to the University.

Stan Beikmann, retired professor of horticulture and landscape design and designer of the patio, stated that the project is important because of the "microclimate" that exists in the space.

"Whereas Andrews falls in Zones 4 and 5, because the space is enclosed on three sides and receives ambient heat from the building and protection from winter winds, we recognize that it is equivalent to a Zone 6 plant habitat," says Beikmann.

A plant habitat or "hardiness zone" refers to 1 of 12 defined areas where specific categories of plants are able to grow.

Dick Scott, director of facilities management, asked Beikmann to design the patio. The design is a natural shade garden with a semi-circular patio that wraps around a mimosa tree. Beikmann used several southern plants and other shade plants with the most color in the fall and spring when students are on campus. The design plan was distributed to more than 150 members of the class of 1964 and was met with overwhelming approval and excitement.

Arboretum/Grounds worked hard to finish the project in a six-week time frame, so the 50-year class would have the chance to dedicate the space during Homecoming Weekend at the end of September.

Materials and plants were ordered and the prep work began right away with foundations of concrete blocks. Tons of sand and aggregate were brought in along with cut stone to lay the patio. The final step was landscaping with plants and instant sod lawn. Any remaining plants and final touches will be added during the spring of 2015.
The Arboretum/Grounds team that worked on the project included two landscape students, Andi Caban and Austin Cassell, along with Noe Valez, arboretum/grounds manager, Aaron Hinman, groundskeeper supervisor, David Logan, mechanic, and Stan Beikmann. Larry Schalk, vice president for Financial Administration, 1964 graduate and class representative, along with the Offices of Alumni Services and Development, oversaw the funding of the project and kept the Class of 1964 updated on the progress.

“We want to have an outside place where students can study or faculty and staff can relax, read or have lunch,” says Vicki Wiley, executive assistant to the dean of the School of Education. “This space offers exactly that. We’re very pleased with the results.”

Andrews University offers our sincerest thanks to the Class of 1964 for making this study space possible.

Outrunning the Future
by Lucero Castellanos-Aguirre

In October, alumnus Gary Hamel (BS ’75, MBA ’76) presented to the School of Business Administration his very own way to “Outrun the Future.” Hamel has been ranked by The Wall Street Journal as one of the world’s most influential business thinkers and referred to by “Fortune Magazine” as a leading expert on business strategy.

After receiving a donation from the parents of an alumnus who were very appreciative of the progress their child had made in their career, Allen Stembridge, dean of the School of Business Administration, decided to contact Gary Hamel.

“He’s a very busy man,” says Stembridge, “But we got an email out of the blue from his secretary that he hadn’t forgotten and had time to come. It took a year due to his busy schedule, and though he typically charges between $50,000–$75,000 to speak, Gary charged us nothing for this presentation.”

It was a well-attended event targeted specifically toward business students and special guests, with an audience of about 130. Hamel focused on the future throughout the entire presentation, emphasizing innovation and change.

Hamel motivated the audience to think about “problems that are mind-bending” and asked stimulating questions like, “How do we be relentlessly optimistic?” and “Why don’t we aim higher?”

“It was exactly the kind of thing that education is all about,” says Brent Geraty, University legal counsel, who attended the event. “He challenged the students—all of us—to think about things as they could be rather than as they are.”

“I believe our current students should not concentrate solely on the theory,” says Hamel. “It’s a good base but they need to go through it and forward and focus on the future.”

He continued by sharing with the audience his idea of the competitive advantage.

“One way of getting that is to be ahead of the competition—to do something different, unique, and out of the box.”

After the presentation Hamel socialized with the students, signed books and answered their questions.
“Hamel certainly did not come across as unapproachable,” says Stembridge. “He was extremely friendly and happy to be here. I think he was pleased it was a good turnout of students, because that’s who he wanted to talk to.”

Students seemed very enthusiastic about Hamel’s talk. Many were honored to have attended the event.

“The presentation was crisp, innovative and intellectually stimulating,” says Azez Hagos, senior finance major. “It feels good when I find myself studying at a school where Gary Hamel completed his undergraduate and graduate studies!”

Update on Ebola Crisis

The message below was originally sent to Andrews University staff, faculty and students by Niels-Erik Andreasen, University president.

I imagine that you have joined me in continuing to follow the significant news coverage in recent months regarding the ongoing Ebola Virus Disease (EVD) crisis in three countries in West Africa: Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone.

There have also been Ebola cases elsewhere, including now here in the United States. All these cases are connected with individuals traveling from those three countries, or those who provided direct healthcare support to individuals with Ebola.

Both the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) have stated that there is only a small risk for an outbreak of Ebola in the United States (apart from the potential risk for those who care for or have otherwise come into physical contact with those who have Ebola). All of us, including Andrews, still need to take thoughtful precautions to ensure the safety and health of those in our communities, both in our immediate geographic community and around the world.

Currently, we have no students who have come to us directly from Guinea, Liberia or Sierra Leone. Also, while Andrews operates in locations around the world, there are no affiliated academic partner programs in any of the three countries affected by Ebola.

On this campus, as we seek to understand and carefully respond to this health crisis, Andrews will incorporate several safety precautions and protocols, as urged by both the WHO and CDC. We will:

- For at least the next three to six months, prohibit University-sponsored travel from or through countries with Ebola (Guinea, Liberia, Sierra Leone), and encourage individuals connected with the University to do the same.
- Follow the CDC and WHO guidelines for monitoring/movement for Ebola exposure, including the Oct. 22 update.
- For any apparent direct contact with Ebola patients by members of the University community, self-monitoring and voluntary isolation separate from the main campus will be instituted for a 21-day period. As appropriate, Provost and Student Life offices should be informed if there is suspected contact by a faculty, staff, student or student family member.
- Additionally, with any reported instance of apparent contact or risk by a member of the University’s community, the University will work immediately, closely and directly with the county’s Public Health Department and medical officials.
- Encourage our campus community to continue to practice common sense safe hygiene, especially with the approach of the flu season, including ongoing careful washing and sanitizing of hands

While there is no current significant or direct risk to Andrews University in particular, please know that we will continue to monitor any and all official information releases regarding this public health emergency, update our protocols and react accordingly.

You can follow ongoing updates and information on Ebola issues around the world at the links below:

Grace Place: Caring for the Community

The Grace Place may be fairly new to the community, but members have already made their presence known with their programs on health, marriage and finances and their regular outreach to South Bend neighborhoods.

The church held its first service in February 2013 in the home they found at the Community Congregational Church, 1671 Cleveland Road in South Bend. The two churches collaborate on joint services and programs at various times during the year. The Grace Place is affiliated with the First Seventh-day Adventist Church in South Bend.

Hyveth Williams, an Andrews University professor, founded the church with the express goal of reaching out to the community. Church members have adopted as their own the neighborhood bordered by Portage Road, Cushing Street and Lincoln Way, going out every two weeks to give away free food and other items, to invite people to come to church and to tell them about the special seminars and programs the church offers.

Mobile Farm Market Puts End to Food Deserts

A mobile farm market is making a difference in Michigan one vegetable at a time. Andrews University said due to its success this summer they are going to expand next year.

According to the USDA, there are four large food deserts in Berrien County. They include a part of Benton Harbor, Niles, Buchanan, and Berrien Springs. Every Monday the market would stop at the Ferry Street Resource Center so residents could buy nutritious food.

One woman said she loved the recipes the dietitian would provide.

Pauline Washington said, “They picked it that morning and they brought it, they were selling it, plus showing us how to cook it… the grocery store is not close to where I live! nothing is close to where I live!”

Mobile Farm Market Proves Success

Be Healthy Berrien’s mobile farm market, operated with Andrews University, had a fruitful first season and will continue to grow, the Berrien County Board of Health heard Wednesday.

Nicki Britten, director of community health planning, reported that 60 percent of survey respondents said they were eating more vegetables as a result of shopping at the mobile market.

The project was launched last summer to sell produce grown at Andrews’ student gardens and orchards. The mobile market made stops in low-income neighborhoods in Benton Harbor, Benton Township, Buchanan, Niles and Berrien Springs, where residents have limited access to fresh fruits and vegetables.
The health department and Andrews "consider this a very successful pilot year of this program," Britten said.

Horn Museum to Host Rare Exhibit
At a time when many archaeological museums at religious-affiliated schools in the United States are struggling to add to their displays, the Siegfried Horn Museum at Andrews University (AU) will soon host an exhibit of 48 ancient artifacts, reports the New York Times.

"In recent decades, countries that house remains of the ancient world have become determined to keep archaeological finds within their borders," explains the New York Times article. Furthermore, small museums often lack "the financial resources to buy works or borrow actively from other collections." Because of these constraints, Dr. Constance Gane, curator of the Horn Museum and assistant professor of archaeology and Old Testament at AU, told Adventist Today that the museum is thrilled to exhibit the ceramic figurine fragments.

Farm to School Success
Berrien County Juvenile Center food service manager Charity Hackett first took an interest in serving more fresh fruits and vegetables to residents, utilizing a garden at the Center. Since then, the Center has obtained food preservation equipment, developed resident food handling skills training and purchased CSA shares aided by the Michigan Farm to School Grant program. The Berrien County Juvenile Center was one of 21 MI Farm to School Grant recipients in 2014.

In the first year of the farm-to-school initiative, Hackett found difficulty in obtaining small quantities of a variety of produce from many different commercial farm vendors. Working with Michigan State University Extension and the MSU Product Center, the nearby Andrews University's CSA and market garden program was identified as a reliable source of fresh fruits and vegetables. Bulk apples are purchased from a separate grower.

Horn Museum in New York Times
In a few months, the Siegfried Horn Museum at Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Mich., will exhibit 48 ancient fragments of possibly religious ceramic figures depicting humans and horses. Dating from the 8th to the 6th century B.C., they were excavated over more than a decade ending in 2012 at Tall Jalul in Jordan.

While small, the exhibition, part of a one-year loan agreement with Jordan, will be something of a rarity.

"There is no easy life."
The giant acorns under the chestnut oak trees at Monte Sano State Park in Huntsville, Ala., remind Rachel Williams-Smith of how her family collected them and attempted to make something edible during the year they camped there in a converted school bus. The cliffs behind Monte Sano Lodge are where the family took refuge during the tornado of April 1974. And Williams-Smith smiles when she sees a line of ants marching along.
Caring for the community

By Debra Haight Tribune Correspondent | Posted: Sunday, November 9, 2014 5:45 am

SOUTH BEND — The Grace Place may be fairly new to the community, but members have already made their presence known with their programs on health, marriage and finances and their regular outreach to South Bend neighborhoods.

The church held its first service in February 2013 in the home they found at the Community Congregational Church, 19671 Cleveland Road in South Bend. The two churches collaborate on joint services and programs at various times during the year. The Grace Place is affiliated with the First Seventh-day Adventist Church in South Bend.

Hyveth Williams, an Andrews University professor, founded the church with the express goal of reaching out to the community. Church members have adopted as their own the neighborhood bordered by Portage Road, Cushing Street and Lincoln Way, going out every two weeks to give away free food and other items, to invite people to come to church and to tell them about the special seminars and programs the church offers.

“We’ve had financial peace programs and programs about diabetes, we’re having a health fair and a marriage seminar in the new year,” she said. “We’ve helped wherever we see a need. We’ve cleaned a woman’s home, we’ve raked leaves and shoveled snow. We want the community to know that we care about them.”

Williams said church members take bread and other food items when they go out to the neighborhood and they are in the process of establishing a food bank at the Congregational Church to help community members even more. “People are looking for answers and looking for people who care,” she said. “Our focus is on what the community needs. A healthy community breeds a healthy church.”

Williams moved to this area three years ago from California to take the position at Andrews Seminary, where she is both a professor and the director of homiletics, or preaching. She was a pastor in California for more than a decade and was looking for a church to pastor after moving to this area.

“I pastored a large church in Loma Linda when I was invited to come and teach here,” she said. “The first few years, I attended different churches but I felt a need to model a church that cares for the community ... I felt it was wrong to sit back at Andrews and never give back.”

In getting ready to start the new church, she got help from some of her seminary students as well as her pastor mentor, the Rev. Throstur Thordarson. “We had one month of prayer before we had our first service,” she said. “We had put together a team of pastors from the seminary and I met with my mentor.”

“We spent a month driving around the neighborhood and praying,” she said. “We told people we met at the mall that we were starting a church and invited other Seventh-day Adventists. Our first service was on Feb. 16, 2013. We had 30 people from the seminary and 60 from the community.”

Williams said she sees The Grace Place not only as a way to reach out to the community but also as a training lab for the pastors and students she’s teaching at the seminary. The church’s name was selected after the 12 charter members all made suggestions. “The Grace Place was one of the suggestions and it just felt right,” she said. “It’s a place where everyone can come and feel comfortable.”

Williams, a native of Jamaica, came to the ministry after a career in politics. “I worked with the mayor of Hartford (Conn.) and then ran against him,” she said. “It was then that I had a conversion experience and dropped everything including politics.”

She considers preaching a natural transition from politics. “I was already speaking and trying to persuade others,” she said. “I feel like God is training me to be His spokesperson. I want to let people know that God can make a difference in their life.”

People can learn about The Grace Place at www.tgpthegraceplace.org. The church has Bible Study every Saturday at 10 a.m. followed by the worship service at 11 a.m.
A mobile farm market is making a difference in Michigan one vegetable at a time. Andrews University said due to its success this summer they are going to expand next year.

According to the USDA, there are four large food deserts in Berrien County. They include a part of Benton Harbor, Niles, Buchanan, and Berrien Springs. Every Monday the market would stop at the Ferry Street Resource Center so residents could buy nutritious food.

One woman said she loved the recipes the dietitian would provide.

Pauline Washington said, "They picked it that morning and they brought it, they were selling it, plus showing us how to cook it!... the grocery store is not close to where I live! nothing is close to where I live!"

The director of the student gardens at Andrews University said his data shows that the program was a great success.

Garth Woodruff said, “60% of the people felt that they were eating healthier inside their own homes. 47% of the people heard their neighbors talking more about health than they did the summer before.”

Woodruff said that students grow the majority of the fruits and vegetables that they sell in the truck.

Woodruff said, "Somebody with an EBT card which is food stamps, buys fresh produce at a farmers market, they can get a two for one deal so they can basically spend two dollars for everyone dollar of cost."

He said 30% of their patrons paid with food stamps. Stephen Erich said “It was kind of a dream, a dream opportunity.”

Erich drove the mobile farm market to the Ferry Resource center in Niles every Monday this summer.

Erich said, “When I first got there there were maybe four kids that would come every week! At first when they would come they wouldn't know what to do and they were really shy and then they started helping out! So then they jumped in and they would help us unload the stuff and put it back up and then they would ask for their pay.”

Andrews University said they hope to expand the program into the fall next year, and they are also looking into a delivery service where vegetables would be taken straight to people's front door.
BENTON HARBOR - Be Healthy Berrien's mobile farm market, operated with Andrews University, had a fruitful first season and will continue to grow, the Berrien County Board of Health heard Wednesday.

Nicki Britten, director of community health planning, reported that 60 percent of survey respondents said they were eating more vegetables as a result of shopping at the mobile market.

The project was launched last summer to sell produce grown at Andrews' student gardens and orchards. The mobile market made stops in low-income neighborhoods in Benton Harbor, Benton Township, Buchanan, Niles and Berrien Springs, where residents have limited access to fresh fruits and vegetables.

The health department and Andrews "consider this a very successful pilot year of this program," Britten said.

But the program has a long way to go toward being self-supporting, she said. The mobile market had about $4,000 in revenue, and cost about $40,000 to operate, mostly from grant funding.

The market further needs to do a better job reaching residents receiving government food assistance, Britten said. Only about $300, or 7 percent of revenue, came from Bridge card holders.

This was partly due to a vacancy in the marketing staff, a situation that has been resolved and will not be repeated in 2015, Britten said.

Members of the Be Healthy Berrien coalition, including the health department, and Andrews officials agreed that it will take time to fully establish the mobile market and to change shopping and eating habits.

There are many encouraging signs. About half of customers on a given day were repeat customers, and more than 80 percent lived within a mile of the market stops. About half heard about the market through word of mouth from neighbors.

Customers liked the variety offered at the market, which sold 34 types of vegetables, seven kinds of herbs and seven varieties of fruit.

Customers asked for more fruit, which the market managers provided by buying produce from the Benton Harbor Wholesale Fruit Market to supplement the items grown at the university.
A survey will be conducted in Benton Harbor to determine what kinds of fruits and vegetables customers prefer.

The project deserves continuing support, as evidenced by the financial assistance provided to sustain and expand offerings, Britten said.

The health department will contract with Andrews to operate the mobile market in 2015, with $43,000 from a Michigan Health and Wellness grant. That amount is up a bit from last year's $36,000.

Andrews and the health department are expanding their offerings with a Community-Supported Agriculture program that will allow low-income participants to buy produce that will be delivered to their homes.

That effort is being backed by a $100,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Community Health. The county health department will use part of the funds to contract with Lakeland Healthcare to provide cooking classes, nutrition education videos and recipes aimed at encouraging greater consumption of nutritious foods.

The Berrien Community Foundation has awarded the health department a $5,000 grant to continue its cooking demonstrations at the Benton Harbor farmers market.

Boundless Love: Heartwarming Story from an International Student

Note: The following was written by an international student and is published by request of the student and International Student Services.

Boundless Love: From Classroom to the Operating Room
by Yafu Qu

At 10 a.m. on September 17, 2014, I suddenly began to experience a severe stomachache. It continued to worsen until at 2 p.m. I felt so much pain that I could not get up from my seat. I was sweating all over. Three of my classmates, Jessica, Yumei Cai, and Pastor Jose, saw this unusual behavior and called the campus safety office. When the emergency car came, my classmates helped me into the car and we went to University Medical where I had a blood test and received immediate care. The doctor told me that it was appendicitis and that I needed to be transferred to the hospital for emergency surgery.

I was in so much pain that I could not sit up. The doctor gave me a shot to relieve the pain, and immediately my thoughts became hazy. It was difficult for me to see and understand things. Pastor Jose drove us to the Lakeland Regional Medical Center in St Joseph. However, I was in the United States from China to pursue my MDiv degree at Andrews University and had arrived only a month ago. Now I faced a strange country, a strange hospital, and a strange medical system, but somehow God was giving me a deep inner peace!

One issue is that I did not know my medical insurance number! This is not something I had memorized (do you know yours by memory?), and I had no card with me. At that time, I just thought that I would go through the medical treatment and then go home to take my son to Pathfinders! So I did not call my wife to tell her about my treatment in hospital. The doctor asked for my wife to be informed, and then the treatment could proceed.

The medicine the doctor gave me to dull the pain had made my thoughts slow and hazy so I had to depend on my three classmates. Also, I did not know English very well, and they were very brave to stay with me and help me. They called many people for help, sending out many urgent requests for help. Thankfully, they were able to make contact with my wife and brought her to the hospital.

After two examinations from the doctor, it was already evening, and my classmates had two tests the next day. So they did their homework and reviewed their lessons in the hospital hallways, staying with me until 9 p.m. They would not go back to Andrews due to their concern for my ability to communicate with the hospital staff. They stayed with me for 7 hours. They did not think about themselves, the time, their test scores or...

Huge need for Winter clothings

Greetings from the Office of International Student services, Andrews University. Winter is just around the corner and many of our international students are not used to it. Many of them come with little or no preparation for it. So, we are soliciting from you winter clothings (jackets, gloves and hats) and winter boots. If you have gently used ones that you plan to give away or replace this winter, we will be glad to receive them from you and pass them on to our neediest students.

You may drop them off in the Student life department in the Campus Center building between 9 - noon and 1:30 - 5 pm on Mondays and Wednesdays and from 9 am - 11:30 am and 1:30 - 5 pm on Tuesday and Thursdays. On Fridays, we are open from 9 am - noon.

If you have donations that need to be picked up, please call us at (269) 471 6395.

Thank you so much for your generosity and we want to thank you in anticipation of these gifts.

God bless you and have a blessed season of Thanksgiving and Christmas celebrations.

About Chef Mark Anthony

My name is Mark Anthony and I have traveled across the country doing hundreds of healthy cooking shows in every state in the country including Hawaii. Alaska is my last state and they're booked for October 2011. I also do regular cooking shows on 3ABN Worldwide Television.

Over the past few years, I have lost 80 pounds! I have also dropped my cholesterol from 263 down to 118, and I have never felt better! It is all from living a vegan lifestyle. That's what I teach at my live cooking shows; How to cook healthy and save money doing it. It's not mysterious or difficult and I want people to know that it is realistic.

I have also enclosed a couple of articles from the dozens of writings that have been done about these amazing accomplishments. The country is really into the healthy lifestyle right now.

I also want to mention that I do these events for FREE. That’s right, totally FREE. It's free for the people attending, and it's free for the facilities conducting these events. I have done these events at hospitals, churches, senior centers, universities, and local conventions.

This is all about teaching the community about how to get healthy and stay healthy. It’s about motivating them off all the processed food and chemicals that cause killer diseases such as atherosclerosis, high cholesterol, high blood pressure and diabetes, and getting back to the healthy lifestyle we used to have here in America.

My shows are a fun and exciting program. I cook everything right in front of the crowd, while teaching principles of healthy cooking. I do watermelon sculptures and even paint eight foot paintings with my hands. It's not your ordinary boring cooking class. I also illustrate the connection between body, mind, & spirit. It is actually proven that when we get physically healthier, we also get mentally healthier, and that we also have better spiritual connections. It's so amazing how our bodies are connected in so many different ways.

Google Nexus 10inch Tablet
I am selling my Google Nexus 10inch Tablet. I simply don't use it as much as I thought I would. I checked everything out and there is nothing wrong with it as far as I can tell. Cosmetically it has some chipped paint on one of the speakers, you can see the silver underneath. I have factory reset it and it is ready for the new user. I have the original charger and cord. I also am including a leather flip case and a waterproof jacket. Asking price is 150 but I am willing to negotiate.
