As soon as Williams-Smith was done with the interview, she rushed to the airport for a flight to St. Louis and forgiveness are principles presents you with a choice to love and accept or not. It's a choice you make.”

“I had made a choice,” she stated. “Once again, learning about principles, and understanding that love and actually the one who asked for her forgiveness.

The hosts also asked her about forgiveness, particularly in regards to Williams-Smith’s father. They asked how she forgave her father for such a strange upbringing. She explained it wasn’t difficult because he was modesty and how rules of modesty will change but the underlying foundation remains the same. When she attended Oakwood University, Williams-Smith gained an academic and professional foundation from which to begin moving forward.

“Let’s Pray” is a one-hour Tuesday night program where viewers call in and share their prayer requests with a waiting prayer team. The first half of the program features a story or testimony, and during the second half the prayer team goes through the prayer requests that callers have shared.

Williams-Smith was asked to share her story on “Let’s Pray” while at the Society of Adventist Communicators Conference in Jacksonville, Florida earlier that month.

“I was sitting at the table for Sabbath lunch and it turned out I was sitting with about three people from the Hope Channel,” says Williams-Smith. As she was sharing her vision for the Department of Communication and some of her background, she said they “latched onto” her story. When she mentioned that she would be sharing her story on 3ABN and the Dare to Dream channel, they asked if she would be willing to come on Tuesday to share with the Hope Channel viewers as well. Although Williams-Smith thought they were joking at first, she agreed to make the trip to Washington, D.C.

The discussion on the show segment centered on Williams-Smith’s statement that she was born in the 20th century but raised in the 19th. “It was a 19th century lifestyle in terms of how we lived day to day, with no conveniences including electricity, running water and so forth. It was a 19th century mindset especially when it came to women and what they can and can’t do and dress, when it came to wearing bonnets and long dresses. And we were more focused on what the 19th century Adventist and Adventism taught than we are today.”

Show hosts also asked about how the change from where she was to where she is now came about. Williams-Smith talked about when she went to a small, self-supporting high school.

“It was completely in the moment, in the zone, and I loved every moment of being there,” she says. “So it turned out to be probably the best of all the interviews that we did.”

As soon as Williams-Smith was done with the interview, she rushed to the airport for a flight to St. Louis and 3ABN. She was interviewed twice on 3ABN. Her main goal was to share about the Department of Communication and the different things she had in mind to revamp the program, including remodeling the television studio. However, the interviewer focused more on her book and life story than the department, which was frustrating but understandable to Williams-Smith.

Williams-Smith was very pleased with the afternoon program, which was a recording for “Urban Reports.” “I was completely in the moment, in the zone, and I loved every moment of being there,” she says. “So it turned out to be probably the best of all the interviews that we did.”

While attending Oakwood's graduation in May, Williams-Smith approached John Lomacang, a 3ABN producer, to see if 3ABN would be able to help with the television studio remodel. He suggested that Williams-Smith email him, which she did toward the end of the summer. At that point, McCain asked her to send a proposal for each presentation, sharing what she was doing. She did that and was asked to be a part of two programs to share about her dreams and goals for the communication department and the studio.

“I've sometimes watched where people are up there sharing on TV or in some public arena, sharing their testimony and how God has made a change in their lives," stated Williams-Smith. "I've often sat there and looked at it and gone, 'Wow, I wish I could do that, I wish I had that or was able to. But I feel too small, too inadequate, too tongue-tied just to do something like that and to be of use. But if God can take me and share my story on three channels and through a book, I believe He can take anyone who is just willing to share to make a difference."

Williams-Smith hopes students in the Department of Communications will realize as she has how God can use people in TV and other news media to spread His word. The department has recently renovated their media studio and lab so students can have access to state-of-the-art equipment during their college experience.

Anyone interested in giving toward this project can do so here. Whether you can give two dollars, two hundred or two million, Williams-Smith and the Department of Communications thanks you for considering a gift to further the education of students here at Andrews University.

Class Gifts Bell Hall Outdoor Study Area

by Jenna Neil

An outdoor patio and study space on the north side of Bell Hall, which houses the School of Education, was dedicated during Alumni Homecoming Weekend. The courtyard was something that Dennis Woodland, emeritus professor of biology, wanted to do for several years. However, until recently there wasn't enough money to begin the project.

That changed this year, thanks to the Class of 1964. Each year, the current 50-year class gives a gift to Andrews University—something that commemorates the years they spent at Andrews and their fond memories of campus. The reunion committee for the Class of 1964 thought this project would be the perfect gift to the University.

Stan Beikmann, retired professor of horticulture and landscape design and designer of the patio, stated that the project is important because of the "microclimate" that exists in the space.

"Whereas Andrews falls in Zones 4 and 5, because the space is enclosed on three sides and receives ambient heat from the building and protection from winter winds, we recognize that it is equivalent to a Zone 6 plant habitat," says Beikmann.

A plant habitat or "hardiness zone" refers to 1 of 12 defined areas where specific categories of plants are able to grow.

Dick Scott, director of facilities management, asked Beikmann to design the patio. The design is a natural shade garden with a semi-circular patio that wraps around a mimosa tree. Beikmann used several southern plants and other shade plants with the most color in the fall and spring when students are on campus. The design plan was distributed to more than 150 members of the class of 1964 and was met with overwhelming approval and excitement.

Arboretum/Grounds worked hard to finish the project in a six-week time frame, so the 50-year class would have the chance to dedicate the space during Homecoming Weekend at the end of September.

Grace Place: Caring for the Community
The Grace Place may be fairly new to the community, but members have already made their presence known with their programs on health, marriage finances and their regular outreach to South Bend neighborhoods.

The church held its first service in February 2013 in the home they found at the Community Congregational Church, 19671 Cleveland Road in South Bend. The two churches collaborate on joint services and programs at various times during the year. The Grace Place is affiliated with the First Seventh-day Adventist Church in South Bend.

Hyveth Williams, an Andrews University professor, founded the church with the express goal of reaching out to the community. Church members have adopted as their own the neighborhood bordered by Portage Road, Cushing Street and Lincoln Way, going out every two weeks to give away free food and other items, to invite people to come to church and to tell them about the special seminars and programs the church offers.

Mobile Farm Market Puts End to Food Deserts
A mobile farm market is making a difference in Michigan one vegetable at a time. Andrews University said due to its success this summer they are going to expand next year.

According to the USDA, there are four large food deserts in Berrien County. They include a part of Benton Harbor, Niles, Buchanan, and Berrien Springs. Every Monday the market would stop at the Ferry Street Resource Center so residents could buy nutritious food.

One woman said she loved the recipes the dietitian would provide.

Pauline Washington said, “They picked it that morning and they brought it, they were selling it, plus showing us how to cook it... the grocery store is not close to where I live! nothing is close to where I live!”

Mobile Farm Market Proves Success

Be Healthy Berrien's mobile farm market, operated with Andrews University, had a fruitful first season and will continue to grow, the Berrien County Board of Health heard Wednesday.

Nicki Britten, director of community health planning, reported that 60 percent of survey respondents said they were eating more vegetables as a result of shopping at the mobile market.

The project was launched last summer to sell produce grown at Andrews' student gardens and orchards. The mobile market made stops in low-income neighborhoods in Benton Harbor, Benton Township, Buchanan, Niles and Berrien Springs, where residents have limited access to fresh fruits and vegetables.

The health department and Andrews "consider this a very successful pilot year of this program," Britten said.

Horn Museum to Host Rare Exhibit

At a time when many archaeological museums at religious-affiliated schools in the United States are struggling to add to their displays, the Siegfried Horn Museum at Andrews University (AU) will soon host an exhibit of 48 ancient artifacts, reports the New York Times.

"In recent decades, countries that house remains of the ancient world have become determined to keep archaeological finds within their borders," explains the New York Times article. Furthermore, small museums often lack "the financial resources to buy works or borrow actively from other collections." Because of these constraints, Dr. Constance Gane, curator of the Horn Museum and assistant professor of archaeology and Old Testament at AU, told Adventist Today that the museum is thrilled to exhibit the ceramic figurine fragments.

Farm to School Success

Berrien County Juvenile Center food service manager Charity Hackett first took an interest in serving more fresh fruits and vegetables to residents, utilizing a garden at the Center. Since then, the Center has obtained food preservation equipment, developed resident food handling skills training and purchased CSA shares aided by the Michigan Farm to School Grant program. The Berrien County Juvenile Center was one of 21 MI Farm to School Grant recipients in 2014.

In the first year of the farm-to-school initiative, Hackett found difficulty in obtaining small quantities of a variety of produce from many different commercial farm vendors. Working with Michigan State University Extension and the MSU Product Center, the nearby Andrews University's CSA and market garden program was identified as a reliable source of fresh fruits and vegetables. Bulk apples are purchased from a separate grower.

Horn Museum in New York Times

In a few months, the Siegfried Horn Museum at Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Mich., will exhibit 48 ancient fragments of possibly religious ceramic figures depicting humans and horses. Dating from the 8th to the 6th century B.C., they were excavated over more than a decade ending in 2012 at Tall Jalul in Jordan.

While small, the exhibition, part of a one-year loan agreement with Jordan, will be something of a rarity.

Notre Dame, Ind. – The Holy Cross men's basketball team hosted Andrews University Saturday night in their 2014-15 home opener. The Saints fell to the Cardinals, 59-57. The loss drop the Saints to a 2-3 record for the season.

After giving up a five point lead to the visitors, the Saints made a 15-3 run capped by a steal and layup by Darrell McIntyre. The Saints took a 32-30 lead in at halftime. Cardinals guard Brandon von Dorpowski kept the visitors in the game with three first half 3-point buckets. The Saints had seven steals and twelve points off of turnovers in the opening period, but shot only 37.9% from the field.

The Saints extended the lead to nine points at the 13:52 mark in the second half off of a put back. The Cardinals wouldn't go away as they chipped into the Saints lead, finally taking their first lead of the second half (51-50) with 4:01 left in the game.

It was a tight game down the stretch with the Saints taking back a two point lead with 39 seconds left from a Zoe Bauer three pointer. The Cardinals answered with a three of their own from Dorpowski (his fifth three of the game). The Saints had a chance to take the lead with a Columbus jumper from the elbow, but the ball rimmed out and Cardinals guard Gabriel Becton grabbed the rebound while being fouled. Becton made 1-of-2 free throws giving the Saints one last chance to take the game with three seconds left. Saints junior guard O'Brien Hobbs had a good look from three on the left wing, but was denied the game winning shot when the ball rimmed out as time expired.
Three Saints scored in double digits: McIntyre (15), Hobbs (12), and Columbus (11). Columbus added 10 rebounds for his first double-double of the season. The Cardinals hit a staggering 50% (10-20) from three point range, while the Saints were 26.1% (6-23) from three and 35.8% (19-53) from the field.

The Saints will open up CCAC play this Wednesday, November 19th when they host the Panthers of Purdue-North Central at McKenna Arena. Tipoff is scheduled for 7:00 p.m. EST.
Caring for the community

SOUTH BEND — The Grace Place may be fairly new to the community, but members have already made their presence known with their programs on health, marriage and finances and their regular outreach to South Bend neighborhoods.

The church held its first service in February 2013 in the home they found at the Community Congregational Church, 19671 Cleveland Road in South Bend. The two churches collaborate on joint services and programs at various times during the year. The Grace Place is affiliated with the First Seventh-day Adventist Church in South Bend.

Hyveth Williams, an Andrews University professor, founded the church with the express goal of reaching out to the community. Church members have adopted as their own the neighborhood bordered by Portage Road, Cushing Street and Lincoln Way, going out every two weeks to give away free food and other items, to invite people to come to church and to tell them about the special seminars and programs the church offers.

“We’ve had financial peace programs and programs about diabetes, we’re having a health fair and a marriage seminar in the new year,” she said. “We’ve helped wherever we see a need. We’ve cleaned a woman’s home, we’ve raked leaves and shoveled snow. We want the community to know that we care about them.”

Williams said church members take bread and other food items when they go out to the neighborhood and they are in the process of establishing a food bank at the Congregational Church to help community members even more. “People are looking for answers and looking for people who care,” she said. “Our focus is on what the community needs. A healthy community breeds a healthy church.”

Williams moved to this area three years ago from California to take the position at Andrews Seminary, where she is both a professor and the director of homiletics, or preaching. She was a pastor in California for more than a decade and was looking for a church to pastor after moving to this area.

“I pastored a large church in Loma Linda when I was invited to come and teach here,” she said. “The first few years, I attended different churches but I felt a need to model a church that cares for the community ... I felt it was wrong to sit back at Andrews and never give back.”

In getting ready to start the new church, she got help from some of her seminary students as well as her pastor mentor, the Rev. Throstur Thordarson. “We had one month of prayer before we had our first service,” she said. “We had put together a team of pastors from the seminary and I met with my mentor.”

“We spent a month driving around the neighborhood and praying,” she said. “We told people we met at the mall that we were starting a church and invited other Seventh-day Adventists. Our first service was on Feb. 16, 2013. We had 30 people from the seminary and 60 from the community.”

Williams said she sees The Grace Place not only as a way to reach out to the community but also as a training lab for the pastors and students she’s teaching at the seminary. The church’s name was selected after the 12 charter members all made suggestions. “The Grace Place was one of the suggestions and it just felt right,” she said. “It’s a place where everyone can come and feel comfortable.”

Williams, a native of Jamaica, came to the ministry after a career in politics. “I worked with the mayor of Hartford (Conn.) and then ran against him,” she said. “It was then that I had a conversion experience and dropped everything including politics.”

She considers preaching a natural transition from politics. “I was already speaking and trying to persuade others,” she said. “I feel like God is training me to be His spokesperson. I want to let people know that God can make a difference in their life.”

People can learn about The Grace Place at www.tgpthegraceplace.org. The church has Bible Study every Saturday at 10 a.m. followed by the worship service at 11 a.m.

Garth Woodruff said, "60% of the people felt that they were eating healthier inside their own homes. 47% of the people heard their neighbors talking more about health than they did the summer before."

Woodruff said that students grow the majority of the fruits and vegetables that they sell in the truck.

Woodruff said, "Somebody with an EBT card which is food stamps, buys fresh produce at a farmers market, they can get a two for one deal so they can basically spend two dollars for everyone dollar of cost."

He said 30% of their patrons paid with food stamps. Stephen Erich said "It was kind of a dream, a dream Erich drove the mobile farm market to the Ferry Resource center in Niles every Monday this summer.

Erich said, "When I first got there there were maybe four kids that would come every week! At first when they would come they wouldn't know what to do and they were really shy and then they started helping out! So then they jumped in and they would help us unload the stuff and put it back up and then they would ask for their pay."

Andrews University said they hope to expand the program into the fall next year, and they are also looking into a delivery service where vegetables would be taken straight to people's front door.

Boundless Love: Heartwarming Story from an International Student

Note: The following was written by an international student and is published by request of the student and International Student Services.

Boundless Love: From Classroom to the Operating Room
by Yafu Qu

At 10 a.m. on September 17, 2014, I suddenly began to experience a severe stomachache. It continued to worsen until at 2 p.m. I felt so much pain that I could not get up from my seat. I was sweating all over.

Three of my classmates, Jessica, Yumei Cai, and Pastor Jose, saw this unusual behavior and called the campus safety office. When the emergency car came, my classmates helped me into the car and we went to University Medical where I had a blood test and received immediate care. The doctor told me that it was appendicitis and that I needed to be transferred to the hospital for emergency surgery.

I was in so much pain that I could not sit up. The doctor gave me a shot to relieve the pain, and immediately my thoughts became hazy. It was difficult for me to see and understand things. Pastor Jose drove us to the Lakeland Regional Medical Center in St Joseph. However, I was in the United States from China to pursue my MDiv degree at Andrews University and had arrived only a month ago. Now I faced a strange country, a strange hospital, and a strange medical system, but somehow God was giving me a deep inner peace!

One issue is that I did not know my medical insurance number! This is not something I had memorized (do you know yours by memory?), and I had no card with me. At that time, I just thought that I would go through the medical treatment and then go home to take my son to Pathfinders! So I did not call my wife to tell her about my treatment in hospital. The doctor asked for my wife to be informed, and then the treatment could proceed.

The medicine the doctor gave me to dull the pain had made my thoughts slow and hazy so I had to depend on my three classmates. Also, I did not know English very well, and they were very brave to stay with me and help me. They called many people for help, sending out many urgent requests for help. Thankfully, they were able to make contact with my wife and brought her to the hospital.

After two examinations from the doctor, it was already evening, and my classmates had two tests the next day. So they did their homework and reviewed their lessons in the hospital hallways, staying with me until 9 p.m. They would not go back to Andrews due to their concern for my ability to communicate with the hospital staff. They stayed with me for 7 hours. They did not think about themselves, the time, their test scores or...

About Chef Mark Anthony

My name is Mark Anthony and I have traveled across the country doing hundreds of healthy cooking shows in every state in the country including Hawaii. Alaska is my last state and they're booked for October 2011. I also do regular cooking shows on 3ABN Worldwide Television.

Over the past few years, I have lost 80 pounds! I have also dropped my cholesterol from 263 down to 118, and I have never felt better! It is all from living a vegan lifestyle. That's what I teach at my live cooking shows; How to cook healthy and save money doing it. It's not mysterious or difficult and I want people to know that it is realistic.

I have also enclosed a couple of articles from the dozens of writings that have been done about these amazing accomplishments. The country is really into the healthy lifestyle right now.

I also want to mention that I do these events for FREE. That's right, totally FREE. It's free for the people attending, and it's free for the facilities conducting these events. I have done these events at hospitals, churches, senior centers, universities, and local conventions.

This is all about teaching the community about how to get healthy and stay healthy. It's about motivating them off all the processed food and chemicals that cause killer diseases such as atherosclerosis, high cholesterol, high blood pressure and diabetes, and getting back to the healthy lifestyle we used to have here in America.

My shows are a fun and exciting program. I cook everything right in front of the crowd, while teaching principles of healthy cooking. I do watermelon sculptures and even paint edible foot paintings with my hands. It's not your ordinary boring cooking class. I also illustrate the connection between body, mind, & spirit. It is actually proven that when we get physically healthier, we also get mentally healthier, and that we also have better spiritual connections. It's so amazing how our bodies are connected in so many different ways.

Missing Dog

Dog Name:
Payton

Description:

Additional information:
When lost the dog was wearing a purple collar. The collar had a name tag for the dog. The tag had her name on it (Payton Tucker) and also had my phone number, 269-277-2706. Also the dog had a metal chain type leash about 3 feet long.

Location Lost:
At about 530pm on Saturday October 11-2014 I was with the dog at the dog park in Kiwanis in St. Joseph near Langley and Pearl Street. Payton got away and went up the wooded hill that ends up in the sub-division on the Langley side of the park.
