Advanced Connections for Student Employees--Tuesday Choices

The Office of Human Resources is excited to provide an opportunity for our student employees to participate in Advanced Connections for Student Employees training during Tuesday Choices/University Workshops this Spring semester, beginning on January 13.

Advanced Connections was developed with the intent of improving the quality of service provided to internal and external customers of an educational institution, and Andrews University has been offering this professional development opportunity to its faculty and staff for several years now. We recognize that a significant portion of our workforce on campus is student employees, with many of these students on the "frontlines," providing customer service to many individuals here on campus.

In an effort to improve our culture of service, we are excited to be able to provide this opportunity for student employees to attend Advanced Connections training! Topics to be discussed will include building a service culture, overcoming barriers, effective communication, checking for customer satisfaction, meeting service challenges and more.

Student employees wanting to attend Advanced Connections training during Tuesday Choices will need to RSVP by emailing training@andrews.edu, and they will need to provide their full name, ID#, email address, and the department in which they work. Please note that in order for them to receive the certification, you will need to attend all 6 sessions being offered during Tuesday Choices. There are only 35 seats available for this training.

Andrews Web Re-Engineering Project

We are rebuilding the Andrews website from the ground up and we want your feedback. For several months now, the campus Web Committee has been discussing and prioritizing how to best implement an overall update to the Andrews website. This significant update would represent a variety of benefits to everyone involved at Andrews, and its most direct mission would be to make the web experience a more engaging one, especially for future students to help improve our overall enrollment, as well as our campus community.

The provost has asked Integrated Marketing & Communication to spearhead the Web Re-Engineering project (working closely with Information Technology Services and other offices). Work began late last semester, and we are now hosting a set of town hall meetings in early January to both 1) inform the Andrews community about some of the details and specifics of the project (priorities, timeline, scope), and 2) receive valuable feedback from you as our campus community on the direction and alternatives for our website as it is reengineered.

Please join us for one of our town hall meetings to get involved; all take place in the Whirlpool Room in Chan Shun Hall (School of Business Administration):

- Wednesday, Jan. 7, 2-3:30 p.m.
- Monday, Jan. 12, 3:30-5 p.m.
- Tuesday, Jan. 13, 6-7:30 p.m.
- Wednesday, Jan. 21, 2-3:30 p.m.

Music Materials Center Spring Hours

The Music Materials Center, a branch of the James White Library, announces its Spring hours!

- Sundays, 1:30-6:30pm
- Mondays -Thursdays, 8:25am-8:30pm
• Fridays, 8:25am-3:00pm

One of the University’s hidden gems, we are located in the basement of Hamel Hall. Andrews University students, faculty, and community members are invited to visit us and check out a wide variety of printed music for piano, voice, and other instruments.

We also have many dictionaries and reference books on music, as well as hymnals for personal use or Friday night vespers!

Our professional music librarian is available for research consultations if your English, History, Religion, or other paper incorporates aspects of music, worship, or musical culture.

Also, many music resources are available online via the James White Library website, such as Naxos, RLIM, JSTOR, and Oxford Music Online. Access to these resources is FREE for Andrews University students and staff using university IDs and logins. http://www.andrews.edu/library/music/index.html

Tablets for Cuba

TABLETS FOR CUBA. Want to be part of an unprecedented ministry in communist Cuba? Christians in Cuba have no access to religious books, and entering them into the country is almost impossible. The solution? A Tablet. Yes, a tablet can be easily entered into the country and it can be loaded with a host of materials such as Bibles, EGW books, SDA Bible Commentary, Hymnal, music and more. Perhaps you are planning to upgrade your tablet this Christmas, or you have an old tablet you would like to donate. Give the gift of “knowledge unto salvation” this Christmas. Give a “library” to a Cuban family or Bible worker today. Drop your used Tablet at the Master of Divinity office at the Seminary and know that you are giving a gift of a “lifetime.” For more information contact Fernando Ortiz, ortizl@andrews.edu or 269.471.3416. On behalf of a Cuban Bible worker or family, Thanks!

STUDENTS: Take Fall Course Surveys
It is once again time for students to rate their courses through course surveys. Course surveys provide the opportunity to give important (and anonymous) feedback to instructors on the effectiveness of the course.

Most courses will be surveyed electronically through our automated system, Class Climate. Email invitations for each course survey will be sent Thursday, November 20. If the survey is not taken, reminders will be sent automatically every three days until December 5. A Certificate of Completion will be generated and emailed you after each survey is submitted. This may be saved, and used as proof of completion if the instructor offers any type of incentive.

Thank you in advance for your participation. If you have any questions, please contact the Office of Institutional Effectiveness at ext. 3308 (assessment@andrews.edu)

Academic Conference to be Held at Andrews

by Jenna Neil

The annual Michigan Academy of Science, Arts & Letters (MASAL) conference will take place on the campus of Andrews University on Friday, March 13, 2015. MASAL, an interdisciplinary academic conference, is held each year at a different university in Michigan.

"Being able to host MASAL is really an honor for Andrews University," says Sarah Burton, administrative assistant in the Office of Research and Creative Scholarship. "It means that we are recognized as a university with substantial research programs that produce excellent scholarship."

Conference participants, including undergraduate and graduate students, as well as faculty members, give presentations on their research, with time for questions and answers after each presentation. There is also a poster session where presenters can discuss their research with interested participants in a more informal setting.

With more than thirty parallel sessions, there is a session for just about any academic discipline, from Administration and Anthropology to Women's & Gender Studies and Zoology. Several of the section chairs for the event are from Andrews University, including Bruce Closser, associate professor of English, Brendan Cross, assistant professor of physics, Ryan Hayes, associate professor of chemistry, Shandelle Henson, professor of mathematics, Boon-Chai Ng, professor of engineering, Ryan Hayes, associate professor of chemistry, Krista Turner, masters student in English, and Rachel Williams-Smith, associate professor of communication.

The afternoon Keynote Address will be given by Andrews University faculty members James Hayward (biology) and Shandelle Henson (mathematics) on their ecological research on the effects of climate change on the behavior of seabirds. The deadline to submit abstracts for consideration for the conference is January 6, 2015. For more information on MASAL, visit andrews.edu/go/masal.

Howard Center Presents... "His Creation"

The Howard Performing Arts Center will present "His Creation," an interactive family program by Rich Aguilera as part of the 2014-2015 Howard Center Presents... series on Saturday, Jan. 10, 2015. Aguilera's high-energy presentation will utilize props, audience interaction, costumes, photos, video and other special effects to explore the subject of creation and evolution. Two showings, one at 6 p.m. and another at 8 p.m., will entertain parents and children alike.

Aguilera, "The Mud Guy" from Guide Magazine and 3ABN's "Kids' Time," travels the world looking for evidence of creation and sharing his discoveries with kids and adults. He writes several monthly columns, has published several books, produces audio and video resources and does speaking engagements that teach about nature and creation. Aguilera doesn't shy away from asking hard questions that even adults secretly have. Some of the questions he will answer are: How does carbon dating work? What evidence is found in human DNA about our origins? Is there scientific evidence that proves evolution?

A parent who attended a show in the past said, "I especially like the interactive nature of Rich's presentations. I have never seen our children sit to attentive to a presentation that was equally appealing to adults!"

Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for students and children. They can be purchased online at howard.andrews.edu or at the box office by calling 888-467-6442.
Faculty Senate on Race & Justice

The following is an official statement voted unanimously by the Andrews University Faculty Senate on Wednesday, December 10, 2014.

The members of the Faculty Senate have watched with great sadness and concern the events of the last few weeks of ongoing incidents of racial distrust and conflict in a number of America’s major cities. In Ferguson, Cleveland and New York events have unfolded that, whatever one’s race, color, or ideology, can only be seen as tragic.

The loss of life is always the sad result of our fallen, sin-sick world. Such losses are made even harder to deal with, however, when the circumstances surrounding them seem senseless and unjust, especially for those who have historically experienced mistreatment at the hands of those in positions of authority. We have far to go as a society in achieving a system of justice that is viewed as fair and impartial by all groups of people.

We today affirm our commitment as leaders and representatives of the faculty of Andrews University to work for justice, peace and reconciliation in our society as well as in the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the families and friends impacted by the conflicts and losses in these events. We call on our colleagues and community members to join with us in prayer and action to seek the scriptural goal of having “justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream” (Amos 5:24; NAS).

As disciples of Jesus, who are instructed to daily seek the kingdom of God, we are committed to implementing His principles today. We look forward to this aspiration being fully realized in the earth made new.
Student Gardens Represent at Conference

by Jenna Neil

Arthur Mulyono, manager of the Andrews University Student Gardens, and Stephen Erich, a 2014 graduate from Andrews with a degree in international business, had the opportunity to present at the first annual Adventist Agriculture Conference in Dickson, Tennessee, last month.

Mulyono got involved with the conference when he attended an education and agriculture conference in 2013 at Uchee Pines Institute in Seale, Alabama.

"At the end of the sessions there was a group of individuals who were interested in forming an association," he explains. "More than 20 farmers and participants from throughout the U.S. met for several hours and discussed the idea. At the end of the meeting, the Adventist Agricultural Association was assembled and the board of directors was formed."

Mulyono was invited to participate at this year's conference and present on an institutional track and participate on other activities such as the Youth Panel and the Institutional Panel. He gave a report on the Student Gardens and Erich reported on the Mobile Farm Market.

"Working as the Mobile Market Coordinator this summer, I was exposed to agriculture for the first time," says Erich. "Although I didn't spend every day in the field, I learned a lot about farming, particularly about taking produce to market."

Near the end of the summer, Mulyono asked Erich if he would be interested in attending the conference and sharing about the Mobile Farm Market during the Student Gardens presentation. Then, during his interview for his current position as the field projects collaborator at Adventist Southeast Asia Projects (ASAP Ministries), the director mentioned the conference and asked if Erich would be interested in attending.

"They thought it would be a good opportunity to learn and network with people interested in mission and agriculture. So I decided to go."

Over three hundred people attended the event, according to Mulyono.

"Most were from the states," he said, "but there were a handful of people from throughout the world including Tanzania and Columbia."

Attendees had the opportunity to choose between five different tracks: institutional, market farming and gardening, home gardening, soil health and simple living. There were also hands-on demonstrations and a general session that tied agriculture with Adventism.

"I attended the institutional track along with 11 other institutions that were present," said Mulyono. "Here we reported what each institution is doing." Other presenters besides Mulyono and Erich included Light Bearers, Daystar Academy, Weimar College, Great Lakes Adventist Academy and Southern Adventist University.

"The purpose of this association is to revive the role of agriculture in the Adventist church," says Erich. "Over the weekend, after a lot of thought, I began to understand the important role agriculture can, and perhaps should, play."

"The purpose of the event was to network, share and experience, encourage and teach the purpose of agriculture as it relates to God's people," adds Mulyono.

"Andrews Student Gardens can be a model of market gardening for institutions," said Mulyono. "Some Adventist institutions are seeking ways to bring back agriculture into their curriculum. Presenting at the conference allows Andrews the opportunity to network with other institutions and support and encourage others in this line of work."

Both Mulyono and Erich said that Andrews University is one of the only schools to provide an agriculture program and degree.

When asked if this event is the first of its kind, Mulyono said, "Yes and no. In the past 20+ years, there have been meetings about agriculture among the Seventh-day Adventist Church but no association was formed." Organizers are currently planning to have the second annual Adventist Agriculture Conference from November 4–8, 2015, and the list of possible venues includes Andrews.

Department of PT Receives Recycling Grant

by Lucero Castellanos-Aguirre

Each fall the Berrien County Parks Department offers a recycling grant. This year it was awarded to the Andrews University Department of Physical Therapy.

"It is called the Berrien County School Recycling Grant," said Penny Sisson, the department's operations assistant. She explained that all eligible Berrien County schools have the opportunity to receive a grant of up to one thousand dollars towards this recycling initiative.

"I wrote the grant requesting nearly $580 to purchase ten 23-gallon blue recycling containers," says Sisson. "We were awarded the grant for the full amount requested at the end of October."

The department's students have added a new class officer position to help with some new student-led initiatives. One is the Community Outreach and Volunteer Coordinator (COVC). Sophomore Samantha Callahan is this year's COVC and has put together a committee of eight other students.

"I am working with this committee to initialize and maintain our recycling program," stated Sisson. "Our plan is to place a recycling container next to each trash can around campus with clear instructions regarding what may be put in them."

The department encourages the recycling of paper, aluminum, cans, plastic bottles and glass. Physical therapy students, along with the department's student employees, will be in charge of the containers' maintenance.

"Students have shown an interest in recycling since I came to work here five and a half years ago," shared Sisson. "We have taken steps to ensure it is maintained long term—including adding this responsibility to my job description."

Sisson indicated that they have purchased real tableware for the department to avoid using paper plates and plastic forks for department lunches and events.

On Thursday, Nov. 20, the department received the recycling containers that were ordered. This will be the start to the department's vision to better the Andrews campus through recycling.

Carmelita Troy Interviewed on 3ABN

by Jenna Neil

Carmelita Troy, an associate professor of accounting in the School of Business Administration, was recently interviewed by 3ABN on “Scriptural Foundation for Business.” The episode, filmed in August at the 3ABN studios in Illinois, aired on Monday, November 17, as part of the 3ABN Today program with Danny Shelton and Yvonne Lewis.

“When the first monographs in the Spiritual Foundations series were published in June of 2014, I took a picture of the cover of one, which I had written with LeRoy Ruhupatty, another School of Business faculty member, and posted the picture on Facebook,” says Troy. “Danny Shelton, 3ABN founder, saw the post and sent a message that he was interested in interviewing us about the series.”

Monographs are groups of detailed written studies based on a specialized subject or an aspect of that subject. The Scriptural Foundations of Business monographs series is a group of written studies that brings business and scripture together.

“The monographs integrate scripture with the basic concepts and theories that are already in the business curriculum,” explains Troy.

Troy was interviewed on the show with Michael Cafferky, professor of business and management at Southern Adventist University (Collegedale, Tennessee). Cafferky was invited to appear along with Troy because he is one of the editors of the monograph series.

“Michael Cafferky and Bruce Wrenn came up with the idea of the series and they both worked tirelessly to recruit authors and the Andrews University Press to be the publisher,” says Troy.

Wrenn, Colson Endowed Chair of marketing at Andrews University, and Cafferky were the editors of the project, which included creating the idea, finding writers, and doing final edits.

Prior to this series on the Scriptural Foundations of Business, there was very little material available that integrated scripture and business that targeted college students as they are beginning their studies in business. This series is designed to be a part of the business curriculum.

“This topic is important to me because I want my students to understand and plan to be honest in their business dealings and to have a solid biblical base for responding appropriately when enticed to wrong,” says Troy.

In the accounting portion of the monograph series, Troy and coauthor Ruhupatty used the biblical story of Joseph.

"Joseph was trustworthy in managing and accounting for the assets of Potiphar," she explains. "Despite the fact that he was wrongly accused and thrown into the dungeon, Joseph maintained his integrity." She wants to emphasize to students that it’s important to do the right thing regardless of the consequences.

3ABN saw the importance of the topic in a broader sense than originally envisioned.

"Originally they envisioned providing Christian colleges and universities with a resource to integrate faith and learning in the area of business," says Troy. "Not only did they accomplish that, 3ABN also brought to our attention that this series has a much larger target audience such as church treasurers, Adventist and Christian students attending non-Adventist/non-Christian colleges and universities, business people and just about anyone who conducts business."

With the publication of the monograph series and her interview on 3ABN, Troy hopes that students and others alike realize the importance of honesty in business and how each principle can be based on the Bible.

Serving the World's Cities: An Andrews University Response

Cities have been interwoven in human experience from the beginning of time. Some will argue that humans prefer the gentle pastoral beauty and pace of life familiar to uncrowded rural settings, but the reality tells us otherwise. For whatever reason, we gather in cities. Today's cities are larger, more creative, diverse and global than ever. In the mid-19th century less than 10 percent of the world's population lived in a metropolis of 100,000 or more. By 1900 the urban population in the world had increased to 14 percent. Today, 60 percent of the human population is in the city, and in developed nations like Canada and America it is an astounding 75 percent. And the pace of migration to urban life is quickening. Today's cities are the center of power, culture, economy and spirituality.

Christians bring their influence into the life of the city as they live there, work there, play there and socialize there. Most young adults leaving our colleges and universities establish careers in one of our world's urban centers. They need support as they bring the presence of Christ into those cultures.

Recognizing this challenge, the Andrews University Doctor of Ministry program offers an Urban Ministry Concentration. The next cohort in this concentration will begin in March 2015 in Chicago. Skip Bell, professor of Christian leadership, leads the concentration.

Four Alumni Build Company

Founded by four alumni of Andrews University, Galileo's mission is to create UAV systems that enhance human life and help solve critical health, logistics, security, and entertainment challenges.

The team realized that both professionals and consumers desire to interact with drones but are commonly faced with complexities that limit their use of the technology. Galileo is pushing to change this reality with their motto: "Personality to make it yours. Apps to make it powerful. Hardware to make it happen."

Galileo will launch the first of its two models, the Alpha, through crowdfunding in 2015. The Alpha will be designed for personal use with a simplicity tailored for the mass market.

Professor Speaks on Cuba-U.S. Relations

The Obama administration's announcement this week that it will be normalizing relations with Cuba came as a surprise to many, including Andrews University Professor of History or Political Science Doctor Gary Wood.
Professor's Book Used in Romanian Ministry

Aventist students in Romania have decided to share a book of drawings with their classmates that place Jesus in New York in hope that the unusual illustrations will prompt people to reach for the Bible for answers.

The Romanian chapter of AMiCUS, an organization that strives to share Jesus with non-Adventist students, chose the book, Jesus of New York: Premonitions of New York Teenager, as its main missionary tool for 2015, and demand has already exceeded the initial print run of 2,500 copies by the Adventist-operated Romanian Publishing House.

The 43 drawings by retired Andrews University professor Greg Constantine are replete with allusions to characters, situations, actions, dialogues, and objects from the gospel stories that the students hope will encourage readers to double-check their literacy of the Bible.

More than 200 students at Andrews University took part in the March for Justice.

"I felt like not being involved was also saying I didn't care," said Jevon McAllister, a student at the school. "So I felt like now was the time to get involved and for my voice to be heard."

For students, this was a chance to lend their voice to a larger movement.

Family on the Mend After Plane Crash

A plane crash on Friday in Berrien Springs is still affecting the aviation community at Andrews University.

Bryce Fisher, the man that made the miraculous landing just two miles from the school's airport, obtained his pilot's license from their aviation department.

He is also an airplane mechanic and has an aviation maintenance license from Andrews University too.

His family was heading from Richmond, Indiana to Berrien Springs for a family function when Bryce believes the engine failed.

Cities have been interwoven in human experience from the beginning of time. Some will argue that humans prefer the gentle pastoral beauty and pace of life familiar to uncrowded rural settings, but the reality tells us otherwise. For whatever reason, we gather in cities. Today’s cities are larger, more creative, diverse and global than ever. In the mid-19th century less than 10 percent of the world’s population lived in a metropolis of 100,000 or more. By 1900 the urban population in the world had increased to 14 percent. Today, 60 percent of the human population is in the city, and in developed nations like Canada and America it is an astounding 75 percent. And the pace of migration to urban life is quickening. Today’s cities are the center of power, culture, economy and spirituality.

People continue to migrate to the city. There is an optimism people have about the city, although there are large portions of today’s cities marked by poverty. The reality remains that the city is the center of power and wealth, and those who live in the city seek to share in that economic opportunity. Cities will continue to provide the narratives of our human experience.

The reality is that the cities are a dilemma. Though they hold promise, they do not always satisfy human need. They drive cultural and ecological change, growth and pollution at the same time. Cities enchant us with possibility, but for too many the attraction of the city has been a deception, and the city a place of injustice. One can describe cities as flourishing, as providing abundance, and at the same time as broken, in trouble, even as places of despair.

The significance and challenge of the city for the Christian church is the question of how to go about sharing the Gospel there. Or one might say how to live as a disciple of Jesus in its midst. The city is a space for 21st century mission. It is an opportunity for the church to respond with love and care to the challenges facing urban populations and to transform the culture.

Christians bring their influence into the life of the city as they live there, work there, play there and socialize there. Most young adults leaving our colleges and universities establish careers in one of our world’s urban centers. They need support as they bring the presence of Christ into those cultures.

Recognizing this challenge, the Andrews University Doctor of Ministry program offers an Urban Ministry Concentration. The next cohort in this concentration will begin in March 2015 in Chicago. Skip Bell, professor of Christian leadership, leads the concentration.

The goal of the Doctor of Ministry Urban Ministries Concentration is to develop three areas in a person who serves in an urban context: being, knowing and doing. Being helps the doctoral students to experience transformative development in several areas including spirituality, discipleship, compassionate vision for the city and appreciation of diversity. Knowing develops students’ knowledge base in issues of urban society, how systems shape life and mission in the context of cities, and how to promote healthy cities. Doing cultivates skills including creating vision, identifying needs, community development, leading and managing specific ministries and managing change.

The curriculum is a rigorous four-year experience plus a transformative project. The program requires work with the best literature in the area of study, field research, theological and spiritual formation, relational learning with a cohort, dialogue and lecture with the world’s leading experts on urban culture and mission and immersion in three specific cities: Chicago (Illinois), Toronto (Canada), and London (UK). The participants will work with a variety of real urban issues including housing, poverty, justice, hunger, education, human conflict, health services and empowerment.
“This is an extraordinary formation and leadership opportunity for our church,” Bell states. “These Doctors of Ministry students will cherish a dream of Christ in the city, and of urban neighborhoods where the next generation of Christ’s disciples can thrive in faith and life.”

Sung Kwon, director of Community Services for the North American Division of Seventh-day Adventists, has led an initiative of the NAD to provide two scholarships for these doctoral students in each union territory in North America. Interested students or church administrators can inquire about those scholarships from the Doctor of Ministry program.

The application deadline is January 16, 2015. Instructions, information and a DMin application package link can be found at the Doctor of Ministry website. The cohort is limited to 25. For more information, call 269-471-3544, or email the DMin program at dmin@andrews.edu.

Galileo is launching a crowdfunded campaign in 2015

Founded by four alumni of Andrews University, Galileo’s mission is to create UAV systems that enhance human life and help solve critical health, logistics, security, and entertainment challenges.

The team realized that both professionals and consumers desire to interact with drones but are commonly faced with complexities that limit their use of the technology. Galileo is pushing to change this reality with their motto: “Personality to make it yours. Apps to make it powerful. Hardware to make it happen.”

“We want to take the drone industry in an entirely new direction by creating a UAV that could save lives during an avalanche, protect your business, or even root for your favorite team; not just carry a GoPro.” –Joshua Sanabria, CEO

Galileo will launch the first of its two models, the Alpha, through crowdfunding in 2015. The Alpha will be designed for personal use with a simplicity tailored for the mass market. Through an expanding supply of software apps and swappable hardware peripherals, Galileo’s future customers will be able to upgrade their drone’s capabilities and accomplish virtually any task.

“Once you own an Alpha, the possibilities will be limitless.” –Rodney Allen, COO

Galileo is already seeing a lot of demand from businesses and consumers through a growing list of pending pre-orders for the Alpha, which is almost ready for demonstrations.

“I look forward to providing the industry with a drone that respects design and has an unmatched level of versatility.” –Christopher Bannister, CMO

Andrews University Professor Discusses Obama Cuba Announcement

975ycountry.com/pages/20549010.php
The Obama administration's announcement this week that it will be normalizing relations with Cuba came as a surprise to many, including Andrews University Professor of History or Political Science Doctor Gary Wood. He tells us that if there's anything to criticize the administration over, it's that the agreement with Cuba doesn't come with many obligations from the island nation:

Wood says that, among the Cuban American community, older people tended to support the tough American restrictions on interactions with Cuba, while polls show the young wanted them lifted. Wood expects that many Cuban Americans will now travel there to visit family, and he expects the appearance of American tourists in Cuba to help its economy:

Doctor Wood doubts that Congress will go one further than President Obama and end the trade embargo:
As for whether this will cause the government in Cuba to weaken, Wood says it'll take about two years to get an answer to that. He thinks the move to change relations was an Obama attempt at leaving a legacy on foreign policy.
Romanian Students Share Jesus Through a Quirky Book

Andrew McChesney  News editor,  Adventist Review

The young people make “Jesus of New York” by a retired Andrews University professor their missionary tool for 2015.

Posted December 14, 2014

Adventist students in Romania have decided to share a book of drawings with their classmates that place Jesus in New York in hope that the unusual illustrations will prompt people to reach for the Bible for answers.

The Romanian chapter of AMiCUS, an organization that strives to share Jesus with non-Adventist students, chose the book,  Jesus of New York: Premonitions of New York Teenager,  as its main missionary tool for 2015, and demand has already exceeded the initial print run of 2,500 copies by the Adventist-operated Romanian Publishing House.

The 43 drawings by retired Andrews University professor Greg Constantine are replete with allusions to characters, situations, actions, dialogues, and objects from the gospel stories that the students hope will encourage readers to double-check their literacy of the Bible.

“The Adventist students have a vision that their friends will be thus determined to grab a New Testament and read the gospels to discover for themselves the rich meaning of the life of Jesus,” said Adrian Bocaneanu, a Romanian church leader who attended the book’s launch with Constantine and 700 other people at a conference of AMiCUS, or Adventist Ministry to College and University Students, in the city of Stupini-Brasov on Nov. 29.

Each drawing is accompanied by a few words that provide clues to the time, location, characters, and story that is being referenced from the Bible. The text is followed by a paraphrase of the Bible passage that depicted in the drawing.

Here are three drawings with the text from the book:
Constantine, whose parents were born in a Romanian village, and who worked as an art professor at Andrews University for 43 years, said at the book launch that the drawings in modern-day New York show a young Jesus at a time before He embarked on his post-baptism ministry. The illustrations place Jesus in situations similar to those He later described in well-known stories and speeches.

"The idea for this series of drawings came to me as I struggled to contribute something for young people to identify with from Jesus' youth," Constantine said in the book's preface.

The drawings were produced in 1990 and presented in an exhibition in Bucharest in 2004, but this is the first time they have been published in a book. The publication was funded by the Romanian Adventist Church's youth department and a private donor.

Early indications suggest that the book will be an effective way to reach Romanian young people with Bible truths, Bocaneanu said.

A selection of the drawings were presented to the public at an exhibition in the foyer of the main concert hall of Brasov on Dec. 1. The mostly young visitors expressed enthusiasm in discovering the hidden meanings of the drawings as explained by Constantine, who also signed dozens of books, Bocaneanu said.

"The exhibition is scheduled to tour other major cities in Romania with the implication that Jesus could have been an exemplary teenager in any of them, a friend to all, and a compassionate guide to the true life," he said.

We reserve the right to approve and disapprove comments accordingly and will not be able to respond to inquiries regarding that. Please keep all comments respectful and courteous to authors and fellow readers.
Hundreds rally for justice in Berrien Springs

More than two hundred students at Andrews University took part in the March for Justice.

“I felt like not being involved was also saying I didn’t care,” said Jevon McAllister, a student at the school. “So I felt like now was the time to get involved and for my voice to be heard.”

For students, this was a chance to lend their voice to a larger movement.

“Give the students here a voice and let them know they are not alone,” said Jameel Daniels, an organizer for the march. “They are not unheard and that we too stand for justice.”

“What's going on in these major cities, yea, it's affecting us too even though we’re attending school in a rural area,” said Michael Polite, a chaplin at the school.

The students, along with faculty and members of the community, marched more than two miles from the school to the police station. When they arrived they fell silent for four and a half minutes, to commemorate the amount of time Michael Brown laid dead on the street in Ferguson.

Then, they prayed and actually thanked police officers, pointing out that now too many officers are all being held accountable for the brutality of a few.

“There are individuals here who have no intention to abuse anyone of any ethnic group,” Polite said at the rally. “But they have every intention to use their lives on an every day basis to protect and to serve.”

“We want to make sure that, particularly the civil servants in our community, that we recognize they are not victimizing us,” Daniels said. “But that we do stand in support of those who are being victimized.”

While lately the national conversation has focused on race, for the people who took part in the rally, today was about more than that.

“We’re not saying that we only care about black lives,” McAllister said. “We care about Hispanic lives, we care about everyone's life.”

The rally at Andrews University was only one of several rallies in Michiana today. Rallies were also held in Elkhart and Benton Harbor that were inspired by Ferguson and the Eric Garner case.

Berrien Springs Camera Club Jan. Meeting

The Berrien Springs Camera Club will meet on Wed., Jan. 7, at 7 p.m. in the Berrien Springs Community Library at Cass and Union. The program will be an inwardly focused one, trying to improve the images submitted for the club’s competitions every other month.

One of the stated goals of the club is to help members improve their photographic skills. Three judges from outside come to judge the competitions, and members often wonder why a particular photo was rejected, or given fewer points than anticipated, or perhaps given an "honor" status. On the other hand, it is well recognized that judging art is very subjective. Most club members have had the experience of later resubmitting a rejected image and having it win honors.

In January three artists/photographers will critique pictures and give reasons for how they would judge them if this were a competition. Members will join in and offer their observations and suggestions, too.
Nathan Greene, world-renowned painter who lives and works locally, will be one of the judges. Another will be Breanna Bell, a Michiana photographer specializing in seniors, families, and babies. The third will be Emmanuel St. Cloud, a Berrien Springs photographer who specializes in events, portraits, and weddings.

Each member may submit five images ahead for this critiquing session. Submission guidelines are on the club's blog site: http://berrienspringscameraclub.blogspot.com/

All are welcome. Refreshments will be served.

Free Counseling Services
The Andrews Community Counseling Center (ACCC) has openings in January for a number of new clients (but interested individuals may call now and leave a confidential voicemail to get on the waiting list). Graduate practicum students provide FREE services and have training in counseling adults, adolescents and children.

Each counselor is supervised by an experienced supervisor.

Types of referral issues accepted include (among others):

- relationship issues
- depression
- anxiety
- adjusting to changes
- academic challenges
- behavioral concerns
- social skills problems
- bullying problems (victims and perpetrators)
- parent-child conflict
- many others

Counselors work with children, teens, or adults; with individuals, couples, or families. We even have a play therapy room to accommodate young clients. Therapy sessions are completely confidential.

To make an appointment or if you have any questions, please contact the ACCC at 269-471-6238. If the ACCC is closed, please leave a message (which is kept confidential) and someone will return your call as soon as possible.

A Request from Adventist Forum

Dear supporter,

For the last ten years, the Michiana Adventist Forum has been sponsoring scholarly presentations, thought-provoking discussion, and even occasional debate, with featured scholars and researchers from both the local area and further abroad.

In the past, we largely arranged for speakers who were in town and on someone else’s travel budget, since we were working on such a “shoe string” budget. In order to provide the richest intellectual experience possible, we now occasionally also arrange for speakers who require travel and lodging compensation. These new travel costs, along with the rental fees for equipment and venue, make up the majority of our expenses. Last year, however, the Forum Board voted to expand our operation by paying a $250 honorarium for each program presented as a gesture of gratitude. With these new policies in place, our expenses began exceeding the occasional contributions received. Accordingly, we are now writing to ask for your assistance in covering the costs of the Michiana Adventist Forum’s continued operation.

Though we have enjoyed the past ten years of intellectual enrichment from the Michiana Adventist Forum with minimal outlay of funds, the Forum’s continuation at the same level of excellence depends upon our willingness to support this program as a team. We encourage you at this time to consider making a tax-deductible gift to the Michiana Adventist Forum in order to enable it to continue as a major intellectual medium within our academic community. Thank you for your continued support and attendance.

Sincerely,

Art Robertson, president
Michiana Adventist Forum

Contributions should be addressed to the Michiana Adventist Forum, PO Box 417, Berrien Springs, MI 49103.

The Michiana Adventist Forum is a 501 (c) (3) Michigan nonprofit corporation. Our Federal ID Number is 26-2379144.
Cook Nuclear Plant Supports Village School

Mr. Aaron Koleda, Village Adventist Elementary School Technology Director, has a vision for computer science education. His passion is evident as he works with students to generate excitement and motivation to learn science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM subjects). Mr. Koleda recently set up an Adopt-A-Classroom website to reach out to the community for support of Computer Science Education Week, which is Dec. 8-12. His dream was to participate in the national effort for students to learn basic programming skills.

Danielle Burgoyne and Irene Weaver, employees at Cook Nuclear Plant, were searching for a community outreach program, and came across Mr. Koleda's website. These ladies are part of the group Women in Nuclear (WIN), and have been selling candy at the plant to raise funds, which would promote STEM subjects. Danielle and Irene presented to the Village School 5th-8th grade students 5 Sphero robots, which are programmable balls created by Orbotix. The student response was amazing as they cheered and shouted!

Mr. Koleda will be using these robots to teach programming to students in grades K-8 the week of Dec. 8, as they participate in the Hour of Code event that is taking place nationwide. This week, across over 150 countries, millions of people and students will try out computer programming for the first time. Anyone can learn to code! The goal is for millions of students to give it a try.

Danielle and Irene also announced that Cook Nuclear has purchased a 3D printer for the technology program. The 3D printer will arrive in February 2015.

On behalf of the Village School technology program and our students, thank you Danielle and Irene, WIN, and Cook Nuclear.

University Student Needs Cello
Hello,

I came to Andrews in the Fall 2014 to pursue a degree in Cello Performance. I could not bring with me a government owned cello that I played on during several years. I am looking for someone who has an instrument that I can use until I can buy one. If any person in the community owns an instrument that I could borrow I would be very grateful. I do not have the financial means to purchase an advanced student cello at the moment.

My name is Robert and anyone can contact me at quevedovera@andrews.edu

Thanks much.

University Student Needs Cello
Hello,

I came to Andrews in the Fall 2014 to pursue a degree in Cello Performance. I could not bring with me a government-owned cello that I played on during several years. I am looking for someone who has an instrument that I can use until I can buy one. If any person in the community owns an instrument that I could borrow I would be very grateful. I do not have the financial means to purchase an advanced student cello at the moment.

My name is Robert and anyone can contact me at quevedovera@andrews.edu

Thanks much.
