Photo of the Week: A group of faculty and staff on cross-country skis flash mobbed students as they exited PMC after Thursday Series last week. Their goal was to encourage students to embrace winter and find fun new adventures even in the cold and snow. Fresh homemade hot chocolate was provided as students trudged through the chilly afternoon to lunch and classes. (Photo by Darren Heslop, IMC staff photographer)

United Way Reading Day of Action - Volunteers Needed

United Way of Southwest Michigan and Honor Credit Union invite you to share your love of reading with a child! On March 17th, we will take action to promote the positive impact reading has on our youth. This annual Reading Day of Action asks Pre K-5th grade classrooms from all corners of Berrien and Cass County to open its doors to our community and allow volunteers to share their love of reading. Volunteers will be reading to over 10,000 children in one day! We ask you to do your part by raising awareness of the importance of reading on the development in a child's life.

Schools and Classrooms Sign up by Feb. 20th
Specify a time range you would like volunteers to come, you can even sign up a whole school! After that, United Way will coordinate volunteers to come to you! Volunteers will have a 15 minute appointment in the classroom. Though we strongly encourage volunteers to bring books we ask that classrooms have 5-6 books available just in case.

Volunteers Sign up by Feb. 27th
Volunteer from 9am-Noon or Noon-3pm. Typically you will read to multiple classrooms and are asked to bring an age appropriate book. Teachers and students love to hear new books! Volunteers can sign up in a group of two or as a single. We will do our best to keep multiple volunteer groups from one company at the same school building.

Interested?
Go to www.uwsm.org/read to sign-up and to receive more information.

Questions?
Please contact Teri Cooper at teri.cooper@uwsm.org or via phone at 269-982-1700 ext. 22.

Presenter: Anna Piskozub, Graduate Service Coordinator, School of Education, Andrews University

Exercise Motivators and Exercise Causality among Andrews University Students: A Correlational Study

The purpose of this study was to identify the most important exercise motives that influence Andrews University undergraduate students’ choices and behaviors toward acquiring a more physically active lifestyle. A second purpose was to investigate whether Andrews University students were autonomous, controlled, or impersonal in the regulation of their behavior toward exercise. Data collected from 316 undergraduate students were statistically analyzed by using descriptive statistics, bivariate, and correlational analysis. Findings revealed significant exercise motivation predictor variables for three exercise causality orientation profiles: autonomous, control, and impersonal. In addition, it exposed significant differences in the exercise motives and exercise causality orientation between the students from the School of Health Professions and other schools.

Whether or not you are a registered Andrews’ students you can join the session online from PC, Mac, iOS at https://andrews.zoom.us/j/4852614855 or join by phone: +1 (415) 762-9988 or +1 (646) 568-7788 US Toll

AICER Presents Dr. Lori Imasiku

Andrews International Center for Educational Research (AICER) invites students, faculty and interested participants to attend a research symposium on Wednesday, February 11, at 5:30 p.m.

Presenter: Dr. Lori Imasiku, Assistant Professor, Teaching, Learning & Curriculum, Andrews University

Photovoice Research Methodology

In this presentation, Dr. Lori Imasiku will discuss the photovoice methodology she used in her study of twelve students from the Kalingalinga community in Lusaka, Zambia. These students were selected to share their educational experiences through a participatory research model. All twelve students produced an educational narrative along with suggestions on how the educational system could be improved to better serve Zambia's most vulnerable youth. Seven of the twelve also contributed to the research through a photovoice project in which they documented their school and community and how the many facets of their lives played positive and negative roles in their education.

Face-to-face participants meet in Bell Hall 013

Online participants login at https://andrews.zoom.us/j/618510300 whether or not they are registered Andrews' students.

Conversation Partners

Do you enjoy meeting new people and having conversations? Want to learn about other cultures and languages? The Center for Intensive English Programs is looking for volunteers to become Conversation Partners for international students studying English.

Volunteers are asked to commit 1-2 hours a week to their partner. There is a range of possible activities, from eating lunch together to going to an art exhibit to playing games together. It is our goal, not only to give our students practice conversing in English, but to build relationships between them and the Andrews University/Berrien Springs community.

Service credit is available for the College of Arts & Sciences and the Honors Program.

ArtFest 2015 Begins This Week

by Becky St. Clair

Andrews University's Department of Visual Art & Design invites all high school-aged students to attend the first annual ArtFest, a weekend-long experience where students can explore the worlds of photography, design, fine arts and documentary film. The event takes place February 19-21, 2015, on the campus of Andrews University.

Students will dive into art by exploring many media through hands-on activities ranging from making a cyanotype to creating hand-crafted ceramics to working with professional photographic studio equipment, and much more.

Both Visual Art & Design students and professors will be on-hand to guide, instruct, offer feedback and answer questions.

The weekend culminates with an art show of each participant's favorite piece in the Visual Art & Design Gallery in Smith Hall on Saturday evening, Feb. 21.

ArtFest is open to students in grades 9-12, including home school students. Schools are encouraged to send one team of five students; individual applicants will be matched with an existing team. Students must have high school and parent approval to register.

All-inclusive cost is $75/student (free for accompanying teacher) and $75/parent or other supporter. Each team is required to have at least one supervisor.

To register visit auvad.com/artfest. For more information call 269-471-3450 or email visartndes@andrews.edu.

Leadership Partners in Brazil

by Jenna Neil

In January, 50 participants from the South American Division attended an intensive session of the MA in Leadership program in Brazil. This program is a partnership between Andrews University and Brazil Adventist University.

"A request came from the South American Division president," said Robson Marinho, chair of the Department of Leadership. "It looks like there is a trend in the church to provide leadership training for the administration and they wanted to provide this for their own administration. We prepared the program and hired the faculty."

Conversations began in 2008 and the first cohort was held in 2010. Faculty from Andrews University go there twice a year in January and July, and there are also local faculty who advise the students.

"The program is job-embedded, which means the participants are required and expected to have a professional career," explains Marinho. "The program is competency based instead of course driven and the participants demonstrate their competencies in their professional careers. Ideally, the program is open to the community and a majority of the participants are sponsored."

Each cohort lasts for two and a half years with five intensive sessions and the current cohort is the third. Four out of the five sessions take place in Brazil while the fifth takes place at the Berrien Springs campus of Andrews University. The Brazil program follows the same structure as the Andrews Department of Leadership program. During the semester, participants work with regional groups on projects, working with their advisors.
and meeting with learning groups.

"We try to keep it a smaller program," says Marinho. "So far, because of finances, we have agreed that 50 is a good size for a cohort. Though we admit a couple more than that, a few end up dropping out and we end up with 50."

"Because my first language is Portuguese, I was selected for this role before becoming the department chair," he explains. "I negotiated the partnership and am the current coordinator for the program. When I became the department chair my involvement became even stronger."

The program incorporates theories with experience, following David Kolb’s theory of experiential learning. This theory says that you reflect on your past experience, conceptualize what it means for you and your life, and move into active experimentation based on that experience.

"The participants in our program are leaders at work, either as CEOs or middle managers of church organizations like conference presidents, treasurers and department directors," says Marinho. "Reflection is the key and not memorization. To be a successful leader they must reflect on what they are doing and why."

John Cosgrove attended the session in Brazil to lead out in a roundtable workshop with the theme of leadership and values. Cosgrove is a PhD student in the leadership program at Andrews, as well as a leadership consultant, and has been the president of several different companies. The roundtable began with Cosgrove speaking during the morning and leading discussions in the afternoon.

The leadership program has an annual roundtable conference at which guest speakers discuss current topics in leadership. Roundtable conferences follow the pattern of having a keynote speaker in the morning and small group discussions, typically about a book, in the afternoon facilitated by a faculty member.

"In their small groups the participants discussed what their values are," says Marinho. "They discussed how, as a leader and as a person, they can maximize leadership with values, not only for the sake of leadership but leadership based on values. It was a great presentation and we had a great time."

Marinho began working with the cohort at its founding and is now working to ensure the partnership continues to function.

"We strongly believe," said Marinho, "that leadership only develops with reflection and building bridges between theory and practice. We're not here to teach them how to be leaders; rather we're here to develop the leadership qualities they already have and therefore strengthen that leadership role."

Karen Knotts: One-Woman Show at Andrews

For years, the question lingered in Karen Knotts' ear like a bad ring tone. "So many people, all of my life, have asked me what it's like growing up with Don Knotts as your dad," she says by telephone from her home in Los Angeles. "The fascination people have with my father was just never-ending. I finally said, almost jokingly, well, why don't I just do a show to answer all of those questions."

When her father, the legendary comedic actor best known for his role as Barney Fife on the "The Andy Griffith Show," suddenly died in 2006, it was Karen Knotts who began asking questions....

...Knotts, 60, now reveals those stories in her one-woman show, "Tied Up in Knotts," which she performs Sunday at Andrews University's Howard Performing Arts Center. In the production, Knotts steps into the roles of the famous people who came in and out of her father's life, and also serves as the show's narrator. Photographs and some rarely seen video clips augment the story, which ultimately is a father-daughter tale of his influence and their close bond on and off stage.

Driving Force Behind Andrews Study Bible Dies

Erno Gyeresi, a Romanian pastor-turned-business executive who became a key force behind the popular Andrews Study Bible, has died after a long struggle with cancer. He was 54.

Gyeresi died peacefully on Sabbath afternoon, Jan. 31, at his home in Niles, Michigan, with his family by his side, his family said.

Gyeresi spent the first 13 years of his career working as a pastor and church administrator in Romania, and the last 13 years of his life working at Andrews University Press, where he served as managing editor of the Andrews Study Bible, first released in the New King James Version in 2010.

The Music Moves Him

David Phelps believes in the power of song.

The Christian musician, best known as tenor in the Gaither Vocal Band and for his three-octave vocal range, says whether he's singing as part of Bill Gaither's legendary gospel group or as a solo artist, his goal is always the same.

"Music really is a vehicle for emotion," Phelps says by telephone from his farm in Culleoka, Tenn., just outside of Nashville. "If a song can move me in some way then in turn I can figure out how to interpret that so I can then go out on a nightly basis and look people in the face and hopefully sing it in a way that's moving to them. To me that's what it's all about."
Tied up in Knotts

BERRIEN SPRINGS - For years, the question lingered in Karen Knotts' ear like a bad ring tone.

"So many people, all of my life, have asked me what's it like growing up with Don Knotts as your dad," she says by telephone from her home in Los Angeles. "The fascination people have with my father was never-ending. I finally said, almost jokingly, well, why don't I just do a show to answer all of those questions."

When her father, the legendary comedic actor best known for his role as Barney Fife on the "The Andy Griffith Show," suddenly died in 2006, it was Karen Knotts who began asking questions.

"It was rather unexpected," she says. "I was looking for that connectivity I had just lost with my father, and that idea of creating a show was a way for me to connect to him by bringing those memories back. There were so many delightful stories he used to tell. I started writing down all the stories that I could remember, and then started picking my brother's mind. And little by little these scenarios started to develop."

Knotts, 60, now reveals those stories in her one-woman show, "Tied Up in Knotts," which she performs Sunday at Andrews University's Howard Performing Arts Center. In the production, Knotts steps into the roles of the famous people who came in and out of her father's life, and also serves as the show's narrator. Photographs and some rarely seen video clips augment the story, which ultimately is a father-daughter tale of his influence and their close bond on and off stage.

"The show starts out with my dad's childhood and growing up poor in West Virginia," she says. "He was a very nervous child, and that's where the character of Barney came from. I talk about how he came to New York and how he broke into live television."

And then there's "The Andy Griffith Show."

Don Knotts met Andy Griffith in 1955 when both men were cast in the Broadway production of "No
"Time for Sergeants."

"Andy became a mentor to my dad," Knotts says. "They just hit it off. They were comedy soul mates. And Andy would always encourage my dad. He's always been my dad's biggest champion and his biggest fan."

In 1960, when Griffith developed "The Andy Griffith Show," based on his hometown of Mount Airy, N.C., and stepped into the role as Sheriff Andy Taylor, he showed Knotts an early version of the pilot.

"When my dad saw the pilot, he called Andy up and said, 'Hey, could you use a deputy?'" Karen Knotts says. "Andy thought it was brilliant and brought him on the show. Andy is one of the greatest straight men ever. That's what they really were, a comedy team. But they were such good actors that you were never aware that dynamic was going on. They would keep each other laughing all the time."

It was on the set of "The Andy Griffith Show" that Karen Knotts became friends with Ron Howard, who played Griffith's son, Opie Taylor.

"Ronny and I were the same age, but he was so different than me," she says. "He just had this maturity about him that I didn't, but I think he was a bit lonely, too. When I'd come to the set he would always show me his latest gadget that he had. I remember he had this gold transistor radio that fit in the palm of his hand, which was pretty remarkable at the time. He was sort of the Peter Pan to my Wendy, and for a while I got to travel on this fantastic voyage with him."

In the 1970s, when Karen Knotts was a teenager attending Beverly Hills High School and then the University of Southern California, where she studied theater, her dad was doing variety shows with Bill Cosby and Tim Conway and making friends with movie star divas.

"I never thought about having a famous father, because to me it was just normal," she says. "I did get to see a lot of celebrities and a lot of comedy writers who came over to the house. It was surreal, but I didn't know it. It took some time and a really, really good psychiatrist.

"People want to try to associate you with your father almost like you're the same person," she adds. "I did have some identity problems, and I had to work to get over that."

Knotts also adds that her father initially didn't want her to follow in his footsteps.

"He had seen a lot of talented people who didn't make it, because it's a really, really hard business," she says. "That was his concern for me. He didn't want me to be heartbroken. I did struggle, but he did come around."

After graduating from USC, Knotts traveled across the country with her father, performing in plays such as "Mind with a Dirty Man" with Rue McClanahan, and "Norman is that You?" with Jim J. Bullock.

"To act with my dad was just fantastic," she says. "He was such a master. From the minute he got on stage, people were just enthralled. Before the show he would be sitting backstage, just so natural and calm. His natural energy was so relaxed. Then he'd walk on stage and this blast of energy just came out. He just had that special something."
It was during one of these regional theater shows that Karen Knotts became interested in puppetry.

"We were in Kansas City doing 'You Can't Take It With You,'" she says. "We were there almost three months, and I had a lot of time on my hands. Kansas City is a big puppet town. I ended up with Brad Hanson's company as a sound operator putting on puppet shows."

Back in Los Angeles, and in between tours, Knotts took a job in a fabric store where she met another comedy icon.

"I was just telling everybody that I was going to start working as a puppeteer," she says. "One day Twinkles the Clown (Ellen Simmons) came in. Her assistant was leaving and she needed another performer. So she trained me and I ended up working with her for six years doing puppet shows on the weekend."

Knotts has done some TV work - playing a limmerick-reciting hitchhiker in the George Peppard miniseries "One of Our Own," a former high school beauty queen in "Return to Mayberry" and bit parts in several sitcoms. She also works as a stand-up comedian, but nothing has given her the same satisfaction as "Tied Up in Knotts." She's currently working on a memoir that is meant to be a companion piece to the show.

"It's just been a tremendous journey," she says. "The older I get and the more I do the show, more memories come to me. It's cathartic. It's fun. I feel like the audience is traveling with me and experiencing it with me. Having them get so close to my memories and my experiences is almost spiritual in a way. And that's a beautiful thing."

Water Distiller for sale

Aquamist Water Distiller

Model: NT

120V / 1,100W / 60hz

Amps: 9.2

Made in Canada

Price: $500

This is a very useful one. You can get about 9gallon water a day. I have used it no lacking water with a friend's family since I came here. You can be provided water cheaper than buying water, if you use it for over 1 year with 2 or 3 families. Water taste is so better than buying water as well. Not only using conveniently, but saving gas fee.

Television Viewing Research

Dear Andrews University Students:

Hi, my name is Michael Milmine and I am a Master's student here at Andrews University. I am working on my thesis research project and am looking for volunteers to take a survey on their television viewing, dating, and academic habits. This survey is anonymous and should take no more than 10 minutes. Most people finish it in less. I would really appreciate your time in helping to broaden the understanding of these topics and me personally with my thesis project. Participants can enter into a drawing for a chance to win a $20 gift card to Family Dollar. If you would be willing to participate, please use the following link: http://kwiksurveys.com/s.asp?sid=k1y7maahyapow472083

Thank you for your time!
