Retirement Celebration for Bonnie Proctor
Date: Tuesday, April 21, 2015
Time: 3:30–5:30 p.m.
Location: Administration Building, Room 307

The School of Graduate Studies & Research invites you to join them in wishing Bonnie Proctor well as she retires. Bonnie Proctor has been the dissertation secretary for Andrews University since 1991. Her dedication and service for the last 20+ years have been greatly appreciated and she will be missed.

This will be a come-and-go reception with a farewell program from 4–4:30 p.m.

Hope to see you there!

Final Exam Schedule Changed
A request was made by AUSA and has been granted by Andrews University Administration to revamp the final exam schedule.
Morning exams will be shifted 30 minutes later in order to remove the 7:30 a.m. final exam start time. This will be effective this current semester and impacts classes which are scheduled to meet in the mornings. You may view the new final exam schedule online at https://www.andrews.edu/academics/exam_schedule.html.

Students with four or more exams scheduled for one day should contact the dean of their school.

Sam’s Chicken at Dining Services
Tomorrow night, Thursday, April 9, the Terrace Cafe will be serving their classic Sam’s Chicken meal. Don’t miss out on your favorites!

STUDENTS: Take Spring Course Surveys
It is once again time for students to rate their courses through course surveys. Course surveys provide the opportunity to give important (and anonymous) feedback to instructors on the effectiveness of the course.

Most courses will be surveyed electronically through our automated system, Class Climate. Email invitations for each course survey will be sent Monday morning, April 13. If the survey is not taken, reminders will be sent automatically every three days until April 24. A Certificate of Completion will be generated and emailed to you after each survey is submitted. This may be saved, and used as proof of completion if the instructor offers any type of incentive.

Thank you in advance for your participation. If you have any questions, please contact Laura Carroll in the Office of Institutional Effectiveness at 269-471-3308 (assessment@andrews.edu).

Farewell Reception for Brent Geraty
Date: Wednesday, April 22, 2015
Time: 3–5 p.m.
Location: Howard Performing Arts Center Lobby

You are invited to join us to celebrate Brent’s 15 years of service to Andrews University as its legal counsel, corporation secretary, pre-law advisor and part-time faculty member in the Department of History & Political Science. For the past four and a half years, Brent also served as chair of the Andrews Academy Governing Board. He is the third generation of Geratys to serve Andrews University and Adventist education with distinction. Brent and his family are relocating to Southern California where he will serve as general counsel at the University of Redlands.

Come wish him and his family well at this come-and-go reception.

Horn Lectureship Series

Monday, April 13
7 p.m.
Seminary Chapel
The Horn Lectureship Series presents “Making a Future for our Past: Student Research at the Institute of Archaeology and the Siegfried Horn Archaeological Museum” by Robert Bates and his students from Andrews University.

Robert Bates, research associate at the Institute of Archaeology, is having a profound impact on the lives of students here at Andrews University. For the past four years undergraduates taking general education courses in history and behavioral sciences have had an unprecedented opportunity to participate in ongoing research projects at the Institute of Archaeology and the Siegfried H. Horn Archaeological Museum.

Under his direction, students are being trained and mentored in conducting research, analyzing artifacts, developing museum displays, photographing artifacts, collecting data, and preparing databases. They are given hands-on experience in examining artifacts ranging from the Early Bronze Age to the Late Ottoman period.

As of now, nearly 300 Andrews University undergraduate and Berrien County RESA high school students have participated in this project. The students are given an opportunity to do the type of research that is generally limited to graduate students, making an important contribution to archaeology, history and our understanding of the Bible.

Come see them showcase their unique and impressive contribution to the archaeological research goals of Andrews University.

Co-curricular credit will be offered. The event is free and open to the public.

Thank You for Participating in the NSSE Survey
Simone, Alex, Haley, Megan and Joshua wish to thank all freshmen and seniors who spent some of their valuable time taking the National Survey of Student Engagement (NSSE).

“This semester I have been finishing up my research projects to complete my bachelor’s degree in marketing,” says Megan Reid, one of our NSSE student representatives. “I’ve come to realize firsthand how important it is to collect good data—and how difficult it is to get people to participate. I was glad to help promote a culture of assessment on our campus because I know it can lead to improvements in effectiveness. And I’m proud for the participation improvement we had this year with the NSSE Survey.”

To further promote participation in the NSSE Survey, the University’s Office of Institutional Effectiveness entered students who took the survey into a drawing for gift cards. Lynn Merklin, director, recently announced the winners: Jasmine Griggs, Jae-Hyun Joo, Brian Shockey, Tim McGuire, Amanda Phillips, Lindy Elloway, Jesse Snelling, Whitney Watson.

Our NSSE survey response increased nearly five percent over the last survey, with 34.8 percent of freshmen and seniors participating. Survey results will be delivered sometime in August. When those results are available they will be posted at andrews.edu/effectiveness.

Andrews Electronics Recycling Day

Wednesday, April 22, 3–7 p.m.
Transportation Building

Andrews University invites community members, businesses and residents from surrounding communities to recycle their unwanted electronic items at the University’s biannual electronics recycling event. The event will take place on Wednesday, April 22, from 3–7 p.m. at the Transportation building. In partnership with Andrews University, Green Earth Electronics Recycling will be operating the event.

Accepted items include computers, laptops, smart phones, monitors, TVs, telephones, cameras, DVD players, cords/cables, printers, toner cartridges, cell phones, refrigerators, air conditioners, appliances and any other electronic items or items with a cord.

A hazardous waste fee will be collected for CRT monitors ($5) and tube TVs ($10). All other items are recycled free of charge. Thin monitors and TVs (LCD and plasma) are free to recycle.

All hard drives are wiped to Department of Defense specifications or shredded. Businesses are encouraged to preregister by emailing pickup@greenearth1.com or calling 269-326-1232.

Efficiency UNITED will be in partnering with Green Earth and offering rebate incentives to customers of a participating utility provider (Indiana Michigan Power, South Haven Public Works, Dowagiac Electric) when they recycle a working refrigerator, freezer, dehumidifier, or room AC ($50 rebate for working refrigerators and freezers/$15 rebate for working dehumidifiers and room AC units).

Green Earth Electronics Recycling, headquartered in St. Joseph, Michigan, is a company whose focus is to keep unwanted electronics out of the landfill by using the best practices in information destruction and recycling. They are registered as a recycler with the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. Their services include corporate and institutional pickups as well as community drop-off events.

For more information please visit GreenEarth1.com or email pickup@GreenEarth1.com.

Any Andrews University departments wishing to participate are asked to please contact ITS to have items picked up prior to the event.

Microsoft Office Support
Faculty and Staff: Do you have questions about Microsoft 2013? Are you working on a project and would like more one-on-one assistance on how to complete it to better meet your needs? Do you have more general questions about Word, PowerPoint, Excel or any of the other Microsoft Office applications? During the month of April we are offering a few opportunities for Microsoft Office Support in various buildings around campus (in the same fashion as "Moodling with Marsha"). These will be general help sessions (with no planned training agenda) open to faculty or staff who have questions and would like some one-on-one support in Microsoft Office.

Andrews Volunteers Launch Party
SAVE THIS IMPORTANT DATE
Monday, April 13
4–6 p.m.
Howard Performing Arts Center

We are happy to introduce a new function of the Office of Alumni Services. At the request of David Faehner, vice president for University Advancement, an organization is being formed to coordinate the valuable service of our current and future volunteers. Through the years, volunteers have given untold hours of their time and energy to enhance University experiences. Having an organized volunteer program will become even more important in the future. Ray Nelson, a local retired alum, has accepted the coordinator position for this important venture.

In order to best serve the campus, he will be contacting you shortly to determine if you have a need for volunteers in your specific department/area. We would also appreciate a representative from your area attending the launch party on April 13 so the good news can be shared with your team.

Further details about the AndrewsVolunteers program are available online at http://alumni.andrews.edu/volunteer, including a Service Request Form. Contact can also be made by email: volunteer@andrews.edu or phone: 269-471-6274.

Symphony Orchestra Spring Concert
The Andrews University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Claudio Gonzalez, along with University Singers and University Chorale, under the direction of Stephen Zork, will perform their spring concert on Saturday, April 25, at 8 p.m. in the Howard Performing Arts Center. The concert is free and open to the public.

Two main pieces by Dietrich Buxtehude and Felix Mendelssohn will be featured. The piece by Buxtehude is "Chaconne in E minor," a classic work where harmonic reiterations are decorated by various melodic iterations.

"Hymn of Praise," also known as Symphony-Cantata No. 2 "Lobgesang," will have its grand debut in this concert as it has never been performed on this campus. This great musical work, written by Mendelssohn, was inspired by two transcendent musical pieces: Beethoven's "9th Symphony," and "St. Matthew's Passion" by Johann Sebastian Bach. Mendelssohn therefore used the symphonic style, with the addition of chorus and solo voices.

Soloists for this concert will be Charles Reid, tenor, artist-in residence, associate professor of voice and voice area coordinator at Andrews University; Julia Lindsay, soprano; and Julie Reid, mezzo soprano, adjunct voice instructor at Andrews University.

This concert promises to be a continuation of Andrews University's rich musical tradition. In the words of Gonzalez, "...With an important choral movement and dynamic orchestra program, we are proud to produce one of these works every year."

Update from President Andreasen
Dear Friends:

As you prepare for the end of the school year, I want to update you about a concern that emerged around the time many of you left campus for spring break.

For those of you who may be unaware, Andrews University has come under criticism in several media outlets about its response to a request for an on-campus fundraising event.

Let me emphasize that as part of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Andrews University is committed to help all of God's children, regardless of gender, race or sexual orientation. This commitment clearly reflects the values of Christ and His calling.

The question of whether or not Andrews University views the needs of homeless LGBT youth as an important humanitarian cause is one that we can answer with a resounding "yes," just as we believe Jesus would have responded.

We recognize the passion a number of our students have demonstrated in support of this issue. We believe that exploring the underlying causes of LGBT homelessness, along with other needs and concerns facing LGBT youth, is important for the University to consider.

Today I am sharing with you that we are committed to taking steps forward that will include careful study and the appointment of a taskforce that will help us gain greater understanding of this problem and propose helpful responses to the needs of these young people.

Further, we realize that these needs exist, in particular, because some Christian parents struggle with how to relate to their children as they identify and are honest about their orientation. This struggle sometimes leads to the tragedy of homelessness for LGBT youth.

We will keep you informed as we move forward on these issues, but in the meantime, an email address has been set up where you can send thoughts about the process or concerns that you’d like to have addressed. That address is suggestions@andrews.edu.

Niels-Erik Andreasen, President
Andrews Receives $3,500 Grant from MDEQ

Andrews University was recently awarded a $3,500 grant from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ). The grant will be used to update the University's Wellhead Protection Plan (WHPP) for the groundwater areas that supply drinking water to the University.

Andrews, in cooperation with the MDEQ, has been involved in the Michigan WHPP for years. The primary purpose of participating in the plan is to protect groundwater and provide a clean uncontaminated water supply. By engaging in this voluntary program, Andrews is eligible for special grants from the state government for implementing different aspects of the program.

The task of maintaining a clean water supply is made easier because of the good relationship Andrews has with the City of Berrien Springs. Paul Elder, director for Facilities Management, says, "We have a benefit being close to the city, because we have two connections with the city to help us when we are down or vice versa. Last summer we renovated the water tower and had to drain our tower for a month. During this time we were able to open our connections to the city and make arrangements with their utilities maintenance department to allow Andrews University to use their water tower during our shutdown."

The University has contracted with Fleis & VandenBrink, an environmental engineering firm, to provide professional guidance during the update. The firm will help to determine the best actions for preserving the groundwater supply, and assist with development of an updated Wellhead Protection Plan for Andrews University. This process should not cause any interruptions beyond what is caused by normal maintenance shutdowns on the system.

Horn Lectureship Series Features Undergraduate Students

The Horn Lectureship Series is proud to present: "Making a Future for our Past: Student Research at the Institute of Archaeology and the Siegfried Horn Archaeological Museum," on Monday, April 13, at 7 p.m. in Robert D. Bates, PhD research associate for the Institute of Archaeology, and Andrews University students will be presenting ongoing research projects for the museum. The diverse projects included photographing artifacts, ceramic analysis, remodeling museum displays, serving as docents, correlating bones, scanning coins and creating archaeological illustrations.

The Horn Lectureship Series is presented by the Siegfried H. Horn Museum. This installment is a product of the hard work of undergraduate students who are taking general studies courses in history and behavioral sciences. For the past four years, these students have been privileged to participate in ongoing research at the Institute of Archaeology. Although most of the students were not archaeology or anthropology majors, they were given the unprecedented opportunity not only to handle ancient artifacts, but to study their history and context, along with making an important contribution to archaeology, history and even our understanding of the Bible. This type of research is usually limited to graduate students.

The Horn Museum already houses more than 8,500 ancient Near-Eastern artifacts, including coins, pottery, sculptures, tools, weapons, figurines, jewelry, seals and glass vessels, among a myriad of other artifacts. The students added to this body of research, gaining hands-on experience by engaging in artifact examination from the Early Bronze Age to the Late Ottoman period.

As of today, nearly 300 undergraduate and high school students have participated in this program, including students from the Berrien County RESA program. The work showcases their ability to contribute to the archaeological research goals of the Institute of Archaeology and the Horn Museum.

Learning about the past teaches us more about ourselves, and how to deal with the future. This presentation will do just that. In the words of one of the presenting students, "We as humans can not know who we truly are unless we know where we came from, and I think that this archaeological work is a step in the right direction."

To learn more about the Siegfried H. Horn Museum or schedule an appointment, visit andrews.edu/archaeology/museum or call 269-471-3273.

The keynote presentation will be followed by breakout sessions at 6 p.m. The breakouts are designed to provide an informal setting to let everyone join the conversation on these important issues. These sessions will explore topics related to race and justice in the U.S., including health outcomes, white privilege, minority youth issues and more.

The Summit on Social Consciousness began in 2012 to bring awareness of current social issues to the graduate students of Andrews University.

Michelle Alexander, associate professor of law at Ohio State University and civil rights advocate, author of "The New Jim Crow: Mass Incarceration in the Age of Colorblindness," says, "The fate of millions of people—indeed the future of the black community itself—may depend on the willingness of those who care about racial justice to reexamine their basic assumptions of the role of the criminal justice system in our society" (Alexander, 2009). Regardless of background, issues related to race and injustice have a wide societal impact and should be a concern to members of any community.

The Summit on Social Consciousness is designed to bring both awareness and public education to various subjects through the knowledge of different speakers and the opportunity to serve the surrounding community.

"The hope is," said Lorraine London Polite, project manager and assistant to the dean in the School of Graduate Studies & Research, "that each year students assume the responsibility as the rightful advocates of those that have no voice. Andrews University seeks to empower students to 'Change the World' and the summit has become our way to aid the mission as well as to give students the tools they need to succeed."

Engineering Students Place Second in Stryker Challenge

Two Andrews University engineering students, Jonathan Penrod and Michael Hess II, were part of the Michigan Colleges Alliance team that placed second at the 2015 Stryker Engineering Challenge, held March 26–27, 2015, at Stryker Medical in Portage, Michigan.

Teams of four students, preferably sophomores, competed for $1,000 scholarships and interviews for Stryker internships. This year there were six teams competing from the following institutions: Purdue University, University of Notre Dame, Michigan Tech University, Western Michigan University, Michigan Colleges Alliance, and the Michigan Colleges Alliance. The Michigan Colleges Alliance team consisted of Penrod and Hess from Andrews University, and Rochelle Miller and Justin Hanselman from Hope College.

Before the challenge began students were given a product demonstration and tour of Stryker’s facilities. At 7 p.m. on Thursday, March 26, teams were provided with the rules and sent to their assigned workspace with their Stryker mentor. The workspace contained tools and supplies to build a remotely controlled vehicle with different custom attachments. They worked until 2 a.m. before retiring for the night.

Gunnar Lovhoiden, associate professor of engineering and faculty sponsor, says, "The best part for me was observing how well the Andrews and Hope students worked together as a team. I think they maximized their potential."

The challenge continued later Friday morning from 6 a.m. to 1:45 p.m., followed by the competition at 2:30 p.m. Each team was assigned a pit area to work on their vehicles if they needed service or repair during the competition. Challenge One consisted of rescuing Lego "victims" in "downtown" Kalamazoo. Stryker had constructed several models of downtown Kalamazoo buildings. All the victims had small magnets attached so they could be rescued using a pick-up magnet controlled remotely from the vehicle.

All teams competed against each other and points were awarded according to how difficult the victims were to access. Some were behind doors that had to be opened by activating different sensors while others were on roofs as high as three feet. In order to get points, the vehicle had to pick up victims and carry them out of the playing field, which was marked with tape. The Michigan Colleges Alliance vehicle broke down four times due to drive chain issues, but each time the team was able to fix the vehicle and put it back into play. Challenge One lasted 20 minutes. The Michigan Colleges Alliance team collected enough points for second place.

The Final Challenge was to traverse an obstacle course with one horizontal section followed by a ramped section. If you made it up the ramp you had to raise/lower a bridge to cross to the finish line. The raising and lowering was accomplished by flashing an LED at a light sensor at two different predetermined rates. The final challenge had a 10-minute time limit.

Michigan Colleges Alliance competed against University of Michigan for first place. The Michigan Colleges Alliance team’s vehicle made it across the horizontal obstacle and up the ramp without any issues, but could not get further because their LED flasher didn’t work. The University of Michigan was able to complete both tasks and therefore won the competition.

Stryker provided meals and hotel accommodations for all team members. Lovhoiden commented, “I was impressed with the effort Stryker had put into the event and the number of Stryker staff involved. The whole challenge had a professional feel to it. It was good to see that there are companies willing to give students opportunities such as this. It reaffirms that although we [Hope College and Andrews University] are smaller engineering programs with limited resources, our students have good engineering skills and perform as well as or better than students from much larger programs.”

Reflecting on the experience, Michael Hess said, “What stood out to me most about our team’s performance was how effectively we were able to collaborate in spite of our setbacks. We were the only team from two different schools, none of us had ever worked together previously, and unlike the other teams most of us didn’t even know we were competing until the day before. Even so, we were able to figure out each other’s strengths, delegate tasks accordingly, and maintain effective communication throughout the build. Coming from less-than-ideal circumstances to take second place showed that being from a smaller school like Andrews is not a disadvantage; we’re on par with some of the best engineering schools in the country.”

Robert Bartlett, president of the Michigan Colleges Alliance, was also very pleased with the results. “Most prospective students, counselors and employers in the state don’t even realize MCA member schools offer engineering, this is a great ‘myth buster.’”

Ten Students Help Children Who Have Lost Limbs

On April 12, 2015, ten Andrews University students will participate in the “Running So They Can Stand” marathon, to raise money for children in need of orthopedic care in developing countries. The students have partnered with “A Leg To Stand On” (ALTSO), an organization that has provided free prosthetic limbs, orthotic devices, mobility aids, corrective surgery and rehabilitative care to at least 12,804 children who have lost limbs. Whether by traumatic accident, or if the children are suffering from congenital limb disabilities, ALTSO has worked to serve this need worldwide. Recognizing that they too can help, Andrews students have partnered with ALTSO by agreeing to run in either a half-marathon (13.1 miles), or a full-marathon (26.2 miles), at the Ohio River Road Runners Club.

ALTSO has provided care for children in Asia, Africa and Latin America. They have assisted families who cannot afford the care they need in order to be self-sufficient. The organization has sponsored adolescents and juveniles who may have suffered from diseases, birth defects or war injuries. However, they are incapable to do that work without your support.

In the words of Jennifer Calhoun, one of the marathon runners, “Physical deformities…have limited their mobility to distances that can be hopped, crawled or carried. It doesn’t have to be this way forever! Which is why we’re using our legs to run for change… literally.”

Andrews University has partnered with ALTSO because they are looking for financial sponsors. Support the BERRIEN SPRINGS - Perception is reality when it comes to race relations.

That much was clear Wednesday night at the opening of Andrews University's four-day Summit for Social Consciousness.

Wednesday's program was a panel discussion featuring students from varied backgrounds having a conversation on race and justice in America. Seven Andrews students from the United States, South Africa, Canada, Mexico and the Dominican Republic participated.

Students discussed several topics, including police profiling and the general state of race relations in this country. While all the students spoke of experiences they've had with police, the white students admitted their fears had more to do with not wanting to get tickets rather than a real fear of police.

"These are two different things," black student Karyle Barnes said. "The fear about getting a ticket for speeding is one thing. I'm worried about being a black male while driving. I still have that fear because of the perception out there. You can slow down, but I can't turn into a different skin color."

Barnes and other black students Jonathan Leonardo and Wandine Mthiyane as well as Ray Valenzuela all talked about the different experiences they've had with law enforcement, though each admitted their perceptions were shaped both by real life and media portrayals of police. Valenzuela is from Mexico, Leonardo is from the Dominican Republic, Barnes from the St. Louis area and Mthiyane from South Africa.

Leonardo said he never had a conversation with his parents about how to act around police because such confrontations never came up. Mthiyane had similar feelings as he grew up in post-apartheid South Africa. Conversely, Barnes said he always has that initial fear that he's been stopped because of his skin color rather than for something he's done.

"With social norming, there's the expectation to be fearful of a white officer," Leonardo said. "We're receiving the message from the media to be fearful. I got arrested in Berrien Springs last summer, and the officer drove me to an ATM machine to get money for my bond. The social norming element is there, but it's always true."

Mthiyane said he's found it terrifying to drive in the United States because of all he's heard about racial profiling and "driving while black."

"It's very terrifying to live like that, that's really sad," he said.

He said he's been treated differently than others when he's traveled back to the United States from mission trips in other countries.

"I thought to myself what did Nelson Mandela and Martin Luther King do when it comes to racism?" he said. "We need to get back to seeing each other as humans and part of a bigger family."

"The police shouldn't treat people differently," Canadian student Alex Angellakis said. "Police should move away from the view that if someone is black and wears a hat or a hoodie, then that person is more dangerous."

Black student Robert Bailey tried to put race relations into a historical and socio-economic context as he talked...
The differences between living in the suburbs and the inner city and the lasting effects of slavery over the centuries. He said people in the inner city have fewer protections and are more likely to be arrested and drawn into the criminal justice system.

Words used can also be problematic when it comes to race relations and perceptions. White student Zack Babb drew comments from other panelists and audience members when he called Nelson Mandela a terrorist before he converted to Christianity.

Bailey likened Mandela to someone protecting his home and asked whether someone getting a gun to defend their home would be called a terrorist if someone broke into their home and took everything.

Andrews chaplain Michael Polite served as the moderator and noted that society continues to wrestle with labels.

"Some see Nelson Mandela as a revolutionary while others see him as a terrorist," he said. "That's what law enforcement and society has to wrestle with, do they see blacks as law-abiding citizens or as being suspicious?"

The summit runs through Saturday with the screening of the documentary, "The New Jim Crow" at 7 p.m. tonight in the seminary chapel and a program on "Race, Justice and Adventism" Friday at 7 p.m. at Pioneer Memorial Church during University Vespers.

Paul Buckley will present the keynote address for the symposium at 4 p.m. Saturday in the seminary chapel. That talk will be followed by breakout sessions at 6 p.m. to give people the chance to talk about the different issues raised in a more informal setting.
BERRIEN SPRINGS - Those puzzled by calls for a conversation on race might find the answer at Andrews University.

The university this week will host a series of programs with the goal of starting a conversation about race and justice.

The university's fourth-annual Summit for Social Consciousness is Wednesday through Saturday. The theme for this year's symposium is "A Conversation on Race and Justice in America." All events are free and open to the public.

The summit's goal is to inform people about the racial prejudices and injustices still alive in the nation, five decades after the Civil Rights era, the university reported.

University officials say they hope the symposium will bring awareness and provide a means for students and community leaders to engage in social action.

Highlights of the four-day gathering include a panel discussion at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the seminary chapel, the screening of the documentary, "The New Jim Crow" at 7 p.m. Thursday in the seminary chapel and a program on "Race, Justice and Adventism" at 7 p.m. Friday at Pioneer Memorial Church during University Vespers.

Paul Buckley will present the keynote address for the symposium at 4 p.m. Saturday in the seminary chapel. That talk will be followed by breakout sessions at 6 p.m. to give people the chance to talk about the different issues raised in a more informal setting.

Andrews food fair helps student groups, too

BERRIEN SPRINGS — Andrews University’s 51st Annual International Food Fair provides people with much more than a chance to sample cuisines from around the world, it’s a way to support the university’s international student organizations and the projects they undertake each year.

The 51st annual international food fair was held Sunday afternoon in the Johnson Gym on the Andrews campus. Organizers predicted that 8,000 to 10,000 people would attend the annual event to sample all the different foods and help raise $30,000 to $35,000 for student and community organizations.

As the efforts of two of the student organizations prove, the food fair is about more than cooking and serving food from their native countries. It can also be about raising funds to help others around the world. The food fair usually raises a total of $30,000 or more that is split up between more than 20 organizations in support of their activities and projects.

The Andrews Filipino International Association has been taking part in the food fair since 1993, AFIA President Jon Remitera said. He said between 45 and 50 people take part in the food fair every year, doing everything from preparing the food ahead of time to manning the booth the day of the fair. They make a mix of dishes such as pancit (fried noodles), lumpia (egg rolls) and boba tea.

"It’s a lot of work but it’s definitely something we all look forward to every year," Remitera said. "It’s a big thing for the school and the community as well."

They are among the groups that “pay it forward” and use the proceeds from the food fair to fund projects to help others. Last year, money raised went to help victims of Typhoon Haiyan in the Philippines. This year, students are using funds to buy Bibles for the ministries of Central Adventist Philippines College. Separate from the food fair, they organized a 5K run to benefit the MRSA Survivors Network last fall.

A new group taking part in the food fair this year is the Ukrainian Student Club. They formed just a few months ago and decided to come to the food fair to not only showcase their culture through taste but also call attention to the plight of their countrymen back in the Ukraine. Specialty dishes they were selling included borsch soup, draniki potato pancakes, lentil patties, vorenik dumplings, pirozki and crepes.

They had a donation box set up at their booth to collect donations for Eastern Angels, an organization supported by the Adventist Development and Relief Agency. They're providing clothing, food and housing to help families displaced by the war that has torn the country apart over the last year.

"We're here, we want to support our brothers and sisters back in the Ukraine," Alex Bormotov said. "Many have lost their homes both in Crimea which Russia annexed and in eastern Ukraine where the fighting is going on."

Robert Benjamin, the director of International Student Services at Andrews, has organized the fair the last two years. He noted that the fair provides the university’s international students a way to celebrate their cultures and also have interaction with the greater community. Andrews was recently ranked second in the country in terms of cultural diversity with students from 92 countries.

Free Seminar on Addiction

Is It an Addiction, Habit, or Obsession?

Southwestern Medical Clinic, a Lakeland Health Affiliate, will offer a free seminar for community members, titled "Is It an Addiction, Habit, or Obsession?" The presentation will take place on Tuesday, April 21, from 6–7 p.m. in the Frederick S. Upton Education Center at Lakeland Medical Center, 1234 Napier Avenue, St. Joseph, Michigan.

Bradford Wilson, MS, MA, TLLP, and Richard Watson, MA, LPC, LLP, from Southwestern Medical Clinic’s Christian Counseling and Psychological Services will discuss the many forms that addiction can take, including food, gambling, substances, shopping, and even dependence on technology such as mobile devices and social media. The event will include a presentation on the psychological and emotional implications of addictive behavior.

"As technology has evolved, we are able to access virtually anything we want or need through the Internet," said Rich Watson. "Indirectly or directly, our vulnerability to addiction has never been higher."

Michiana Adventist Forum
Saturday, April 11, 2015
3:30 p.m., Garber Auditorium, Chan Shun Hall
Andrews University, Berrien Springs, Michigan

Michiana Adventist Forum presents "Conflict as Catalyst—Is a Lawsuit the Best Option?" presented by Deborah Bennett Berecz, collaborative lawyer and mediator.

About the Speaker
Deborah Bennett Berecz is a collaborative lawyer and mediator who practices family law in Berrien and Kent Counties. She is a graduate of Andrews University and of the Notre Dame Law School, where she earned her JD degree.

She has been involved in alternative dispute resolution since 1995, and has served as chair of the Alternative Dispute Resolution Section of the State Bar of Michigan, and as president of the Collaborative Practice Institute of Michigan, the Berrien Association of Mediators, and the Collaborative Divorce Professionals of W. Michigan.

As an adjunct professor at Andrews University she has taught Family Law and Public Policy to master's level and doctoral students.

About the Topic
Christians are called to love others. But conflict is inevitable as long as people interact with one another. When we've been wronged, there are many options for redress. Some have the potential to heal and achieve meaningful resolution. Others ensure that the battle and resentment rage on for years. Lawyer Deborah Bennett Berecz will share insights regarding creative alternatives when experiencing conflict.

Adventist Forum is open to the public. All are welcome. For information, contact Art Robertson at robertsa2@earthlink.net or call 269-471-7150.

Missing Dog
Missing Dog

Dog Name:
Payton

Description:

Additional information:
When lost the dog was wearing a purple collar. The collar had a name tag for the dog. The tag had her name on it (Payton Tucker) and also had my phone number, 269-277-2706. Also the dog had a metal chain type leash about 3 feet long.

Location Lost:
At about 530pm on Saturday October 11-2014 I was with the dog at the dog park in Kiwanis in St. Joseph near Langley and Pearl Street. Payton got away and went up the wooded hill that ends up in the sub-division on the Langley side of the park.
