Course Tune-Up Workshop for Faculty

This workshop is designed as a work session focusing on four areas: a needs assessment of your course, alignment of goals and learning activities, increasing interaction and engagement, and utilizing LearningHub enhancements.

The Course Tune-Up workshop will be held on Monday, May 11, 2015, from 8:30 a.m.–4 p.m. Breakfast and lunch will be provided.

Note: Remote adjunct faculty are welcome to attend virtually via Zoom.

STUDENTS: Take Spring Course Surveys

It is once again time for students to rate their courses through course surveys. Course surveys provide the opportunity to give important (and anonymous) feedback to instructors on the effectiveness of the course.

Most courses will be surveyed electronically through our automated system, Class Climate. Email invitations for each course survey will be sent Monday morning, April 13. If the survey is not taken, reminders will be sent automatically every three days until April 24. A Certificate of Completion will be generated and emailed to you after each survey is submitted. This may be saved, and used as proof of completion if the instructor offers any type of incentive.

Thank you in advance for your participation. If you have any questions, please contact Laura Carroll in the Office of Institutional Effectiveness at 269-471-3308 (assessment@andrews.edu).

AU x ALTSO Thank You

On behalf of the AU Marathon Team and A Leg to Stand On (ALTSO), we want to thank you so much for your generous donations in support of our Marathon/Half Marathon on April 12. We were able to raise over $2,400 towards our fundraising goal! This will help nine children receive prosthetic devices who otherwise wouldn't be able to stand, let alone walk, and it's all because of you. On behalf of them, and of us, thank you!

Here is a link to a short video with pictures re-capping our marathon weekend: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2SOroYmFYt4

Thank you again!

The Tanzanian Club of Andrews University presents "Global South Christianity and Adventism: How should the Church respond" by Christopher R. Mwashinga.

Christopher R. Mwashinga is a PhD student in systematic theology at the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary at Andrews University. The concept of global south Christianity [also global south Adventism] describes some important trends in Christianity which in the coming decades will affect the makeup of Christianity in general and Adventism in particular, and how churches do their missional work. U.S. Flag at Half Mast April 15

Gov. Rick Snyder has joined President Barack Obama’s call for all United States flags to be lowered to half-staff on Wednesday, April 15, as a day of remembrance for President Abraham Lincoln.

The day marks the 150th anniversary of the day the nation’s 16th president died.

"We do not lack for reminders of President Lincoln’s actions, which will live in our nation’s hearts for as long as we remain a strong and united country,” Snyder said. "Today we will remember the person—his dedication to what we should stand for and the courage to fight for it. Let us all pause today and reflect on President Lincoln’s vision for America and what we all can do moving forward in that spirit.

Retirement Celebration for Dr. James Jeffery

Date: Tuesday, May 5, 2015
Time: 3–5 p.m. (farewell program from 4–4:30 p.m.)
Location: Badger & Hoosier Rooms, Campus Center

The School of Education invites you to join them in wishing Jim Jeffery well as he retires. Jeffery is retiring as the dean of the School of Education on July 1, 2015. He has been a valued colleague at the University for 16 years, with 13 of those as dean. During this 13-year tenure (the longest of any dean of the School of Education), he has led the school through multiple accreditations: NCATE, CACREP, NASP and various SPAs. The quality of the school, under his leadership, has been recognized by both accreditation teams (no areas for improvement in the last NCATE visit—a rare achievement) and by the state (Andrews was the top teacher training institution in Michigan for four years in a row).

Come celebrate his many years of service to Seventh-day Adventist education and Andrews University at his retirement reception.

This will be a come-and-go reception. Hope to see you there!

International Students Featured at Special Services

On Saturday, March 21, Andrews University held its annual International Student Sabbath at Pioneer Memorial Church. As the second most ethnically diverse national university in the United States, Andrews enjoys hosting students from 92 countries around the world.

Special services at 9 a.m. and 11:45 a.m. recognized the unique contribution these students make toward the Andrews experience. The Office of International Student Services & Programs (ISSP) presented videos, musical numbers and readings by international students.

One of the videos included clips of students from around the world offering a tiny glimpse into their experiences at Andrews. Comments included:

"It's very diverse here, similar to where I'm from. I appreciate that."
"I feel welcome on this campus."
"It's been a blessing to be a part of Andrews University and get to know people from all different parts of the world."
"Being able to attend classes with and get to know people from around the world, I see things with a new perspective."
"Andrews University is open-minded. You get to see the world here."

One student even gave a shout-out to ISSP in the video: "People here are warm no matter what the temperature, and the International Student Services staff are very supportive. They're always checking in to make sure things are going alright."

While Andrews may seem like a good home away from home for many international students, it's not always easy being so far from the familiar. The video also highlighted some of the challenges students face coming from very different backgrounds and cultures to the U.S.

These challenges include weather, misunderstanding cultural norms, food, language, living arrangements—living with other people in the dorm—being lonely and missing home, conflicts between thoughts and ethics across cultural lines, among other things.

A second video featured personal experience stories from President Andreasen and Provost Luxton, both of whom arrived at Andrews as international citizens.

"I came here many years ago and was quite overwhelmed by what I found at Andrews," began Andreasen. "Things are not the same here as they are in Denmark. I had to figure out how to find my classes and a place to live, figure out what to eat and how to make friends. I'd always attended a small church and this one is quite large. I enjoyed it, though, and was blessed by it. I hope that is your experience as well."

During the Sabbath program, several students presented cultural elements from their own countries of origin. Kolia Afamasaga, Seminary student and a Samoan living in Australia, gave the congregational prayer. "It was a privilege for me to represent my country," he says. "I was able to display the Samoan Talking Chief role of speaking on behalf of his clan and village on an important occasion."

Although Afamasaga chose to pray in English rather than his mother tongue, he still was glad to demonstrate his native culture before he began to pray.

Sonovia Mcfall, a first-year graduate student in speech-language pathology from The Bahamas, "felt honored to be used in whatever way possible to lift up the name of Jesus."

"The purpose of International Student Sabbath is to celebrate the fact that we are created equally to worship our Creator God no matter our background," says Robert Benjamin, director ISSP. "We add a beautiful variety to our worship experience that showcases our diversity, but focus on coming together as one people to give us a small taste of what heaven will be like."

The provost shared her own great experience at Andrews, even as different as it is from her home in England. She spoke specifically about the positive worship experience and environment at Andrews.

"Particularly on a Sabbath like this, when we're celebrating international students on our campus, it's important to remember that God is at the center of what we do," she said. "It doesn't matter where we're from, we're of great value to God and therefore of great value to each other."

Andreasen went on to share thoughts on how the Andrews experience removes the labels of "international" and "national" but instead creates an extended and expanded family.
“I like to imagine that students who graduate from Andrews and move on will never meet a stranger,” he said. “That they’ve learned to view other people as God’s children.”

Luxton concluded, “When we worship together, pray together and study together, we enrich each other because of our backgrounds, individualities and languages. That’s what it is to be at Andrews University.”

Symphony Orchestra Spring Concert

The Andrews University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Claudio Gonzalez, along with University Singers and University Chorale, under the direction of Stephen Zork, will perform their spring concert on Saturday, April 25, at 8 p.m. in the Howard Performing Arts Center. The concert is free and open to the public.

Two main pieces by Dietrich Buxtehude and Felix Mendelssohn will be featured. The piece by Buxtehude is "Chaconne in E minor," a classic work where harmonic reiterations are decorated by various melodic iterations.

"Hymn of Praise," also known as Symphony-Cantata No. 2 "Lobgesang," will have its grand debut in this concert as it has never been performed on this campus. This great musical work, written by Mendelssohn, was inspired by two transcendent musical pieces: Beethoven's "9th Symphony," and "St. Matthew's Passion" by Johann Sebastian Bach. Mendelssohn therefore used the symphonic style, with the addition of chorus and solo voices.

Soloists for this concert will be Charles Reid, tenor, artist-in residence, associate professor of voice and voice area coordinator at Andrews University; Julia Lindsay, soprano; and Julie Reid, mezzo soprano, adjunct voice instructor at Andrews University.

This concert promises to be a continuation of Andrews University's rich musical tradition. In the words of Gonzalez, "...With an important choral movement and dynamic orchestra program, we are proud to produce one of these works every year."

Update from President Andreasen

Dear Friends:

As you prepare for the end of the school year, I want to update you about a concern that emerged around the time many of you left campus for spring break.

For those of you who may be unaware, Andrews University has come under criticism in several media outlets about its response to a request for an on-campus fundraising event.

Let me emphasize that as part of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Andrews University is committed to help all of God's children, regardless of gender, race or sexual orientation. This commitment clearly reflects the values of Christ and His calling.

The question of whether or not Andrews University views the needs of homeless LGBT youth as an important humanitarian cause is one that we can answer with a resounding "yes," just as we believe Jesus would have responded.

We recognize the passion a number of our students have demonstrated in support of this issue. We believe that exploring the underlying causes of LGBT homelessness, along with other needs and concerns facing LGBT youth, is important for the University to consider.

Today I am sharing with you that we are committed to taking steps forward that will include careful study and the appointment of a taskforce that will help us gain greater understanding of this problem and propose helpful responses to the needs of these young people.

Further, we realize that these needs exist, in particular, because some Christian parents struggle with how to relate to their children as they identify and are honest about their orientation. This struggle sometimes leads to the tragedy of homelessness for LGBT youth.

We will keep you informed as we move forward on these issues, but in the meantime, an email address has been set up where you can send thoughts about the process or concerns that you’d like to have addressed. That address is suggestions@andrews.edu.

Andrews Receives $3,500 Grant from MDEQ

Andrews University was recently awarded a $3,500 grant from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ). The grant will be used to update the University’s Wellhead Protection Plan (WHPP) for the groundwater areas that supply drinking water to the University.

Andrews, in cooperation with the MDEQ, has been involved in the Michigan WHPP for years. The primary purpose of participating in the plan is to protect groundwater and provide a clean uncontaminated water supply. By engaging in this voluntary program, Andrews is eligible for special grants from the state government for implementing different aspects of the program.

The task of maintaining a clean water supply is made easier because of the good relationship Andrews has with the City of Berrien Springs. Paul Elder, director for Facilities Management, says, “We have a benefit being close to the city, because we have two connections with the city to help us when we are down or vice versa. Last summer we renovated the water tower and had to drain our tower for a month. During this time we were able to open our connections to the city and make arrangements with their utilities maintenance department to allow Andrews University to use their water tower during our shutdown.”

The University has contracted with Fleis & VandenBrink, an environmental engineering firm, to provide professional guidance during the update. The firm will help to determine the best actions for preserving the groundwater supply, and assist with development of an updated Wellhead Protection Plan for Andrews University. This process should not cause any interruptions beyond what is caused by normal maintenance shutdowns on the system.

Horn Lectureship Series Features Undergraduate Students

The Horn Lectureship Series is proud to present: “Making a Future for our Past: Student Research at the Institute of Archaeology and the Siegfried Horn Archaeological Museum,” on Monday, April 13, at 7 p.m. in the Seminary Chapel on the campus of Andrews University.

Robert D. Bates, PhD research associate for the Institute of Archaeology, and Andrews University students will be presenting ongoing research projects for the museum. The diverse projects included photographing artifacts, ceramic analysis, remodeling museum displays, serving as docents, correlating bones, scanning coins and creating archaeological illustrations.

The Horn Lectureship Series is presented by the Siegfried H. Horn Museum. This installment is a product of the hard work of undergraduate students who are taking general studies courses in history and behavioral sciences. For the past four years, these students have been privileged to participate in ongoing research at the Institute of Archaeology. Although most of the students were not archaeology or anthropology majors, they were given the unprecedented opportunity not only to handle ancient artifacts, but to study their history and context, along with making an important contribution to archaeology, history and even our understanding of the Bible. This type of research is usually limited to graduate students.

The Horn Museum already houses more than 8,500 ancient Near-Eastern artifacts, including coins, pottery, sculptures, tools, weapons, figurines, jewelry, seals and glass vessels, among a myriad of other artifacts. The students added to this body of research, gaining hands-on experience by engaging in artifact examination from the Early Bronze Age to the Late Ottoman period.

As of today, nearly 300 undergraduate and high school students have participated in this program, including students from the Berrien County RESA program. The work showcases their ability to contribute to the archaeological research goals of the Institute of Archaeology and the Horn Museum.

Learning about the past teaches us more about ourselves, and how to deal with the future. This presentation will do just that. In the words of one of the presenting students, “We as humans can not know who we truly are unless we know where we came from, and I think that this archaeological work is a step in the right direction.”

To learn more about the Siegfried H. Horn Museum or schedule an appointment, visit andrews.edu/archaeology/museum or call 269-471-3273.

A Conversation on Race and Justice in America

Anders University invites you to attend its fourth annual Summit on Social Consciousness from Wednesday, April 8, through Saturday, April 11. This year’s symposium will focus on the theme of “A Conversation on Race and Justice in America.” The objective will be to inform the community of the injustices and racial prejudices still alive in our nation, 51 years after the civil rights movement, and also provide a means for students and community leaders to engage in social action regardless of background. All events are free and open to the public.

Please note the following schedule highlights:

Wednesday, April 8
- Panel Discussion
  - 7 p.m., Seminary Chapel

Thursday, April 9
- Documentary Screening of “The New Jim Crow”
  - 7 p.m., Seminary Chapel

Friday, April 10
- University Vespers: Race, Justice and Adventism
  - 7 p.m., Pioneer Memorial Church

Saturday, April 11
- Keynote Address: Paul Buckley
  - 4 p.m., Seminary Chapel

The keynote presentation will be followed by breakout sessions at 6 p.m. The breakouts are designed to provide an informal setting to let everyone join the conversation on these important issues. These sessions will explore topics related to race and justice in the U.S., including health outcomes, white privilege, minority youth issues and more.

The Summit on Social Consciousness began in 2012 to bring awareness of current social issues to the graduate students of Andrews University.

Michelle Alexander, associate professor of law at Ohio State University and civil rights advocate, author of “The New Jim Crow: Mass Incarceration in the Age of Colorblindness,” says, “The fate of millions of people—indeed the future of the black community itself—may depend on the willingness of those who care about racial justice to reexamine their basic assumptions of the role of the criminal justice system in our society” (Alexander, 2009). Regardless of background, issues related to race and injustice have a wide societal impact and should be a concern to members of any community.

The Summit on Social Consciousness is designed to bring both awareness and public education to various subjects through the knowledge of different speakers and the opportunity to serve the surrounding community.

“The hope is,” said Lorraine London Polite, project manager and assistant to the dean in the School of Graduate Studies & Research, “that each year students assume the responsibility as the rightful advocates of those who have no voice. Andrews University seeks to empower students to ‘Change the World’ and the summit has become our way to aid the mission as well as to give students the tools they need to succeed.”

By DEBRA HAIGHT - HP Correspondent

BERRIEN SPRINGS - Perception is reality when it comes to race relations.

That much was clear Wednesday night at the opening of Andrews University's four-day Summit for Social Consciousness.

Wednesday's program was a panel discussion featuring students from varied backgrounds having a conversation on race and justice in America. Seven Andrews students from the United States, South Africa, Canada, Mexico and the Dominican Republic participated.

Students discussed several topics, including police profiling and the general state of race relations in this country. While all the students spoke of experiences they've had with police, the white students admitted their fears had more to do with not wanting to get tickets rather than a real fear of police.

"These are two different things," black student Karyle Barnes said. "The fear about getting a ticket for speeding is one thing. I'm worried about being a black male while driving. I still have that fear because of the perception out there. You can slow down, but I can't turn into a different skin color."

Barnes and other black students Jonathan Leonardo and Wandine Mthiyane as well as Ray Valenzuela all talked about the different experiences they've had with law enforcement, though each admitted their perceptions were shaped both by real life and media portrayals of police. Valenzuela is from Mexico, Leonardo is from the Dominican Republic, Barnes from the St. Louis area and Mthiyane from South Africa.

Leonardo said he never had a conversation with his parents about how to act around police because such confrontations never came up. Mthiyane had similar feelings as he grew up in post-apartheid South Africa. Conversely, Barnes said he always has that initial fear that he's been stopped because of his skin color rather than for something he's done.

"With social norming, there's the expectation to be fearful of a white officer," Leonardo said. "We're receiving the message from the media to be fearful. I got arrested in Berrien Springs last summer, and the officer drove me to an ATM machine to get money for my bond. The social norming element is there, but it's always true."

Mthiyane said he's found it terrifying to drive in the United States because of all he's heard about racial profiling and "driving while black."

"It's very terrifying to live like that, that's really sad," he said.

He said he's been treated differently than others when he's traveled back to the United States from mission trips in other countries.

"I thought to myself what did Nelson Mandela and Martin Luther King do when it comes to racism?" he said. "We need to get back to seeing each other as humans and part of a bigger family."

"The police shouldn't treat people differently," Canadian student Alex Angellakis said. "Police should move away from the view that if someone is black and wears a hat or a hoodie, then that person is more dangerous."

Black student Robert Bailey tried to put race relations into a historical and socio-economic context as he talked... about the differences between living in the suburbs and the inner city and the lasting effects of slavery over the centuries. He said people in the inner city have fewer protections and are more likely to be arrested and drawn into the criminal justice system.

Words used can also be problematic when it comes to race relations and perceptions. White student Zack Babb drew comments from other panelists and audience members when he called Nelson Mandela a terrorist before he converted to Christianity.

Bailey likened Mandela to someone protecting his home and asked whether someone getting a gun to defend their home would be called a terrorist if someone broke into their home and took everything.

Andrews chaplain Michael Polite served as the moderator and noted that society continues to wrestle with labels.

"Some see Nelson Mandela as a revolutionary while others see him as a terrorist," he said. "That's what law enforcement and society has to wrestle with, do they see blacks as law-abiding citizens or as being suspicious?"

The summit runs through Saturday with the screening of the documentary, "The New Jim Crow" at 7 p.m. tonight in the seminary chapel and a program on "Race, Justice and Adventism" Friday at 7 p.m. at Pioneer Memorial Church during University Vespers.

Paul Buckley will present the keynote address for the symposium at 4 p.m. Saturday in the seminary chapel. That talk will be followed by breakout sessions at 6 p.m. to give people the chance to talk about the different issues raised in a more informal setting.

We see it all around us. Hollywood, popular music, TV, video gaming, spectator sports, e-relationships, and pornography are saturating the lives of God's professed people. But what does the latest science say about the mind-altering effects of 21st century media? And what is the spiritual agenda in the entertainment and advertising industries?

Michigan Maritime Museum March lecture

100 Years Brings New Thoughts on the Eastland Disaster

The Michigan Maritime Museum is proud to present the fourth lecture of their 2015 Lecture Series with speaker Michael McCarthy. McCarthy will be giving a lecture on the 1915 Eastland disaster titled after his book, "Ashes Under Water: The SS Eastland and the Shipwreck that Shook America," on Saturday, April 25, at 2 p.m.

This year marks the centennial of one of the nation's worst disasters, the 1915 sinking of the steamship Eastland in the Chicago River, with more passenger deaths than the Titanic. An astonishing 844 poor people perished on the Eastland—a ship still tied to its dock when it capsized.

For a century, the cause of the nearly forgotten tragedy had remained a mystery. McCarthy's work offers a fresh, sinister explanation for the tragedy: that management neglected needed repairs to the stabilizing machinery of the ship.

Michael McCarthy, who learned to sail on Lake Michigan, is the author of "The Sun Farmer" and worked as a reporter and editor for the Wall Street Journal for 22 years. He lives in South Haven, Michigan.

McCarthy will be speaking on the Michigan Maritime Museum Campus. The lecture series will finish on the last Saturday of May. He will also be signing copies of his book at the event.

Admission is $8 for adults and $7 for seniors. There is no admission fee for Museum members. Light refreshments will be provided. Become a member and attend each additional lecture at no cost. It is the perfect time to become a member!

The Michigan Maritime Museum is dedicated to the preservation of Michigan Great Lakes waterways, maritime history, and culture. Located at the drawbridge in South Haven, the museum is a 501 (C3) organization and donations are tax deductible. For more information call 1-800-747-3810 or visit michiganmaritimemuseum.org.

Christian Nanny Available

My name is Tanya and I am looking for a full-time nanny position. I am CPR (Infant/Child/Adult) / AED Certified and First Aid. I am comfortable with pets, as I am a pet owner myself. I am happy to provide light housekeeping, cooking, pet care, etc. I have been laid off from my full-time job with the hospital that I have been with for 4+ years, due to budget cuts. Working in the Emergency Room, I helped children of all ages and needs. And being a single mother, I am looking for a nanny position or a personal assistant position, that I can either do from home or take my daughter with me (So that I can spend more time with her and avoid outrageous daycare costs and illnesses). If you are interested in me nannying for you, please let me know. Attached is the link to my Care.com profile, which goes more in depth about my experience, pay, etc. https://www.care.com/p/tanyat686/cc
