All workshops will be taught in Chan Shun Hall RM 226 every Wednesday at 09:30 am to 12:30 pm
Following the prominent Mobile Farmer’s Market program they launched last year, the Andrews University Student Gardens are teaming up with the Berrien County Health Department to pioneer a produce-delivery service for Bridge Card holders in Benton Harbor. Funding for the program comes from a $100,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Community Health.

The Student Gardens have already operated a standard Community-Supported Agriculture (CSA) Program for four years. At the beginning of the season, customers sign a contract and pay to receive a half or full bushel of fresh produce delivered to their home once a week from May to October. CSA programs have existed in various forms across the country for 25 years, but with the new program they’re hoping to reach a different market. Many current CSAs are “a little boutique-y,” says Garth Woodruff, Student Gardens Director, so the state of Michigan hopes to use this summer’s program as a pilot study in reaching food deserts, underprivileged areas that have difficulty accessing fresh food. They “take [the] CSA baskets,” Woodruff explains, “and build them into something that’s a little bit more usable, staple foods, things like that. Then take a delivery system that takes those with food stamps and puts the food on their front steps on a weekly basis throughout the summer.” It’s an effort to reach an often-overlooked demographic located mere miles from the abundant farm stands and orchards of Berrien Springs.

The program coordinators hope to get 25 Benton Harbor households to sign up for the service this summer, but they emphasize that this is a minimum, not a limit. As an added incentive to the program, Bridge Card holders can use their Double Up food bucks to pay for produce. Double Up bucks allow customers to receive twice the value they’re charged for in fresh fruits and vegetables; the Student Gardens are setting a limit this summer of $40 worth of produce for $20 in Food Bucks per market day. “It’s a way to encourage them to use their Bridge Card and their benefits on healthy food,” explains Ryan Wallace, Mobile Market Coordinator, “instead of at the dollar store buying unhealthy packaged food.

Another major component of the program is education. “The data,” Woodruff notes, “shows that you can’t just make healthy food available and change habits; you have to do a great deal of perception changes, so there’s education, there’s desire, there’s a whole bunch to address actually just putting food inside of the demographic.” A large portion of the grant from the state of Michigan will go towards incentive programs, cooking and health classes, marketing, and support groups – all designed to help residents use their new resources to their full potential.

As an example of the program’s possibilities, Woodruff points to the Berrien country juvenile detention center, which is already buying produce from the CSA using a farm-to-school grant. “We deliver three baskets every single week and they feed 45 kids,” he says. “It’s an initiative to try and break down some of those barriers.” The most important component, however, is personal relationships. “When we walk up to the door with the baskets, it’s a whole educational thing: this is kohlrabi, this is fennel, this is bok choy. There’s a lot of interaction that our driver has at the front door of homes, as well as what goes on at the farm stand with the registered dietician [who does demonstrations there].”

Wallace, who will be driving the mobile farm market and doing deliveries with the help of a local intern, agrees. “It’s incredible…the one-on-one personal contact. I’ll be connecting with these people in the community.”

Wallace and Woodruff both emphasize how vital the program – and the Student Gardens as a whole – are both to Andrews’ place in the local community, and the university’s recent emphasis on wellness. Andrews is partnering with United Way, Lakeland Hospital, Southwest Michigan Planning, the YMCA, and the Health Department. Wallace notes that the Seventh-day Adventist Church has historically prioritized healthy living, a key component of which is a fresh and simple diet.

“It’s totally a win-win,” Wallace says, “for the community, for this department and the Agriculture program, for the students who pay their tuition to the university, and for the health message….It’s a virtuous cycle, not a vicious cycle.”

The new Building Healthy Communities CSA program will be “major” for the student gardens, Gardens Manager Arthur Mulyono concludes. After all, “that’s our mission: grow food, grow students, grow community.” “We are the last Agriculture program in North American Adventist Universities,” says Woodruff. “Our University was moved to this exact location by church founders explicitly for agriculture. And, we are continuing that legacy.”
Envision Magazine Wins Six Awards

Envision magazine, a student-produced publication of Andrews University, won six awards from the Associated Church Press on Friday, May 1. Envision, which will publish its seventh annual issue this fall, is a joint product of the Department of Communication and the Department of Visual Art & Design. Focusing on inspirational and lifestyle content for the Christian university student, Envision is edited by journalism professor Debbie Michel and features the work of student writers, graphic designers and photographers.

The 2014 edition of Envision received the following distinctions:

General Excellence: Best In Class/Online: Digital Edition/Mobile Publication

Student Publications: General Excellence: All Media
Award Of Excellence
Debbie Michel, editor

"I’m delighted that these awards acknowledge the talents of our student writers, designers and photographers," says Michel. "It validates and confirms that our students are ready to work alongside the best in the Christian publishing business."

Envision has received recognition for its quality in higher circles at Andrews as well. "Envision magazine is a gem at Andrews University," says Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design. "I am pleased to see its continued success." Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, adds: "An award-winning magazine is a great credit to the Department of Communication and to the College of Arts & Sciences as a whole."

In addition to the awards received by Envision, the Associated Church Press also gave an Award of Excellence...
Andrews University Awards Two Honorary Doctorates

Humberto M. Rasi, Special Projects, Department of Education, General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, was the keynote speaker for the 8:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Commencement services with an address titled "On the Road to Success." University President Niels-Erik Andreasen presented him with an honorary doctorate for his contribution to Adventist education during the 8:30 a.m. service.

Rasi has worked as a teacher, author, editor and educational administrator for the church for almost 60 years. In the 1970s he served as a teacher, department chair and eventually dean of graduate studies for Andrews University, and from 1990 to 2002 he was director of the Education Department of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. He has published, contributed to, or co-edited numerous books and articles, as well as cofounding the Institute for Christian Teaching and establishing the Adventus Editorial Consortium.

For Rasi, coming to Andrews University for Commencement was "moving." "It was a memorable experience," he says, "in terms of returning to the university where I worked for ten years, where we lived with our family in the 1970s. It was a high honor to receive an award from the oldest institution of Adventist education." This is Rasi’s fourth honorary doctorate.

Martin Joseph Doblmeier, founder and president of Journey Films, spoke at the 11 a.m. Commencement service. His address was titled "Through the Lens of Faith." Doblmeier has been working in documentary filmmaking for three decades, producing and directing more than 30 films about religion, faith and spirituality that have had wide distribution and critical acclaim including an Emmy, three U.S./International Film Festival awards, and six Gabriel Awards for best film on a topic of religion in America. Notably, he directed a trilogy of films about Seventh-day Adventism: “The Adventists” (2010), “The Adventists 2” (2013), and “The Blueprint:
The Story of Adventist Education" (2014).

"I am delighted to receive a degree from Andrews, a school with so many accomplished graduates," Doblmeier says. "But I am also grateful on behalf of all the filmmakers—particularly documentary filmmakers. Honorary degrees usually go to authors and writers but in making a serious documentary film I can spend between two to four years in research, production and presentation so it really is like an advanced degree when done properly. I feel a sense of pride on behalf of every serious documentary filmmaker and hope they have some sense of sharing in this."

Both Doblmeier and Rasi noted that they experienced a warm welcome at Andrews University and appreciated the enthusiasm of the students, the hospitality of faculty and the beauty of the campus. "There is something special happening at Andrews," Doblmeier says, "and I am delighted to play a small part in it."

Rwandan Commemoration of 1994 Genocide

The Midwest Rwandan Community held the 21st Commemoration of the 1994 genocide against the Tutsi in Rwanda on the Andrews University campus, on Saturday, April 11, from 3–6 p.m. in Newbold Auditorium, Buller Hall. Held in the "Never Again" spirit of the United Nations policies, this annual Michiana area event was well attended by more than 200 individuals. The keynote speaker was Joe Richie, a Chicago area businessman who also serves as co-chairman of the Presidential Advisory Council (PAC) for Rwanda, to help facilitate private sector investment in the country.

This year's program, emceed by Tabitha Mpamira, had the special focus of refuting persons who have denied or minimized the genocide of 1994. The program began with video testimonials from Rwandans who were there during the genocide. These people expostulated that what happened 21 years ago was not merely tribal conflict, but instead an attempt at ethnic extermination. There were several other elements, including a children's candle lighting, and musical selections. During the candle lighting, there was a poem by Thomas Habimana, which portrayed the perspective of a Tutsi hiding out in a hole under a rock during the genocide, hearing dogs fighting over dead and rotting bodies. Lifase Bilima sang "It Is Well With My Soul," accompanied by Robert Baleris on the piano, and at the end of the song transitioned into "When We All Get to Heaven," encouraging the audience to join her.

One of the highlights of the program was the testimony of Consolee Nishimwe. She told the story of her experience, which she wrote about in her book titled, "Tested to the Limit: A Genocide Survivor's Story of Pain, Resilience, and Hope" (Balboa Press, 2012). Nishimwe was a girl of 14 at the time of the genocide. She remembered hearing the killers shouting, "Any Tutsi cockroaches hiding in there? Show yourselves!" Her father and her younger brothers were killed in the genocide. Although she was raped and tortured, Nishimwe survived, along with her mother and a younger sister. At the end of her speech, the entire audience rose in silent respect.

Richie, the keynote speaker, was another highlight of the program. Originally, the speaker was supposed to be the Rwandan State Minister and Ambassador to the United Nations, His Excellency Eugene Richard Gasana, but he could not make it due to windstorms that canceled his flight. Considering his proximity to Berrien Springs (Chicago), and his experience with the people in Rwanda, Richie was an apt replacement. He

Day for the Pi
Pi lovers at Andrews University celebrated National Pi Day on Thursday by eating pie. And lots of it. Karen Johnson-McWilliams of the university's math department said the school provided 25 pies and 64 cheesecake squares, which quickly disappeared.

She said she cut the 8-inch pies into eight pieces and the bigger pies into 16 pieces, which gave her 320 pieces when you add in the 64 cheesecake pieces.

So, how many eight-inch pies did she have?
You do the math.

For most of America, Pi Day is Saturday, when the calendar and clock will combine for two moments to read: 3-14-15, 9:26:53 - or pi to its 10th digit. Andrews celebrated Thursday before classes ended for spring break.
Best New Home 2015: A Place Between

Our best new home rests comfortably on the edge of the Atlantic Ocean in Biddeford, Me. Go to FineHomebuilding.com/houses for more photos and a video tour of this and our other award-winning homes.

Designed by architect Caleb Johnson of Biddeford, Maine, our best new house succeeds admirably in balancing traditional expectations and contemporary demands. The house sits on the north side of Granite Point, a chunk of ledge that juts out into the North Atlantic; as a result, the house is deeply influenced by its maritime surroundings. Its traditional cross-gable form is modernized with unexpected curves—a gentle one shapes the front of the house—and discreetly placed openings that frame only the best views. A curve also defines the ocean-facing back deck, which arcs along the shoreline. Inside, an easy-going floor plan emphasizes informality, with the arrangement of rooms based on the family’s living habits rather than a prescriptive formula of how a house should be laid out. Architectural details, including locally turned white-oak columns and glulam beams that support the living-room ceiling, are integral to the structure rather than pasted-on decoration. For us, this added up to an award-winning new home that challenges cherished architectural assumptions without abandoning its local vernacular.
Christianity is, of course, a global faith, but even many denominations within Christianity are global. The January-February issue of Christianity Today lists the largest ones — the Catholic Church, Eastern Orthodoxy, Anglicanism and The Assemblies of God. That last one shouldn't surprise most of us who have heard of the phenomenal growth of Pentecostalism in modern times.

It was the mention of the fifth largest denomination worldwide that surprised me — the Seventh-day Adventist church! These are our neighbors, after all, who operate nearby Andrews University, whose 90.7-FM radio station with its classical music is the main preset on my car radio. I've visited their Pioneer Memorial Church Sabbath service more than once, even shopped at the vegetarian supermarket at the entrance to their campus, though not on a Saturday, of course. What is this global denomination that thrives under the radar for most of us?

They're called Adventists because it began with a prediction of the second advent of Christ in 1843 and 1844 made by a Baptist preacher called William Miller. His allegedly failed prediction was called "the great disappointment," but some Adventists salvaged Miller's prediction by claiming that some eschatological event had indeed occurred in 1844, albeit in the heavens — that Christ had entered a heavenly sanctuary and had begun an investigative judgment, all with a view to his eventual return to earth.

The Adventists became Seventh-day Adventists when one of their New England ministers became convinced — and persuaded his fellow Adventists — that Christians should gather for worship on the seventh day, rather than on Sunday. That conviction seemed to carry with it an interest in other Old Testament observances and laws, about foods, for example.

By the time the church got formally established in 1863, with a membership of 3,500, its center of gravity had moved to lower Michigan, where it established health centers and began to produce health foods. It was John Harvey Kellogg, a Battle Creek Adventist physician, who created a breakfast cereal called cornflakes, making Kellogg's a familiar breakfast food label for kids across America and for their moms who shop the cereal aisles of our supermarkets.

In their attention to foods, Adventists soon promoted avoidance of not only alcohol and tobacco but also of coffee, tea, cola — anything with caffeine. In fact, Adventists for the most part went vegetarian. Polls have shown a significant resultant decrease in cancer and heart disease among Adventists and longer life expectancy than the average American — 10 years longer!

To many observers it would seem somewhat odd, this apparent shift from interest in an other-worldly subject such as the imminent return of Christ to a quite this-worldly subject such as health foods. But these doctrines and practices add up to an overall church identity sufficiently attractive to generate loyalty in members of the church and to win converts.

For some time in the first half of the 1900s the evangelical world held Seventh-day Adventists at arm's length because of many of their beliefs and practices. Some evangelicals went so far as to call them a "cult," not to be counted among the family of Christian denominations. But by the later 1900s evangelicals found Adventists to be an acceptable form of Christianity. At present the picture has been turned around. Some Adventists are getting... apprehensive about their church becoming too enamored with evangelicalism and losing its distinctives.

In any case, Seventh-day Adventists have gained one million members a year for the past 10 years and now number 18.1 million around the globe, landing them in the fifth spot of largest Christian denominations in the world.
BENTON TOWNSHIP - The folks who brought fresh fruits and vegetables to low-income neighborhoods last year with a mobile farmers market will bring these nutritious foods right to residents' doorsteps this year - along with online recipes and cooking demonstrations.

Nicole Britten, the Berrien County Health Department's director of community health planning, reported to the Board of Health on Wednesday that they will team up with Andrews University on a pilot Consumer-Supported Agriculture program.

The CSA, which delivers baskets of fresh produce throughout the summer and fall, will be available to 25 Benton Harbor food assistance Bridge card recipients.

The project is being supported with a $100,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Community Health.

Last year the health department launched an initiative with Andrews University's student garden to run a mobile market that made weekly stops in low-income neighborhoods with limited access to fresh foods. That program will continue.

CSA customers can sign up to receive a weekly bushel of produce from Andrews' gardens and orchards for $15, or a smaller basket for $10, using Double Up Food Bucks, Britten said.

The Double Up Food Bucks, which also can be used at the farmers market, are matched to what the customer spends, up to $20 per market day. They can be spent that day or saved for later.

That's the same as getting a two-for-one deal, Britten said.

The Benton Harbor market also provides discounts to low-income seniors through the Market Fresh program, and accepts coupons for WIC clients.

Britten told the board that produce prices at the Benton Harbor farmers market are less expensive than some groceries, and with the Double Up Food Bucks, the fresh foods are even more affordable.

The CSA customers can have their food delivered to their homes or workplace, or they can pick it up at the Benton Harbor market location at Lighthouse Ministries.

The CSA offering is an extension of the program available to all residents through Andrews University.

With $3,500 from the state grant, the health department is hiring videographer Andre Isom to produce 18 videos demonstrating how to cook recipes using the vegetables delivered, along with photographs. Those videos will be posted on YouTube and the Be Healthy Berrien website. There also will be hand-outs in the CSA baskets with recipes.

The department has received a $75,000 grant from Michigan's 4x4 Wellness Plan. Part of those funds will be used to hire a Lakeland Health dietician to present cooking demonstrations with the mobile farmers market from June 8 through Sept. 18.

The health department is offering incentives for Bridge card holders to attend cooking classes, such as utensils and other cooking aids.
The department will be tracking attendance and sales at its markets, and determining whether the efforts helped residents eat more fruits and vegetables.

Dean, a position which he has held for 13 years, making him the longest-serving dean in the history of the School of Education.

Jeffery has led the School of Education through two NCATE accreditation visits, in 2004 and 2011. “The last accreditation visit was especially meaningful,” he says, “because the accrediting team wrote in their findings that they could not find any areas for improvement. This only happens to about 10% of the 1,700 colleges and universities that are accredited by NCATE.” In the last six years, Jeffery also had the opportunity to serve on the Board of Examination for NCATE, visiting colleges and universities across the United States.

“Some of my best memories,” Jeffery says, “have been working with staff and faculty who are professionals and extremely talented.” He has been thrilled to work in “a strong and respected academic program,” one that – for four years straight – ranked as the top teacher preparation program in the state of Michigan.

“Dr. Jeffery was a good leader,” says Dr. Annabelle Lopez, a professor in the School of Education. “He always took coworkers’ ideas seriously and spent time with them individually to help them realize their goals. Some of my best memories,” Jeffery says, “have been working with staff and faculty who are professionals and extremely talented.”

Jeffery says that more than anything, his experience at Andrews has taught him to be patient and slow to judge. “God is in control,” he says, “and I should not run ahead of his leading.”

While he will miss spending time with his coworkers and innovating new ways for School of Education to improve, Jeffery is excited for his retirement plans. He and his wife plan to spend their summers at a cottage in Prince Edward Island, Canada, and their winters visiting their sons, daughters-in-law, and grandchildren in Alberta, Tennessee, and California. More immediately, Jeffery is looking forward to sailing his 35 ft sailboat down the St Lawrence River to Eastern Canada this August. “This has been a dream for a long time,” he says, “and now I finally have the time to do it.”

Shari Smoot Graduates with BS in Liberal Arts

“When I came to work for Andrews University in July 2012 finishing my degree was the furthest thing from my mind. I thought it would take me 30+ hours and at my age that was too daunting of a task! Within a year, at the suggestion of my boss, Dr. David Faehner, I checked into getting a BS in Liberal Arts and discovered it was do-able. After 30 years and returning to college 3 times I finally graduated on May 3, 2015. Many thanks to Dr. Faehner for encouraging me and providing the time away from my work so I could finish. Also, thanks to all the many, many people who also encouraged me and supported me including my children for picking up the slack at home. I’m so thrilled to have this degree and to have finished with high marks.”

Death of Betty Colleen Weakley

November 5, 1928 – May 9, 2015

Betty Colleen (Collard) Weakley, 86, of Berrien Springs, passed away at her home on Saturday, May 9, 2015. She was born on November 5, 1928 in Berrien Springs to Glenn J. and Mary H. E. (Kilpatrick) Collard. Betty grew up with her brother, Robert “Bob”, and sister, Kathryn Joyce “Babe”, in a house that their father built on the northwest corner of Garr and Snow Roads. At the age of four, Betty begged to go to school with her brother and sister at Burke School, so her mother decided to let her attend. The teacher would let Betty sit on her lap during classes. Burke School was a one-room school that was across the road from their home. After finishing elementary school, Betty attended Emmanuel Missionary College Academy, now Andrews Academy. During her academy years Betty learned to play one of her favorite musical instruments, the saxophone. She continued to play the instrument throughout her life. Betty graduated from Emmanuel Missionary College in 1949, with an Associate degree in Secretarial Science.

In the early years she worked as the Administrative Secretary for the Vice-President of Kellogg’s Company in Battle Creek, Michigan. After her children had begun grade school, she became the Administrative Assistant for Continental Specialty Advertising and Sporting Goods Company in Berrien Springs. On May 12, 1949, Betty married John Edward Weakley on the national radio show “Bride and Groom” in Hollywood, California. During their early married years, John and Betty lived in a number of places including: an apartment in Battle Creek, a small house on the southwest corner of Garr and Snow Roads, and a house on Main Street in Berrien Springs. In 1955 John began building a new house one mile west of Berrien Springs on Snow Road in his spare time. They moved into the new house in 1957 and lived there for the next 41 years. In 1998 they moved to their current home on Lake Chapin Bluff.

John and Betty are survived by their three children: Michael Glenn (Alice) Weakley of Ottawa, IL, Jon Todd (Linda) Weakley of Berrien Springs, and Tamara Kay (Don) Jardine of Berrien Springs; seven grandchildren and two great-grandsons. She was a fabulous cook, and enjoyed camping, swimming, gardening, playing games and spending time with her family and friends.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Friday, May 15, at Pioneer Memorial Church, where Betty was a member. In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to ADRA-Nepal, Your Story Hour, Amazing Facts, or It Is Written. Allred Funeral Home, Berrien Springs, is serving the family, and online messages may be left at www.allredfuneralhome.com.

A big thank you to each of you who contributed or supported in any way the end of the school year collection drive benefiting foster kids. The dorm students gave generously. There was the girl who shared from her precious store bag collection and the guys who donated suits that will be used for job interviews and other such occasions by aged out of foster care guys. There was the snow pants with the tags still on and the super warm coats, the boots and dress shoes and so much more. Thank you to the deans of all of the dorms and their staff who were great support and very helpful in so many ways. A special thank you to Transportation for the use of the trailers and to Jamie Wright for giving of himself and working tirelessly hauling the trailers and unloading them as well. May God richly bless each of you as you care for the least of these by giving of yourselves. God’s Hands 4 Kids gh4k.org

Lakeland Offers Breastfeeding Class in St. Joseph
A breastfeeding class for mothers and fathers will be presented on Monday, May 18, from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m., in the Frederick S. Upton Education Center at Lakeland Medical Center, St. Joseph, 1234 Napier Avenue. Lakeland Health’s certified lactation consultant will discuss breastfeeding from delivery room to postpartum, the use of breast pumps, weaning, returning to work, and other topics.

In addition to enhancing the bond between mother and child, studies have shown that breastfeeding offers many health benefits. For a new mother, breastfeeding leads to less postpartum blood loss, helps with postpartum weight loss, and lowers the risk of ovarian and breast cancer. For the baby, breast milk enhances cognitive development, helps to fight illnesses, and is more easily absorbed by the digestive system than formula.

The cost for the breastfeeding class is $30, due at the time of registration. For more information or to register, call (269) 556-2808 or (866) 260-7544. Visit www.lakelandhealth.org or find Lakeland Health on Facebook or Twitter for more classes and events.

House for Sale: 622 Lynn Drive

Do you like that very contemporary "IKEA Look?" Then this 3BD/2BA open style and impeccably maintained house with vaulted ceilings is made for you! This home was completely remodeled in 2007 with very nice quality materials including beautifully finished "real" hardwood floors.

The huge windows let in an abundance of light and look out onto the professionally landscaped yard (lilacs, dogwoods, rhododendrons) that backs up to private wooded land that is landlocked--so NO neighbors in back. The large fenced in backyard has a wonderful deck located right under a shady maple tree just waiting for you to come and relax. The .28 acre lot also has an extremely well built 12x10 shed with concrete floor. Home is located within walking distance of downtown Berrien Springs and Andrews University.

2001 Acura TL for Sale

I have taken good care of this car and it is in excellent condition. It has only 107,500 miles, runs and drives very nicely and has a very smooth and quiet ride. It is the top of the line model of that year so the interior is very luxurious, has all the options and everything works. It is also very neat both inside and outside and has no rust at all. This is a very reliable, good quality vehicle that still has a long life ahead. My asking price is $4,600 but I am open to all reasonable offers. My name is John and you may call or text me at 813-205-5688. Or you can email me at gomezfamily96@yahoo.com if preferred.

2006 Honda Odyssey LX
4-door
99,500 Miles
Gray
6-cylinder engine
Gasoline
5-speed automatic transmission

As you see in the first picture, it was examined on 2/24/2015. It indicates this car has good condition except "pass quarter" as the first line in the first picture because it has a problem when you put a CD into a player and take it out. But I will fix this problem before you take over this car. I can transfer this car after 5/19/15.

Running Partner Wanted

I am looking for a running partner here in Berrien Springs. I am not an expert, I just started running two months ago but I want to keep running and I find it more motivating when I have a buddy to run with. I usually run 10 KM; I'm trying to go for the 12th. I run five days per week at 7.30 p.m., but I can be flexible with that. It takes me about 1 hour and 30 minutes to come back to the initial point. This is my route (blue dotted line), it's pretty easy and fun but if you have another route it’s fine; just let’s run.

My name is Isaac and my phone is 269-338-5879. Text me or email me to agree in details. Thanks!
