David Petraeus, U.S. Army General (Ret.) and Former CIA Director

We will close the 2014-15 season with four-star General David Petraeus whose distinguished military career spanned more than 37 years and culminated with six straight commands (five of which were in combat). He's widely credited with dramatically reducing the violence in Iraq and for halting the Taliban's momentum in Afghanistan when he led operations there.

Following his military service, Petraeus directed the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) overseeing significant achievements in America's global counterterrorism campaign, pursuing an initiative to increase worldwide intelligence coverage and bringing about the new Economic Security Center.

Over his career, Petraeus has received numerous U.S. military, State Department, NATO and United Nations awards and has been decorated by 12 foreign countries. Today he serves as chairman of the Global Institute of KKR, is a visiting professor of public policy at CUNY's Macaulay Honors College and is a Judge Widney Professor at the University of Southern California.

Our evening with him will provide deeper insights into the global challenges facing us today.

Farewell Reception for Dina Simmons

Date: Thursday, May 28, 2015

Time: 3–5 p.m.

Location: Simulator Building, Andrews Airpark

You are invited to join us in celebrating Dina's 15 years of service to Andrews University as flight instructor, associate professor of flight and maintenance, department chair, and faculty member with the Department of Aviation. As a graduate of the department, Dina has always cared about the students and faculty she was responsible for. Her smile and charisma has been at the forefront of everything she has done.

Dina and her husband Dan plan to stay in the area for a short while before moving on to bigger and better adventures. Please join us to thank Dina for her years of service.

This will be a come-and-go reception.

All workshops will be taught in Chan Shun Hall RM 226 every Wednesday at 09:30 am to 12:30 pm
Rachel Williams-Smith, chair of the Andrews University Department of Communication, will be discussing her book "Born Yesterday: The True Story of a Girl Born in the 20th Century, but Raised in the 19th" on Wednesday, June 10, at 6:30 p.m. in the church hall of Sacred Heart of Mary Catholic Church, Dowagiac. Copies will be available for sale at the event, and refreshments will be served.

The book tells the story of Williams-Smith's upbringing in an isolated southern environment in which her extremely conservative religious family lived as if it were the 1800s. She recounts her journey to normalcy and a new life, and the way that her faith in God helped her overcome familial dysfunction and religious extremism to become a balanced and happy adult. "I am looking forward to a chance to talk to people in the community," says Williams-Smith, "and my hope is that I can inspire someone to have faith and go on."

The book recently received the Associate Church Press's Award of Excellence for a non-fiction work. The book trailer, which can be viewed here, won the Award of Excellence in PR/Marketing Video. Copies of "Born Yesterday" can be purchased at the Adventist Book Center in Berrien Springs, from Parable Christian Bookstore and Forever Books in St. Joseph, Michigan, as well as online from Amazon and Barnes and Noble.

Today, Williams-Smith holds bachelor, master's and doctoral degrees, and is currently completing a second doctorate. She is married to a local professional tailor, and together they have four children.
If you drive up to the Architecture Building on the Andrews University campus, you'll see an unusual structure in the parking lot. Fenced off by orange cones, sitting atop four wheels, with large windows and a sloping roof, it seems like a strange hybrid of truck, motor home and shed. What it actually is, however, is perhaps more amazing.

Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design, and the five graduate students in his Design/Build class, have built a fully-functional and livable miniature house, measuring a mere 148 square feet, on an 18-ft. flatbed trailer.

Traditionally, the construction class takes an annual trip to Bolivia to build for people there, but Carscallen wanted a project that all of his students could participate in during an entire school year. "It's harder in Michigan," he explains, "because of the winters. And how do you go out on a job site every day when you have a full day of classes? With this, we could work on it in the warehouse year round, and the weather wouldn't affect it." He pitched the idea, and received a grant from Physics Enterprises to build two miniature houses with his class. One of those houses—nicknamed "The Shed"—remained in the warehouse unfinished at the end of the semester, but the other—"Bay View"—was completed and beautiful in time for graduation.

The key to building a tiny house, Carscallen explained, is planning and research. The students had free rein on the project, proposing different designs and making most building decisions themselves. They had to learn all of the skills that one would for a regular house, including wall construction, siding, paneling, insulation, plumbing and wiring, all while working to use space efficiently and ingeniously.

The result is a space that manages to feel airy and filled with light, not cramped or claustrophobic. The "main floor" features a table for two; a kitchen area with a full sink, 10-cubic-foot refrigerator, small cooktop, and ample counter space; a hollow staircase with built-in storage cubbies; and a full-sized bathroom with a flush toilet, pedestal sink and shower. Above are two lofts—one that holds a queen bed, and one that can serve as a lounge area, second bedroom or storage space. Much like a traditional mobile home, it only requires simple electric and sewage hookups, as well as propane for the water heater. While not as easily transported as an RV—it weighs over 8,000 lbs.—the house can be pulled by a truck and moved from place to place, making it ideal for long vacations or cross-country moves.

The project was such a success that Carscallen has decided to repeat it in future years, which is why they're selling the "Bay View" house for $30,000. In the future, they'd like to be able to turn enough profit to provide tiny homes to underprivileged residents of Benton Harbor at little or no cost. Another suggested idea would be building a small cluster of tiny homes as affordable alternative student housing on campus.

While living in a house this small takes adjustment, Carscallen says those who take part in the "tiny house movement" see this lifestyle as its own reward. Living in such a small space combats materialism, he explains. "If you accumulate and accumulate stuff...you need a bigger house to store it in, then you fill that. It's a vicious cycle." Furthermore, tiny houses are immensely affordable and sustainable. Instead of going deeply into mortgage debt and spending long hours on house upkeep, tiny house owners can focus on different interests. "Especially if you're interested in missions," he says, "in doing things beyond yourself, it saves you from being a slave to the bank."

Overall, Carscallen says, the tiny house project was an incredible success that they look forward to repeating in the future. "We launched it not really knowing how it was going to turn out, but the students really liked it...and it was eye-opening for them."

To learn more about the tiny house project, you can visit their website: http://www.theshedtinyhouse.com or view a time-lapse video of the construction at: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WqyUmlU79ig&feature=youtu.be.
Student Gardens Will Deliver Fresh Produce to Bridge Card Holders’ Home

Following the prominent Mobile Farmer's Market program they launched last year, the Andrews University Student Gardens are teaming up with the Berrien County Health Department to pioneer a produce-delivery service for Bridge Card holders in Benton Harbor. Funding for the program comes from a $100,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Community Health.

The Student Gardens have already operated a standard Community-Supported Agriculture (CSA) Program for four years. At the beginning of the season, customers sign a contract and pay to receive a either a half or full bushel of fresh produce delivered to their home once a week from May to October. CSA programs have existed in various forms across the country for 25 years, but with the new program they're hoping to reach a different market. Many current CSAs are "a little boutique-y," says Garth Woodruff, Student Gardens Director, so the state of Michigan hopes to use this summer's program as a pilot study in reaching food deserts, underprivileged areas that have difficulty accessing fresh food. They "take [the] CSA baskets," Woodruff explains, "and build them into something that’s a little bit more usable, staple foods, things like that. Then take a delivery system that takes those with food stamps and puts the food on their front steps on a weekly basis throughout the summer." It's an effort to reach an often-overlooked demographic located mere miles from the abundant farm stands and orchards of Berrien Springs.

The program coordinators hope to get 25 Benton Harbor households to sign up for the service this summer, but they emphasize that this is a minimum, not a limit. As an added incentive to the program, Bridge Card holders can use their Double Up food bucks to pay for produce. Double Up bucks allow customers to receive twice the value they're charged for in fresh fruits and vegetables; the Student Gardens are setting a limit this summer of $40 worth of produce for $20 in Food Bucks per market day. "It’s a way to encourage them to use their Bridge Card and their benefits on healthy food," explains Ryan Wallace, Mobile Market Coordinator, "instead of at the dollar store buying unhealthy packaged food.

Another major component of the program is education. "The data," Woodruff notes, "shows that you can't just make healthy food available and change habits; you have to do a great deal of perception changes, so there's education, there's a whole bunch to address besides actually just putting food inside of the demographic.” A large portion of the grant from the state of Michigan will go towards incentive programs, cooking and health classes, marketing, and support groups – all designed to help residents use their new resources to their full potential.

As an example of the program's possibilities, Woodruff points to the Berrien country juvenile detention center, which is already buying produce from the CSA using a farm-to-school grant. "We deliver three baskets every single week and they feed 45 kids," he says. "It's an initiative to try and break down some of those barriers." The most important component, however, is personal relationships. "When we walk up to the door with the baskets, it's a whole educational thing: this is kohlrabi, this is fennel, this is bok choy. There's a lot of interaction that our driver has at the front door of homes, as well as what goes on at the farm stand with the registered dietician [who does demonstrations there]."

Wallace, who will be driving the mobile farm market and doing deliveries with the help of a local intern, agrees. "It's incredible...the one-on-one personal contact. I'll be connecting with these people in the community."

Wallace and Woodruff both emphasize how vital the program -- and the Student Gardens as a whole -- are both to Andrews' place in the local community, and the university's recent emphasis on wellness. Andrews is partnering with United Way, Lakeland Hospital, Southwest Michigan Planning, the YMCA, and the Health Department. Wallace notes that the Seventh-day Adventist Church has historically prioritized healthy living, a key component of which is a fresh and simple diet.

"It's totally a win-win," Wallace says, "for the community, for this department and the Agriculture program, for the students who pay their tuition to the university, and for the health message...It's a virtuous cycle, not a vicious cycle."

The new Building Healthy Communities CSA program will be "major" for the student gardens, Gardens Manager Arthur Mulyono concludes. After all, "that's our mission: grow food, grow students, grow community.” "We are the last Agriculture program in North American Adventist Universities," says Woodruff. "Our University was moved to this exact location by church founders explicitly for agriculture. And, we are continuing that legacy."
Envision Magazine Wins Six Awards

Envision magazine, a student-produced publication of Andrews University, won six awards from the Associated Church Press on Friday, May 1. Envision, which will publish its seventh annual issue this fall, is a joint product of the Department of Communication and the Department of Visual Art & Design. Focusing on inspirational and lifestyle content for the Christian university student, Envision is edited by journalism professor Debbie Michel and features the work of student writers, graphic designers and photographers.

The 2014 edition of Envision received the following distinctions:

General Excellence: Best In Class/Online: Digital Edition/Mobile Publication
Honorable Mention
Kenty Ramdatt

Reporting and Writing: Personal Experience/1st Person Account: Short Format (1,200 words or fewer): Magazine/Journal
Honorable Mention
“Troubled Waters” by Emily Leffler

Art/Design/Graphics: Magazine Cover
Award Of Excellence
Fall 2014 cover by Brian Tagalog

Award Of Merit
Fall issue 2014 by Amber Sarno, Arielle Pickett, Jonathon Wolfer and Diane Myers

Art/Design/Graphics: Single Photo w/Article Or Cutline: Magazine/Journal
Award Of Merit
Patrick Knighton by Brian Tagalog

Student Publications: General Excellence: All Media
Award Of Excellence
Debbie Michel, editor

“I’m delighted that these awards acknowledge the talents of our student writers, designers and photographers,” says Michel. “It validates and confirms that our students are ready to work alongside the best in the Christian publishing business.”

Envision has received recognition for its quality in higher circles at Andrews as well. “Envision magazine is a gem at Andrews University,” says Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design. “I am pleased to see its continued success.” Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, adds: “An award-winning magazine is a great credit to the Department of Communication and to the College of Arts & Sciences as a whole.”

In addition to the awards received by Envision, the Associated Church Press also gave an Award of Excellence...

Day for the Pi
Pi lovers at Andrews University celebrated National Pi Day on Thursday by eating pie. And lots of it. Karen Johnson-McWilliams of the university’s math department said the school provided 25 pies and 64 cheesecake squares, which quickly disappeared.

She said she cut the 8-inch pies into eight pieces and the bigger pies into 16 pieces, which gave her 320 pieces when you add in the 64 cheesecake pieces.
In an interview with Spectrum, Carey Carscallen, Dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design at Andrews University, talks about the recently completed Tiny House Project and what it means for the Andrews community and beyond.

Question: What exactly is a “tiny house”?

Answer: A tiny house is a place for people to live who want a simpler life. You don’t need a lot of land or personal possessions, so it allows you to scale back and live more economically.

What first got you interested in tiny houses? I heard a rumor that you did your thesis on tiny houses, is that correct?
I did my thesis on the small house, which isn’t the same as a tiny house but they are similar. Living with a smaller footprint has been a long-held interest of mine, and I wanted to have something that’s hands-on in house construction for our students, so this was a good fit. We have classes in furniture design, and model making, and things like that, but to do something that’s directly related to architecture and to have something that the students can do clear through the process – from design to construction – was the goal. In Michigan, with our extreme winters, to do it on a regular building site is problematic. Doing a tiny house on a trailer, in the warehouse, where they could work year-round just made sense. And the students can still learn most of the aspects of house construction that way. Of course, you don’t do concrete foundations and footings, and that kind of thing, but from there on up, it’s the same.

Can you describe a bit about the students’ process for designing and constructing the tiny house?

We started out having them do research, which included zoning information and the legal issues surrounding owning a tiny house. What kind of restrictions there are for moving and transporting one, and all of those different aspects. Then, when it came to the design, the students had pretty much free rein. Building it on a trailer restricted the footprint, so they had to keep that in mind. They also had to work within the parameters of keeping it able to pull behind a truck without a special permit. Within these guidelines, they were able to have complete control of the design.

Did you run into any challenges or surprises that you weren’t expecting while the students were working on it?

Not really any surprises, but some of the challenges were that the students tended to want to build before they finished designing. Then they’d run into problems that they had to work through. Whereas if the design had been there first, it would have been more efficient in the construction process. The designs ended up being very original and well done as far as the space use and aesthetics.

I’ve heard there’s actually two tiny houses, but only one of them is completed, correct?
Right. This was a project for our fifth year students who are in their final year of the program completing their Master of Architecture degree. So, we had the students split into two groups and each group designed and built a tiny house. The first tiny house is complete and we’re going to finish the second one over the summer. We ended up with two very different designs. The one that’s finished used more traditional house-building technique with stud walls, whereas the other one used structural insulated panels, which is plywood with Styrofoam sandwiched between. That means the walls and ceilings are all just big panels and that gave the students a lot of challenges as far as attachments and wiring. Each tiny house had such a different process; it was a great opportunity for the students to learn about various construction techniques.

What are your plans for the tiny houses, especially the one that’s already complete?

The one that’s complete is currently for sale for $30,000. As soon as we finish the other one, we’ll be putting it up for sale too. We really want to sell them and put the money back into the project and do it again with the new group of fifth year students next year.

You posted several photos of the completed tiny house on the School of Architecture’s Facebook page, and it has been getting quite a bit of attention on social media ever since. I noticed several people have been suggesting donating the tiny house to the homeless. Is that something you’d consider, or something that’s even feasible at this point?

That was part of our talk right from the beginning. We wanted to build one to give away and build the other to cover the costs of both. Then repeat that process. But when we did our initial investigations in Benton Harbor, Michigan, which is an impoverished town a short distance from Andrews, to see how and where they might be used, we found that Benton Harbor, like many other towns, doesn’t have zoning that permits year-round use of a tiny house. Typical zoning requires a minimum lot size and a certain square footage for the house. And of course, tiny houses will never meet that minimum square footage, which is usually around 1,000 sq. ft. There’s going to have to be an adaptation to the ordinances before we can continue with that plan.
How many square feet is the completed tiny house?

The footprint is 148 sq. ft., so not anywhere near the 1,000 sq. ft. that the zoning laws require. Sometimes you are allowed to treat a tiny house like an RV and park it in your backyard, but you still can’t live in it year-round. It can’t be your primary residence.

Do you know which states are tiny house friendly?

It’s not so much states as cities. There are a few around the country. Portland, Oregon and Milwaukee, Wisconsin are a couple, and there are more and more cities that are beginning to allow for tiny houses.

I noticed one of the other comments online was suggesting a tiny house community on the Andrews campus, as an alternate housing solution for students. Does that run into the same zoning issues as you have in Benton Harbor?

You do run into similar issues, though I think it would be most feasible on a private university campus because we’re zoned differently which gives quite a bit of latitude. At this point, we haven’t made that proposal to the university yet, but it is something I’d like to do. However, that would require that we come up with additional funding to cover the costs of that endeavor. Right now, we just don’t have that kind of money. All of our plans will be greatly aided by selling these first two tiny houses.

What are some more ways you’d like to see this project evolve in the coming years?

One way would be that it doesn’t always have to be a tiny house on wheels. It could be a tiny house that we take and put on a piece of property somewhere. Or, something that's done for some other type of purpose but that's still on the same scale as a tiny house, like creating a mobile mission clinic out of a shipping container. There are many possibilities available with this type of concept.

Tell me more about the mobile mission clinic idea. How would that work, and is it something that's already... being utilized in some places?

As far as I know, it’s not currently being used, at least not the way I’m thinking about it. I was talking to one of our friends who is a medical missionary in Chad, Africa and the idea is that we’d convert two shipping containers – one as a clinic and one as a house. Then, you decide which village you’d like to start working in, and in one day you can set up both your house and clinic. Typically, when you go into a new village, there’s nothing there for the missionary. You have to build it up. So this way, you go in with your house and clinic ready to set up, and you’re providing services from day one.

I’ve heard that the School of Architecture has received several distinguished awards over the years. Can you tell me a little bit about these awards?

We have an Urban Design Studio class for our fifth year students, and for the last 15 years or so, we’ve done a project for a community. The communities have been everywhere from Alaska, to the Bahamas, to Honduras, and several local communities as well. One year we did the master plan for the university. We submit these projects to the Congress for New Urbanism, and we’ve received five national awards over the years. We also won one award from the State of Michigan.

What do you feel sets the Andrews University School of Architecture apart from other architecture programs that are out there?

Part of it is our curriculum. It is well-rounded, and it’s laid out in a sequence that takes the students from knowing absolutely nothing to being very well-versed in architecture. Another aspect of our program that makes us unique is that we teach our students that every aspect of architecture is valuable. It’s not just the design that’s going to make them a star that matters. Every piece of design has value. At a lot of schools it’s all about the “wow” factor of the design, but we’re not that way. Our students are very capable designers, but our focus is on the bigger picture. We try to instill in our students the importance of civic responsibility and we integrate community service and service to the church throughout the projects we do. Even the tiny house is another way to make the community and living resourcefully a priority.

It sounds from what you’re describing as though Christian values are entwined throughout the program and what you’re teaching the students.

Yes, absolutely. In everything that we teach, we try to instill that in the students and create that atmosphere. When we go on our Europe tour and our Waldensian tour, each day of those trips, we tie in aspects of faith that relate directly to architecture. Students come on the Waldensian tour and see that these people lived in these simple little stone huts on the mountainside and were killed because of their faith and it makes you wonder, would I be willing to die for my faith? It has a profound effect on our students.

What else would you like people to know about either the Tiny House Project specifically or the School of Architecture in general?

We want people to know about the great things our School of Architecture students are doing, both while they’re here and once they graduate. One of our recent grads, Caleb Johnson, just won the national Best New Home award by Fine Homebuilding Magazine. Another alum, Chantel Atkinson, had her house design featured on the most recent cover of New Homes Magazine.

As for the Tiny House, for people who are interested in supporting this project, they can do so on the Andrews giving site. And of course, anyone interested in purchasing the Tiny House can contact me at 269-471-6003 or ccarey@andrews.edu.

33 College Students Accepted into Adventist Health System's Leadership Development Program

Interns and residents will gain hands-on experience in areas such as supply chain, information systems, patient financial services, and more.

5/27/2015 | By Rainey Turlington

They're young, they're smart, and they're the next generation of leaders in health care. Thirty-three college students and recent graduates were accepted into the 2015 Leadership Development program at Adventist Health System. The group attended orientation on May 18, and will soon begin serving and learning across the organization's 44 hospital campuses.

"Our main focus for having a leadership development program is to introduce top talent to the organization," said Norman Miles, AHS's director of Leadership Development. "We are in the business of developing and preparing servant leaders who will model our mission, vision and values."

More than 100 applications were reviewed during the competitive selection process that focused on a combination of quantitative and qualitative factors such as academic performance, community service, leadership potential, and an interest in the health care industry. Those who were selected for summer internships will spend 12 weeks gaining hands-on experience in areas such as supply chain, human resources, and patient financial services. Meanwhile, two-year residents will focus on building the leadership and technical skills essential for managing a team and guiding strategies in their specialty areas.

"This program serves as a vehicle to launch them into a career in health care," Miles said. "It's an awesome opportunity for interns and residents to develop a deeper understanding of the nuances within the industry, hone their skill sets, and develop a context around what they need to do to prepare for a career in health care."

Michael Hernandez is one of four new residents entering the program this year. He recently graduated with a degree in computer science from Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Michigan, and has spent his past two summers interning in AHS's information technology department.

"My main draw to the residency program was those past experiences. The people whom I worked with were very friendly. They really made me feel like I was part of the team, and I learned a lot," Hernandez said. "There's also the spiritual aspect; the mission of the organization is very much in line with my own views and beliefs."

As a resident, Hernandez plans to pursue a master's degree and learn more about how the different departments within health care work together. In the future, he says, he would like to serve as a regional clinical liaison – or maybe even a chief information officer.

That dream is not far-fetched, as many previous interns and residents have gone on to assume key leadership positions within the organization, including Brian Adams, president/CEO of Florida Hospital Tampa; Jeff Villanueva, vice president of Florida Hospital Kissimmee; and Jillyan Shelton, assistant vice president at Florida Hospital East Orlando to name a few.

"The Leadership Development Residency and Internship programs have helped ensure that we have a strong pipeline of emerging Christian leaders who are able to assume various roles within the organization," Miles said.
"This year's group is diverse, dynamic, bright and energetic, and I believe that they will be able to make many meaningful contributions to the world of health care in the years to come."

College Students Build 153 Sq. Ft. Tiny House

on May 23, 2015

At Andrews University students built this 153 square foot tiny house on wheels.

They call it the Bay View Tiny House. It's built on a 18' x 8'-6" trailer. And it has a 6' x 8' loft and an additional 4' x 8' loft.

Carey Carscallen, Dean of Architecture, Art & Design tells us about the Bay View Tiny House.

It is made of standard 2×4 stud construction, all cedar siding, and plywood paneling on the interior. It is insulated with spray foam insulation, R15 in the walls and R30 in the ceiling.

All cabinetry is custom built by our students. It has a 2 burner electric cooktop, provisions for electric heat, propane hot water, regular flush toilet, standard 32” x 32" fiberglass shower, and pedestal sink in the bathroom. Black and grey water sewers can be separated. Windows are from Pella. The roof is a membrane, professionally installed.

This was a 2 semester class in our School of Architecture. The purpose of the class was to give our students the opportunity to learn hands-on design-build skills.

We are located in Michigan, so we chose to do a Tiny House – two in fact – that we could build in our warehouse and not be affected by the long cold winter.

As you can see, the students took this opportunity to demonstrate their design skills, and learned a lot about construction in the process. It is our plan to sell the Tiny House and repeat the process next school year.

Our best new home rests comfortably on the edge of the Atlantic Ocean in Biddeford, Me. Go to FineHomebuilding.com/houses for more photos and a video tour of this and our other award-winning homes.

Designed by architect Caleb Johnson of Biddeford, Maine, our best new house succeeds admirably in balancing traditional expectations and contemporary demands. The house sits on the north side of Granite Point, a chunk of ledge that juts out into the North Atlantic; as a result, the house is deeply influenced by its maritime surroundings. Its traditional cross-gable form is modernized with unexpected curves-a gentle one shapes the front of the house-and discreetly placed openings that frame only the best views. A curve also defines the ocean-facing back deck, which arcs along the shoreline. Inside, an easy-going floor plan emphasizes informality, with the arrangement of rooms based on the family's living habits rather than a prescriptive formula of how a house should be laid out. Architectural details, including locally turned white-oak columns and glulam beams that support the living-room ceiling, are integral to the structure rather than pasted-on decoration. For us, this added up to an award-winning new home that challenges cherished architectural assumptions without abandoning its local vernacular.

Fast-growing Seventh-day Adventists our neighbors - Goshen News: Lifestyles

By MARLIN JESCHKE Columnist

Christianity is, of course, a global faith, but even many denominations within Christianity are global. The January-February issue of Christianity Today lists the largest ones — the Catholic Church, Eastern Orthodoxy, Anglicanism and The Assemblies of God. That last one shouldn’t surprise most of us who have heard of the phenomenal growth of Pentecostalism in modern times.

It was the mention of the fifth largest denomination worldwide that surprised me — the Seventh-day Adventist church! These are our neighbors, after all, who operate nearby Andrews University, whose 90.7-FM radio station with its classical music is the main preset on my car radio. I’ve visited their Pioneer Memorial Church Sabbath service more than once, even shopped at the vegetarian supermarket at the entrance to their campus, though not on a Saturday, of course. What is this global denomination that thrives under the radar for most of us?

They’re called Adventists because it began with a prediction of the second advent of Christ in 1843 and 1844 made by a Baptist preacher called William Miller. His allegedly failed prediction was called “the great disappointment,” but some Adventists salvaged Miller’s prediction by claiming that some eschatological event had indeed occurred in 1844, albeit in the heavens — that Christ had entered a heavenly sanctuary and had begun an investigative judgment, all with a view to his eventual return to earth.

The Adventists became Seventh-day Adventists when one of their New England ministers became convinced — and persuaded his fellow Adventists — that Christians should gather for worship on the seventh day, rather than on Sunday. That conviction seemed to carry with it an interest in other Old Testament observances and laws, about foods, for example.

By the time the church got formally established in 1863, with a membership of 3,500, its center of gravity had moved to lower Michigan, where it established health centers and began to produce health foods. It was John Harvey Kellogg, a Battle Creek Adventist physician, who created a breakfast cereal called cornflakes, making Kellogg’s a familiar breakfast food label for kids across America and for their moms who shop the cereal aisles of our supermarkets.

In their attention to foods, Adventists soon promoted avoidance of not only alcohol and tobacco but also of coffee, tea, cola — anything with caffeine. In fact, Adventists for the most part went vegetarian. Polls have shown a significant resultant decrease in cancer and heart disease among Adventists and longer life expectancy than the average American — 10 years longer!

To many observers it would seem somewhat odd, this apparent shift from interest in an other-worldly subject such as the imminent return of Christ to a quite this-worldly subject such as health foods. But these doctrines and practices add up to an overall church identity sufficiently attractive to generate loyalty in members of the church and to win converts.

For some time in the first half of the 1900s the evangelical world held Seventh-day Adventists at arm’s length because of many of their beliefs and practices. Some evangelicals went so far as to call them a “cult,” not to be counted among the family of Christian denominations. But by the later 1900s evangelicals found Adventists to be an acceptable form of Christianity. At present the picture has been turned around. Some Adventists are getting apprehensive about their church becoming too enamored with evangelicalism and losing its distinctives.

In any case, Seventh-day Adventists have gained one million members a year for the past 10 years and now number 18.1 million around the globe, landing them in the fifth spot of largest Christian denominations in the world.
Rahel Schafer Update

Rahel Schafer, Assistant Professor of Hebrew Bible in the Department of Religion and Biblical Languages, received her PhD this month from Wheaton College in Biblical and Theological Studies, with an emphasis in Old Testament. Her dissertation title is: "You, YHWH, Save Humans and Animals": God’s Response to the Vocalized Needs of Non-Human Animals as Portrayed in the Old Testament.

Dr. Schafer and her loved ones also appreciate your prayers at this time, as she remains in hospital with extensive tibia and arterial damage following an accident last week.

Dr. James Jeffery Retires

Dr. James Jeffery, Dean of the School of Education, is retiring after a 42-year career in Adventist education, 16 years of which were spent at Andrews University. Jeffery came to Andrews in 1999 from Canadian University College in Lacombe, Alberta, where he had been Dean of Professional Studies and Chair of the Education Department. He taught in the Graduate K-12 Leadership program for three years before becoming Dean, a position which he has held for 13 years, making him the longest-serving dean in the history of the School of Education.

Jeffery has led the School of Education through two NCATE accreditation visits, in 2004 and 2011. "The last accreditation visit was especially meaningful," he says, "because the accrediting team...wrote in their findings that they could not find any areas for improvement. This only happens to about 10% of the 1,700 colleges and universities that are accredited by NCATE." In the last six years, Jeffery also had the opportunity to serve on the Board of Examination for NCATE, visiting colleges and universities across the United States.

"Some of my best memories," Jeffery says, "have been working with staff and faculty who are professionals and extremely talented." He has been thrilled to work in "a strong and respected academic program," one that – for four years straight – ranked as the top teacher preparation program in the state of Michigan.

"Dr. Jeffery was a good leader," says Dr. Annabelle Lopez, a professor in the School of Education. "He gives us the freedom to explore what would work to get results." She recalls how Dr. Jeffery always took coworkers' ideas seriously and spent time with them individually to help them realize their goals.

Jeffery says that more than anything, his experience at Andrews has taught him to be patient and slow to judge. "God is in control," he says, "and I should not run ahead of his leading."

While he will miss spending time with his coworkers and innovating new ways for School of Education to improve, Jeffery is excited for his retirement plans. He and his wife plan to spend their summer at a cottage in Prince Edward Island, Canada, and their winters visiting their sons, daughters-in-law, and grandchildren in Alberta, Tennessee, and California. More immediately, Jeffery is looking forward to sailing his 35 ft sailboat down the St Lawrence River to Eastern Canada this August. "This has been a dream for a long time," he says, "and now I finally have the time to do it."
Shari Smoot Graduates with BS in Liberal Arts

"When I came to work for Andrews University in July 2012 finishing my degree was the furthest thing from my mind. I thought it would take me 30+ hours and at my age that was too daunting of a task! Within a year, at the suggestion of my boss, Dr. David Faehner, I checked into getting a BS in Liberal Arts and discovered it was do-able. After 30 years and returning to college 3 times I finally graduated on May 3, 2015. Many thanks to Dr. Faehner for encouraging me and providing the time away from my work so I could finish. Also, thanks to all the many, many people who also encouraged me and supported me including my children for picking up the slack at home. I'm so thrilled to have this degree and to have finished with high marks."

-Shari Smoot
Welcome Gabe St. Clair!

Jason St. Clair, (Patron Services Manager, James White Library) and Becky St. Clair (Media Communications Manager, IMC) happily announce the arrival of their son, Gabriel "Gabe" Nolan St. Clair, born Sunday, March 29. He is well-loved on by both his parents and his two older sisters, Kayla (5) and Lizzy (3).
Steve Yeagley Earns DMin

Steve Yeagley, Assistant Vice President for Student Life, received a Doctor of Ministry degree from Andrews University on May 3, 2015. He specialized in youth and young adult ministry. His dissertation, "Teaching Media Literacy as a Pastoral Skill for Seventh-day Adventist Seminary Students," was granted the 2015 Doctor of Ministry Excellence in Research Award.

Yeagley is pictured here with his wife Manuela, who is weeks away from completing her PhD in practical theology at King's College, University of London.

Death of Betty Colleen Weakley

Betty Colleen (Collard) Weakley, 86, of Berrien Springs, passed away at her home on Saturday, May 9, 2015.

She was born on November 5, 1928 in Berrien Springs to Glenn J. and Mary H. E. (Kilpatrick) Collard. Betty grew up with her brother, Robert "Bob", and sister, Kathryn Joyce "Babe", in a house that their father built on the northwest corner of Garr and Snow Roads. At the age of four, Betty begged to go to school with her brother and sister at Burke School, so her mother decided to let her attend. The teacher would let Betty sit on her lap during classes. Burke School was a one-room school that was across the road from their home. After finishing elementary school, Betty attended Emmanuel Missionary College Academy, now Andrews Academy. During her academy years Betty learned to play one of her favorite musical instruments, the saxophone. She continued to play the instrument throughout her life. Betty graduated from Emmanuel Missionary College in 1949, with an Associate degree in Secretarial Science.

In the early years she worked as the Administrative Secretary for the Vice-President of Kellogg's Company in Battle Creek, Michigan. After her children had begun grade school, she became the Administrative Assistant for Continental Specialty Advertising and Sporting Goods Company in Berrien Springs. On May 12, 1949, Betty married John Edward Weakley on the national radio show "Bride and Groom" in Hollywood, California. During their early married years, John and Betty lived in a number of places including: an apartment in Battle Creek, a small house on the southwest corner of Garr and Snow Roads, and a house on Main Street in Berrien Springs. In 1955 John began building a new house one mile west of Berrien Springs on Snow Road in

Lakeland Offers Breastfeeding Class in Niles
A breastfeeding class for mothers and fathers will be presented on Monday, June 15, from 6:00 to 8:30 p.m., in the Meeting Room at Lakeland Hospital, Niles, 31 N. St. Joseph Avenue.
Lakeland Health’s certified lactation consultant will discuss breastfeeding from delivery room to postpartum, the use of breast pumps, weaning, returning to work, and other topics.
In addition to enhancing the bond between mother and child, studies have shown that breastfeeding offers many health benefits. For a new mother, breastfeeding leads to less postpartum blood loss, helps with postpartum weight loss, and lowers the risk of ovarian and breast cancer. For the baby, breast milk enhances cognitive development, helps to fight illnesses, and is more easily absorbed by the digestive system than formula.
The cost for the breastfeeding class is $30, due at the time of registration. For more information or to register, call (269) 556-2808 or (866) 260-7544.
Visit www.lakelandhealth.org or find Lakeland Health on Facebook or Twitter for more classes and events.

Free Class for Women in Chemotherapy
(ST. JOSEPH) – Lakeland Health will offer “Look Good...Feel Better,” a free two-hour class for women who are currently undergoing chemotherapy, at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, June 8, at the Marie Yeager Cancer Center at the Lakeland Health Park, 3900 Hollywood Road, St. Joseph.

Presented in cooperation with the American Cancer Society and the National Cosmetology Association, this program is designed to teach beauty techniques to female cancer patients to help restore their appearance and enhance their self-image. Licensed cosmetologists provide cosmetic advice, information on skin care, and guidance on the use of wigs, turbans, and scarves. Each participant receives a free make-up kit valued at $300 from the Personal Care Products Council.

Future “Look Good...Feel Better” seminars will be held the second Monday of each month at the Marie Yeager Cancer Center. Class size is limited, and pre-reregistration for this free program is required. For more information or to register, call (269) 556-7197.

God's Hands 4 Kids

A big thank you to each of you who contributed or supported in any way the end of the school year collection drive benefiting foster kids. The dorm students gave generously. There was the girl who shared from her precious store bag collection and the guys who donated suits that will be used for job interviews and other such occasions by aged out of foster care guys. There was the snow pants with the tags still on and the super warm coats, the boots and dress shoes and so much more. Thank you to the deans of all of the dorms and their staff who were great support and very helpful in so many ways. A special thank you to Transportation for the use of the trailers and to Jamie Wright for giving of himself and working tirelessly hauling the trailers and unloading them as well. May God richly bless each of you as you care for the least of these by giving of yourselves. God's Hands 4 Kids gh4k.org

House for Sale: 622 Lynn Drive

Do you like that very contemporary "IKEA Look?" Then this 3BD/2BA open style and impeccably maintained house with vaulted ceilings is made for you! This home was completely remodeled in 2007 with very nice quality materials including beautifully finished "real" hardwood floors. The huge windows let in an abundance of light and look out onto the professionally landscaped yard (lilacs, dogwoods, rhododendrons) that backs up to private wooded land that is landlocked--so NO neighbors in back. The large fenced in backyard has a wonderful deck located right under a shady maple tree just waiting for you to come and relax. The .28 acre lot also has an extremely well built 12x10 shed with concrete floor. Home is located within walking distance of downtown Berrien Springs and Andrews University.
Kitchen appliances and washer and dryer included.

Looking for a babysitter

I am currently looking for a reliable, caring, fun and active babysitter for my 4 year old girl, ASAP! I also have a 8 year old boy who is currently in school and will attend summer camp majority of the time, but will be home certain days during the summer. The hours needed will actually be every other week from 8:30am - 4pm on Mon. and Tues. The reason being is because of my husband's schedule changes weekly. The pay is $9/hr. We are currently located in Berrien Springs and you must have your own transportation!! If you are interested or have additional questions, please call 269-944-9911. Please leave a voicemail and I will get back to you as soon as possible!!!

Christian Nanny / Personal Assistant

My name is Tanya and I am a single Seventh-day Adventist Christian mother. I am looking for a full time - indefinate nanny and / or personal assistant position. I have several reputable references available upon request. I am CPR (Infant/Child/Adult) / AED certified and I know advanced first aid. I have been laid off from my full time job with the hospital that I have been with now, going on 5 years, due to budget cuts. So, now I am looking to do something else full time, that I absolutely love and that is still caring for and helping people, but more on a personal level - as a nanny and / or personal assistant.

Childcare Experience: First and foremost, I am a mother. I have worked as a nanny for a good friend of mine, who is also the medical social worker at the hospital that I used to work at and she has a family of 5, plus a pet. I have also been babysitting on and off for the past 14+ years, as my schedule allowed. I helped with Vacation Bible School (VBS) for 3 summers and I also helped out a daycare for a summer.

Misc. Related Experience: I have also cared for all kinds of pets. Most recently, I helped the Chaplain and his wife with their animals as they traveled and they have 3 dogs, 5 cats, 6 chickens, and 2 horses. I also have a cat myself. And I grew up doing farm hand work. I have also cleaned houses (Vacation rentals, cottages, your basic house).

Personal Assistant Experience: I worked as a virtual personal assistant for 2+ years for a gentleman who had a house in New York and a house in Florida and traveled to California often. I helped him do research for a book he was writing (I have mastered Microsoft Office), I helped him balance his books (I know basic accounting - Accounts Payable / Receivable), I handled his emails, did occassional online shopping for him, made travel arrangements (car rental, flights, hotel reservations, dinner reservations, etc.), send letters, made phone calls, set up app’t.’s, etc.

If you or someone you know is looking for a good nanny and / or personal assistant and are interested in meeting with me, please let me know. At this time, I am leaving an email where I can be reached, providing you leave a number, where you can be reached.

Thank You and Blessings.

Running Partner Wanted
I am looking for a running partner here in Berrien Springs. I am not an expert, i just started running two months ago but i want to keep running and i find it more motivating when i have a buddy to run with. I usually run 10 KM; I'm trying to go for the 12th. I run five days per week at 7.30 p.m., but i can be flexible with that. It takes me about 1 hour and 30 minutes to come back to the initial point. This is my route (blue dotted line), it's pretty easy and fun but if you have another route it's fine; just let's run.

My name is Isaac and my phone is 269-338-5879. Text me or email me to agree in details. Thanks!
