The Economic Club

Tickets are available for General David Petraeus at The Economic Club of Southwestern Michigan on Wednesday, June 17, 2015. Please let me know if you and/or your students want tickets -- compliments of University Advancement. (First come, first served. Limited availability.)

Gen. David Petraeus
David Petraeus, U.S. Army General (Ret.) and Former CIA Director
We will close the 2014-15 season with four-star General David Petraeus whose distinguished military career spanned more than 37 years and culminated with six straight commands (five of which were in combat). He’s widely credited with dramatically reducing the violence in Iraq and for halting the Taliban’s momentum in Afghanistan when he led operations there.

Following his military service, Petraeus directed the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) overseeing significant achievements in America’s global counterterrorism campaign, pursuing an initiative to increase worldwide intelligence coverage and bringing about the new Economic Security Center.

Over his career, Petraeus has received numerous U.S. military, State Department, NATO and United Nations awards and has been decorated by 12 foreign countries. Today he serves as chairman of the Global Institute of KKR, is a visiting professor of public policy at CUNY’s Macaulay Honors College and is a Judge Widney Professor at the University of Southern California.

Our evening with him will provide deeper insights into the global challenges facing us today.

Faculty Contribute to "Church and Society"

By: Melodie Roschman

At 800 pages, Church and Society: Missiological Challenges for the Seventh-day Adventist Church is a weighty book both literally and intellectually. Produced and published by the Andrews University Department of World Missions, the book aims to use a combination of sociological research and Biblical perspective to "help Christ's church to understand how this 'world' and the people who live in it think, feel, and react to some of the issues they face in their daily lives, and how to bring peace, justice, and compassion to the society that surrounds our homes, churches, and communities."

With this goal in mind, Church and Society features 31 essays on globally relevant and often "uncomfortable" topics divided into five sections: Lifestyle and Health Issues, Development Issues, Human Rights Issues, Religion and Public Life, and Family and Domestic Issues (7). The 34 authors, hail from North America, Europe, Africa, and Asia and include church administrators, professors and researchers, doctors, lawyers, and non-profit leaders. They approach their respective topics, which include such pertinent issues as euthanasia, homelessness, prostitution, Christian political involvement, and economic exploitation in a diverse fashion. Some, such as René D. Drumm's "Interaction and Angst: The Social Experiences of Gay and Lesbian Seventh-day Adventists" or "Domestic Violence in the Pews: Equipping the Church to Recognize and Address Spouse Abuse," by René D. Drumm, Marciano Popescu, and Laurie Cooper, employ mainly case studies and excerpts from interviews. Others, including Evelyn Kissinger's "Obesity: A Global Concern" and Héctor Luis Díaz's "Sociocultural and Biblical Foundations for Working with Immigrants and Refugees," rely more on statistics and data analysis.

All 31 essays, however, share a common format that splits the text into three sections: description/analysis of the topic, biblical discussion, and missiological application. Each article also includes a series of discussion questions for educators, church leaders, and individual readers, as well as suggestions for further reading and a full bibliography. The essays also share a common conviction that sociological and anthropological research is useful – even necessary – to the directives of a worldwide, mission-minded church. While some will claim that "preaching the simple gospel" is all that is required for effective ministry, general editor Rudi Maier notes that the social sciences “need not call into question a minister’s faith, hope, and commitment,” but rather can be “the mechanisms for determining a better way of doing ministry” that understands individual situations in nuanced and perceptive ways (5).

"As an editor," explained Rudi Maier to Adventist Today in a December 2014 interview, "I didn’t have a specific agenda for this book except to help people to understand some of the painful issues people face inside and outside the church...I hope that they will be treated with the same respect and compassions that Jesus gives in response to each one of us and our needs."

Church and Society is currently available for sale through the Department of World Mission at Andrews University for $49.50, with a discounted rate of $25 per book on orders of 10 or more.
June Board Report
By Melodie Roschman

In the face of decreased enrollment and budget cuts, President Niels-Erik Andreasen emphasized Andrews University’s continual role as a leader in Adventist education at the board briefing held on Monday, June 1, 2015. The report followed a special two-part board meeting, which addressed financial issues in the morning and academic affairs the same afternoon.

The president began by reviewing the following new appointments and changes of roles:

New staff appointments:
- Linette Escarfullery, Customer Relationship Management Administrator
- James Gigante, Video & Course Editor, Adventist Learning Community
- Jonathan Jaeger, Program/Web Developer, ITS Admin Systems
- Eric Koester, Digital Systems Manager, Adventist Digital Library
- Korissa Mattson, Health Enrollment Coordinator, SHP Dean
- Brandon Lowry, Senior Windows Administrator, ITS Servers and Network
- Seth Wiedemann, Desktop Network Administrator, ITS Servers and Network

New/changed faculty appointments:
- Gregory Morrow, Assistant Professor of Public Health, Nutrition & Wellness
- Elizabeth Muhlenbeck, Associate Professor of Management, Marketing & Information Systems
- Carmen Plott, Associate Professor of Nursing
- Melissa Poua, Instructor of Medical Laboratory Science
- Tammy Shilling, Associate Professor of Speech-Language Pathology & Audiology
- Jason St. Clair, Head of Patron Services, James White Library

Emeriti:
- Douglas Jones, professor emeritus

As is customary, Andreasen noted each item that had been addressed by the board, highlighting important details or complications. He described the President’s Report, a summary of the year’s events, and the Provost’s Report, a recounting of triumphs from schools across the University.

Following this was the President’s Council, which reviewed new programs at Andrews and discussed student finance. This was a comprehensive information session, Andreasen noted, "and accounts for more [time] than anything else.” Next was a report from the vice president for University Advancement, David Faehner, regarding institutional development. Faehner reported that last year $13 million was given to Andrews University in major gifts. Andreasen also took this time to note that a new Health and Wellness director has been named: Dominique Wakefield, assistant professor of health & exercise science at La Sierra University.

As was true of last year’s June report, the most pressing concern for the University is low enrollment, and the accompanying financial setbacks. “The long and short of it,” said Andreasen, “is that the applications and admissions numbers for new students and transfer students generally are as good as any year in the recent past. The problem is we still don’t know if these students who are admitted will actually matriculate.” While there’s been an increase in enrollment for graduates and the School of Distance Education, student fees aren’t as high for those programs. “These increases don’t translate readily to increased revenue,” Andreasen noted, “so that’s a challenge.”

Because of last year’s lower than expected enrollment, tuition income fell short, resulting in a year-end budget shortfall of approximately three million dollars. Andreasen emphasized that this was not the fault of University departmental spending, noting that spending actually came in $50,000 under budget.

“We are bracing ourselves for a drop,” Andreasen announced, noting that the administration is taking responsible steps to prevent a second year with a deficit. The board passed a budget for the 2015–16 school year that anticipates a decrease in enrollment of 5 percent instead of the customary 2 percent, translating to budget cuts of nearly $3 million.

“I think enrollment in the near future will be developed through new programs—in physical therapy, in business, in architecture,” said Andreasen. “I think that while we may not get all the undergraduate students back quickly, we may find we can replace them with graduate students and specialized undergraduates.”

Andreasen then noted the departure of University attorney Brent Geraty and the sale of two plots of University-owned land before ending on a note of encouragement, the affirmation of the University’s reputation for academic excellence. The GC Education Department had reached out to him: “They wanted to talk to Andrews about its future engagement with the world church.” Lisa Beardsley, education director, “told us to hang in there. You are needed,” he said. “We don’t really have another Andrews anywhere.” He concluded: “[O]ur reputation, because of many, many years of training people here...to do something important in the world...is still how to do education in the church.”

Williams-Smith to Present on Book

By Melodie Roschman

Rachel Williams-Smith, chair of the Andrews University Department of Communication, will be discussing her book "Born Yesterday: The True Story of a Girl Born in the 20th Century, but Raised in the 19th" on Wednesday, June 10, at 6:30 p.m. in the church hall of Sacred Heart of Mary Catholic Church, Dowagiac. Copies will be available for sale at the event, and refreshments will be served.

The book tells the story of Williams-Smith’s upbringing in an isolated southern environment in which her extremely conservative religious family lived as if it were the 1800s. She recounts her journey to normalcy and a new life, and the way that her faith in God helped her overcome familial dysfunction and religious extremism to become a balanced and happy adult. “I am looking forward to a chance to talk to people in the community,” says Williams-Smith, “and my hope is that I can inspire someone to have faith and go on.”

The book recently received the Associate Church Press’s Award of Excellence for a non-fiction work. The book trailer, which can be viewed here, won the Award of Excellence in PR/Marketing Video. Copies of “Born Yesterday” can be purchased at the Adventist Book Center in Berrien Springs, from Parable Christian Bookstore and Forever Books in St. Joseph, Michigan, as well as online from Amazon and Barnes and Noble.

Today, Williams-Smith holds bachelor, master’s and doctoral degrees, and is currently completing a second doctorate. She is married to a local professional tailor, and together they have four children.
Tiny House, Big Ideas

By Melodie Roschman

If you drive up to the Architecture Building on the Andrews University campus, you'll see an unusual structure in the parking lot. Fenced off by orange cones, sitting atop four wheels, with large windows and a sloping roof, it seems like a strange hybrid of truck, motor home and shed. What it actually is, however, is perhaps more amazing.

Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design, and the five graduate students in his Design/Build class, have built a fully-functional and livable miniature house, measuring a mere 148 square feet, on an 18-ft. flatbed trailer.

Traditionally, the construction class takes an annual trip to Bolivia to build for people there, but Carscallen wanted a project that all of his students could participate in during an entire school year. "It's harder in Michigan," he explains, "because of the winters. And how do you go out on a job site every day when you have a full day of classes? With this, we could work on it in the warehouse year round, and the weather wouldn't affect it." He pitched the idea, and received a grant from Physics Enterprises to build two miniature houses with his class. One of those houses—nicknamed "The Shed"—remained in the warehouse unfinished at the end of the semester, but the other—"Bay View"—was completed and beautiful in time for graduation.

The key to building a tiny house, Carscallen explained, is planning and research. The students had free rein on the project, proposing different designs and making most building decisions themselves. They had to learn all of the skills that one would for a regular house, including wall construction, siding, paneling, insulation, plumbing and wiring, all while working to use space efficiently and ingeniously.

The result is a space that manages to feel airy and filled with light, not cramped or claustrophobic. The "main floor" features a table for two; a kitchen area with a full sink, 10-cubic-foot refrigerator, small cooktop, and ample counter space; a hollow staircase with built-in storage cubbies; and a full-sized bathroom with a flush toilet, pedestal sink and shower. Above are two lofts—one that holds a queen bed, and one that can serve as a lounge area, second bedroom or storage space. Much like a traditional mobile home, it only requires simple electric and sewage hookups, as well as propane for the water heater. While not as easily transported as an RV—it weighs over 8,000 lbs.—the house can be pulled by a truck and moved from place to place, making it ideal for long vacations or cross-country moves.

The project was such a success that Carscallen has decided to repeat it in future years, which is why they're selling the "Bay View" house for $30,000. In the future, they'd like to be able to turn enough profit to provide

In an interview with Spectrum, Carey Carscallen, Dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design at Andrews University, talks about the recently completed Tiny House Project and what it means for the Andrews community and beyond.

Question: What exactly is a “tiny house”?

Answer: A tiny house is a place for people to live who want a simpler life. You don’t need a lot of land or personal possessions, so it allows you to scale back and live more economically.

What first got you interested in tiny houses? I heard a rumor that you did your thesis on tiny houses, is that correct?
I did my thesis on the small house, which isn’t the same as a tiny house but they are similar. Living with a smaller footprint has been a long-held interest of mine, and I wanted to have something that’s hands-on in house construction for our students, so this was a good fit. We have classes in furniture design, and model making, and things like that, but to do something that’s directly related to architecture and to have something that the students can do clear through the process – from design to construction – was the goal. In Michigan, with our extreme winters, to do it on a regular building site is problematic. Doing a tiny house on a trailer, in the warehouse, where they could work year-round just made sense. And the students can still learn most of the aspects of house construction that way. Of course, you don’t do concrete foundations and footings, and that kind of thing, but from there on up, it’s the same.

Can you describe a bit about the students’ process for designing and constructing the tiny house?

We started out having them do research, which included zoning information and the legal issues surrounding owning a tiny house. What kind of restrictions there are for moving and transporting one, and all of those different aspects. Then, when it came to the design, the students had pretty much free rein. Building it on a trailer restricted the footprint, so they had to keep that in mind. They also had to work within the parameters of keeping it able to pull behind a truck without a special permit. Within these guidelines, they were able to have complete control of the design.

Did you run into any challenges or surprises that you weren’t expecting while the students were working on it?

Not really any surprises, but some of the challenges were that the students tended to want to build before they finished designing. Then they’d run into problems that they had to work through. Whereas if the design had been there first, it would have been more efficient in the construction process. The designs ended up being very original and well done as far as the space use and aesthetics.

I’ve heard there’s actually two tiny houses, but only one of them is completed, correct?
Right. This was a project for our fifth year students who are in their final year of the program completing their Master of Architecture degree. So, we had the students split into two groups and each group designed and built a tiny house. The first tiny house is complete and we’re going to finish the second one over the summer. We ended up with two very different designs. The one that’s finished used more traditional house-building technique with stud walls, whereas the other one used structural insulated panels, which is plywood with Styrofoam sandwiched between. That means the walls and ceilings are all just big panels and that gave the students a lot of challenges as far as attachments and wiring. Each tiny house had such a different process; it was a great opportunity for the students to learn about various construction techniques.

What are your plans for the tiny houses, especially the one that’s already complete?

The one that’s complete is currently for sale for $30,000. As soon as we finish the other one, we’ll be putting it up for sale too. We really want to sell them and put the money back into the project and do it again with the new group of fifth year students next year.

You posted several photos of the completed tiny house on the School of Architecture’s Facebook page, and it has been getting quite a bit of attention on social media ever since. I noticed several people have been suggesting donating the tiny house to the homeless. Is that something you’d consider, or something that’s even feasible at this point?

That was part of our talk right from the beginning. We wanted to build one to give away and build the other to cover the costs of both. Then repeat that process. But when we did our initial investigations in Benton Harbor, Michigan, which is an impoverished town a short distance from Andrews, to see how and where they might be used, we found that Benton Harbor, like many other towns, doesn’t have zoning that permits year-round use of a tiny house. Typical zoning requires a minimum lot size and a certain square footage for the house. And of course, tiny houses will never meet that minimum square footage, which is usually around 1,000 sq. ft. There’s going to have to be an adaptation to the ordinances before we can continue with that plan.
How many square feet is the completed tiny house?

The footprint is 148 sq. ft., so not anywhere near the 1,000 sq. ft. that the zoning laws require. Sometimes you are allowed to treat a tiny house like an RV and park it in your backyard, but you still can't live in it year-round. It can't be your primary residence.

Do you know which states are tiny house friendly?

It's not so much states as cities. There are a few around the country. Portland, Oregon and Milwaukee, Wisconsin are a couple, and there are more and more cities that are beginning to allow for tiny houses.

I noticed one of the other comments online was suggesting a tiny house community on the Andrews campus, as an alternate housing solution for students. Does that run into the same zoning issues as you have in Benton Harbor?

You do run into similar issues, though I think it would be most feasible on a private university campus because we're zoned differently which gives quite a bit of latitude. At this point, we haven't made that proposal to the university yet, but it is something I'd like to do. However, that would require that we come up with additional funding to cover the costs of that endeavor. Right now, we just don't have that kind of money. All of our plans will be greatly aided by selling these first two tiny houses.

What are some more ways you'd like to see this project evolve in the coming years?

One way would be that it doesn't always have to be a tiny house on wheels. It could be a tiny house that we take and put on a piece of property somewhere. Or, something that's done for some other type of purpose but that's still on the same scale as a tiny house, like creating a mobile mission clinic out of a shipping container. There are many possibilities available with this type of concept.

Tell me more about the mobile mission clinic idea. How would that work, and is it something that's already being utilized in some places?

As far as I know, it’s not currently being used, at least not the way I’m thinking about it. I was talking to one of our friends who is a medical missionary in Chad, Africa and the idea is that we’d convert two shipping containers – one as a clinic and one as a house. Then, you decide which village you’d like to start working in, and in one day you can set up both your house and clinic. Typically, when you go into a new village, there’s nothing there for the missionary. You have to build it up. So this way, you go in with your house and clinic ready to set up, and you’re providing services from day one.

I’ve heard that the School of Architecture has received several distinguished awards over the years. Can you tell me a little bit about these awards?

We have an Urban Design Studio class for our fifth year students, and for the last 15 years or so, we’ve done a project for a community. The communities have been everywhere from Alaska, to the Bahamas, to Honduras, and several local communities as well. One year we did the master plan for the university. We submit these projects to the Congress for New Urbanism, and we’ve received five national awards over the years. We also won one award from the State of Michigan.

What do you feel sets the Andrews University School of Architecture apart from other architecture programs that are out there?

Part of it is our curriculum. It is well-rounded, and it’s laid out in a sequence that takes the students from knowing absolutely nothing to being very well-versed in architecture. Another aspect of our program that makes us unique is that we teach our students that every aspect of architecture is valuable. It’s not just the design that’s going to make them a star that matters. Every piece of design has value. At a lot of schools it’s all about the “wow” factor of the design, but we’re not that way. Our students are very capable designers, but our focus is on the bigger picture. We try to instill in our students the importance of civic responsibility and we integrate community service and service to the church throughout the projects we do. Even the tiny house is another way to make the community and living
It sounds from what you’re describing as though Christian values are entwined throughout the program and what you’re teaching the students.

Yes, absolutely. In everything that we teach, we try to instill that in the students and create that atmosphere. When we go on our Europe tour and our Waldensian tour, each day of those trips, we tie in aspects of faith that relate directly to architecture. Students come on the Waldensian tour and see that these people lived in these simple little stone huts on the mountainside and were killed because of their faith and it makes you wonder, would I be willing to die for my faith? It has a profound effect on our students.

What else would you like people to know about either the Tiny House Project specifically or the School of Architecture in general?

We want people to know about the great things our School of Architecture students are doing, both while they’re here and once they graduate. One of our recent grads, Caleb Johnson, just won the national Best New Home award by Fine Homebuilding Magazine. Another alum, Chantel Atkinson, had her house design featured on the most recent cover of New Homes Magazine.

As for the Tiny House, for people who are interested in supporting this project, they can do so on the Andrews giving site. And of course, anyone interested in purchasing the Tiny House can contact me at 269-471-6003 or ccarey@andrews.edu.

33 College Students Accepted into Adventist Health System's Leadership Development Program

Interns and residents will gain hands-on experience in areas such as supply chain, information systems, patient financial services, and more.

5/27/2015 | By Rainey Turlington

They're young, they're smart, and they're the next generation of leaders in health care. Thirty-three college students and recent graduates were accepted into the 2015 Leadership Development program at Adventist Health System. The group attended orientation on May 18, and will soon begin serving and learning across the organization's 44 hospital campuses.

“Our main focus for having a leadership development program is to introduce top talent to the organization," said Norman Miles, AHS's director of Leadership Development. "We are in the business of developing and preparing servant leaders who will model our mission, vision and values."

More than 100 applications were reviewed during the competitive selection process that focused on a combination of quantitative and qualitative factors such as academic performance, community service, leadership potential, and an interest in the health care industry. Those who were selected for summer internships will spend 12 weeks gaining hands-on experience in areas such as supply chain, human resources, and patient financial services. Meanwhile, two-year residents will focus on building the leadership and technical skills essential for managing a team and guiding strategies in their specialty areas.

“This program serves as a vehicle to launch them into a career in health care," Miles said. "It’s an awesome opportunity for interns and residents to develop a deeper understanding of the nuances within the industry, hone their skill sets, and develop a context around what they need to do to prepare for a career in health care."

Michael Hernandez is one of four new residents entering the program this year. He recently graduated with a degree in computer science from Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Michigan, and has spent his past two summers interning in AHS's information technology department.

“My main draw to the residency program was those past experiences. The people whom I worked with were very friendly. They really made me feel like I was part of the team, and I learned a lot," Hernandez said. "There's also the spiritual aspect; the mission of the organization is very much in line with my own views and beliefs."

As a resident, Hernandez plans to pursue a master's degree and learn more about how the different departments within health care work together. In the future, he says, he would like to serve as a regional clinical liaison – or maybe even a chief information officer.

That dream is not far-fetched, as many previous interns and residents have gone on to assume key leadership positions within the organization, including Brian Adams, president/CEO of Florida Hospital Tampa; Jeff Villanueva, vice president of Florida Hospital Kissimmee; and Jillyan Shelton, assistant vice president at Florida Hospital East Orlando to name a few.

"The Leadership Development Residency and Internship programs have helped ensure that we have a strong pipeline of emerging Christian leaders who are able to assume various roles within the organization," Miles said.
"This year's group is diverse, dynamic, bright and energetic, and I believe that they will be able to make many meaningful contributions to the world of health care in the years to come."

Blood Drive Set for June 17 at Lakeland Hospital
Michigan Blood is hosting a community blood drive on Wednesday, June 17, from 11:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. in the Large Meeting Room at Lakeland Community Hospital, Niles.

Michigan Blood is an independent, non-profit blood bank that is the provider of choice for Michigan hospitals, including Lakeland Health facilities. Community blood drives benefit local patients, including those receiving treatment for trauma, surgery, those with bleeding disorders, and those undergoing treatment for cancer. According to Michigan Blood, one out of every seven people entering the hospital will need blood, and 4.5 million Americans would die each year without blood transfusions.

Any healthy person age 17 or older (or age 16 with permission from a parent or guardian) and weighing at least 110 pounds is welcome to donate blood. Participants should plan on 45 to 60 minutes for the entire donation process, including a brief pre-donation health screening and a snack/rest period following donation.

Lakeland Introduces New Eight-Week Weight Loss Program
The Lakeland Comprehensive Weight Loss Center has launched the LEAN (Lifestyle Enhancement through Activity and Nutrition) program, an eight-week course designed for anyone interested in weight loss and creating lasting lifestyle changes. The first set of classes will take place on Wednesdays, beginning June 10 and concluding August 5, from 6:00 to 7:00 p.m. in the Community Room at Lakeland Medical Suites, Niles. located at 42 N. St. Joseph Avenue. Additional dates and locations are in the process of being scheduled.

LEAN participants will learn about nutrition, exercise, and well-being from health experts, including a psychologist, certified personal trainer, registered dietitian, and nurse practitioner. The program will utilize a small group setting to allow attendees to support and encourage one another.

"In LEAN, we will challenge participants each week to try new skills such as reading nutrition labels, keeping food journals, making healthy choices at grocery stores and restaurants, and finding forms of exercise that they enjoy," said Katelyn Dinkgrave, Registered Dietitian, Lakeland Health. "We'll also tackle the issues that can lead to regaining weight, from emotional eating to losing motivation."

Cost for the full eight-week LEAN program is $80, and space is limited to 12 participants. At the conclusion of the eight-week program, attendees will have the option to attend one class each month at no additional cost to help maintain their new healthy lifestyle.

For more information about LEAN or to register, call (269) 687-4673 or (877) 467-3858. Visit www.lakelandhealth.org or find Lakeland Health on Facebook or Twitter for more classes and events.

Zimbabwe Mission Trip

Andrews University Alumna Vimbo Zvandasara-Zhou will be traveling to Zimbabwe for 3-weeks this June for a mission trip through ADRA Zimbabwe.

She is currently a 5th grade teacher in the US, but was born in Zimbabwe, and her heart aches to help children in Zimbabwe build a brighter future through education.

She already has her ticket, and she will be traveling there to work with the team of workers already in Zimbabwe to rebuild a school in eastern Zimbabwe, dig a borehole (well for water), and aid in an evangelistic series that is going on there.

Vimbo is currently collecting donations for this big mission until June 7th!

For more information and updates on the trip, click here.

E-mail tinevimbomissions@gmail.com with any questions, or to get information to donate offline.

Lakeland Offers Breastfeeding Class in Niles

A breastfeeding class for mothers and fathers will be presented on Monday, June 15, from 6:00 to 8:30 p.m., in the Meeting Room at Lakeland Hospital, Niles, 31 N. St. Joseph Avenue. Lakeland Health’s certified lactation consultant will discuss breastfeeding from delivery room to postpartum, the use of breast pumps, weaning, returning to work, and other topics. In addition to enhancing the bond between mother and child, studies have shown that breastfeeding offers many health benefits. For a new mother, breastfeeding leads to less postpartum blood loss, helps with postpartum weight loss, and lowers the risk of ovarian and breast cancer. For the baby, breast milk enhances cognitive development, helps to fight illnesses, and is more easily absorbed by the digestive system than formula.

The cost for the breastfeeding class is $30, due at the time of registration. For more information or to register, call (269) 556-2808 or (866) 260-7544.

Christian Nanny / Personal Assistant Available

My name is Tanya and I am a single Seventh-day Adventist Christian mother. I am looking for a full time - indefinite nanny and / or personal assistant position. I have several reputable references available upon request. I am CPR (Infant/Child/Adult) / AED certified and I know advanced first aid. I have been laid off from my full time job with the hospital that I have been with now, going on 5 years, due to budget cuts. So, now I am looking to do something else full time, that I absolutely love and that is still caring for and helping people, but more on a personal level - as a nanny and / or personal assistant.

Childcare Experience: First and foremost, I am a mother. I have worked as a nanny for a good friend of mine, who is also the medical social worker at the hospital that I used to work at and she has a family of 5, plus a pet. I have also been babysitting on and off for the past 14+ years, as my schedule allowed. I helped with Vacation Bible School (VBS) for 3 summers and I also helped out a daycare for a summer.

Misc. Related Experience: I have also cared for all kinds of pets. Most recently, I helped the Chaplain and his wife with their animals as they traveled and they have 3 dogs, 5 cats, 6 chickens, and 2 horses. I also have a cat myself. And I grew up doing farm hand work. I have also cleaned houses (Vacation rentals, cottages, your basic house).

Personal Assistant Experience: I worked as a virtual personal assistant for 2+ years for a gentleman who had a house in New York and a house in Florida and traveled to California often. I helped him do research for a book he was writing (I have mastered Microsoft Office), I helped him balance his books (I know basic accounting - Accounts Payable / Receivable), I handled his emails, did occassional online shopping for him, made travel arrangements (car rental, flights, hotel reservations, dinner reservations, etc.), send letters, made phone calls, set up app't.’s, etc.

If you or someone you know is looking for a good nanny and / or personal assistant and are interested in meeting with me, please let me know. At this time, I am leaving an email where I can be reached and if there is interest, I will be happy to give you a call, providing you leave a number, where you can be reached.

Thank You and Blessings.
