In a recent ranking by Best Degree Programs of the best small colleges (under 4,000 students) in the United States for STEM degrees, Andrews University tied for second place. Worcester Polytechnic Institute in Worcester, Massachusetts also ranked second, preceded only by the Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, New Jersey. The 30 finalists were graded based on three criteria: research opportunities, awards & recognition, and variety of STEM majors—programs falling into the categories of Science, Technology, Engineering and Math.

Kelsey Fox, who created the list, notes in her entry for Andrew that the university has sought since its beginnings to "combine serious scholarship, quality research, and practical Christianity," noting that Andrews is the only Seventh-day Adventist institution recognized as a national university.

Keith Mattingly, dean of the College of Arts & Sciences, explains that Andrews officially considers the Agriculture, Biology, Chemistry, Engineering & Computer Science, Math and Physics programs to be the components of the university's STEM program. "Andrews is the only SDA institution in North America," he notes, "with an Agriculture program," something which contributed to the high ranking.

Though Andrews does not officially classify it as a STEM degree, Fox also notes Andrews's position as the only institution on the list to offer a Department of Aviation. "Students interested in planes and flying can choose to study Aviation Flight, Aviation Maintenance, or specialized mission aviation training," she writes, "or just partake in flight lessons conveniently located at the campus airport.

“We appreciate receiving affirmation for our long-standing and sustained commitment to excellent science education," says Mattingly.

“We were ecstatic to hear that we were rated so highly,” agrees Andrews STEM Coordinator David Stratton. “We live in an increasingly technology-driven world, and if Andrews does not step up to the plate…then that missional component is missing from the scientific community.”

Journey Ministries, a 20-member a capella group from Andrews University, will be representing the University at the 2015 General Conference Session in San Antonio, Texas. They will be giving two performances: at 12 p.m. on Friday, July 10, at the Lila Cockrell Theatre in the Henry B. Gonzalez Convention Center and on Saturday, July 11, at 6:30 p.m. in the San Antonio Alamodome.

“We are really excited that we have been accepted to sing at the 2015 General Conference Session. It’s a wonderful opportunity to share our ministry with the world church. Whenever we sing, people are touched by our music, so we look forward to reaching an international audience,” says Wanda Cantrell, manager and sponsor.

“I’ve always been dazzled by…the large gathering of people who share the same religious denomination,” says Givan Hinds, a Journey member. “I am excited not only to be performing before an audience of thousands alongside many amazing and accomplished international musicians, but also for an opportunity to witness the outcome of the intense decision making that will occur at this session.”

Journey is currently in the process of fundraising the $20,000 necessary to cover the costs of their trip. A generous donor has agreed to match any donations they receive, so they encourage supporters to give whatever they can in the remaining days before their departure. To donate, individuals can either click the “donate” button on Journey’s website, journeymi.com, or they can visit their GoFundMe page: www.gofundme.com/journeymi.

Andrews & SWAU Singers to Collaborate at GC

June 24, 2015

The Andrews University Singers will be collaborating with the Southwestern Adventist University Singers for two concerts during the upcoming General Conference Session in San Antonio Texas.

The University Singers are a choral group sponsored by the Andrews University Department of Music and directed by Stephen Zork, associate professor of music. The Southwestern Adventist University Singers are a choral group conducted by Jonathan Wall, chair of the Department of Music and a former student of Zork.

The concerts, which are free and open to the public, will be held at 2 p.m. on July 10 and 11 at St. Joseph Cathedral, an historic and architectural San Antonio landmark. The theme is “Celebrating Jesus Christ’s Ministry to the Underserved, the Sick, and the Needy.” They will also feature Charles Reid, an opera tenor and associate professor of voice in the Andrews University Department of Music and the Southwestern Adventist University String Quintet, conducted by Marc Elysee, assistant professor of music.

Wall emphasized, “I feel strongly that this concert is a community concert. We know many Adventists will attend but I am dedicated to…inviting the San Antonio community.”

In a further emphasis of the General Conference Session’s celebration of unity in diversity, there will be several joint numbers including the chorale from Central Adventist University of Sao Paulo in Brazil as directed by Andrews alum Marcelo Martins, as well as the Unionaires from Union College, directed by Dan Lynn, professor of music.

“We share a passion for the highest level of choral artistry and the mission of Jesus Christ,” says Zork. “We’re doing music that’s international in scope and celebrates servitude from a Christian perspective. We hope to add an artistic element to San Antonio’s image of the Adventist Church, seeking not just to entertain, but to move people and reach them wherever they are.”

Tiny House, Big Ideas

Agenda | June 18, 2015

If you drive up to the Architecture Building on the Andrews University campus, you’ll see an unusual structure in the parking lot. Fenced off by orange cones, sitting atop four wheels, with large windows and a sloping roof, it seems like a strange hybrid of truck, motor home and shed. What it actually is, however, is perhaps more amazing.

Carey Carscallen, dean of the School of Architecture, Art & Design, and the five graduate students in his Design/Build class, have built a fully-functional and livable miniature house, measuring a mere 148 square feet, on an 18-ft. flatbed trailer.

Traditionally, the construction class takes an annual trip to Bolivia to build for people there, but Carscallen wanted a project that all of his students could participate in during an entire school year. “It’s harder in Michigan,” he explains, “because of the winters. And how do you go out on a job site every day when you have a full day of classes? With this, we could work on it in the warehouse year round, and the weather wouldn’t affect it.” He pitched the idea, and received a grant from Physics Enterprises to build two miniature houses with his class. One of those houses—nicknamed “The Shed”—remained in the warehouse unfinished at the end of the semester, but the other—“Bay View”—was completed and beautiful in time for graduation.

The key to building a tiny house, Carscallen explained, is planning and research. The students had free rein on the project, proposing different designs and making most building decisions themselves. They had to learn all of the skills that one would for a regular house, including wall construction, siding, paneling, insulation, plumbing and wiring, all while working to use space efficiently and ingeniously.

The result is a space that manages to feel airy and filled with light, not cramped or claustrophobic. The “main floor” features a table for two; a kitchen area with a full sink, 10-cubic-foot refrigerator, small cooktop, and ample counter space; a hollow staircase with built-in storage cubbies; and a full-sized bathroom with a flush toilet, pedestal sink and shower. Above are two lofts—one that holds a queen bed, and one that can serve as a lounge area, second bedroom or storage space. Much like a traditional mobile home, it only requires simple electric and sewage hookups, as well as propane for the water heater. While not as easily transported as an RV—it weighs over 8,000 lbs.—the house can be pulled by a truck and moved from place to place, making it ideal for long vacations or cross-country moves.

The project was such a success that Carscallen has decided to repeat it in future years, which is why they’re selling the “Bay View” house for $30,000. In the future, they’d like to be able to turn enough profit to provide tiny homes to underprivileged residents of Benton Harbor at little or no cost. Another suggested idea would be building a small cluster of tiny homes as affordable alternative student housing on campus.

While living in a house this small takes adjustment, Carscallen says those who take part in the “tiny house movement” see this lifestyle as its own reward. Living in such a small space combats materialism, he explains. “If you accumulate and accumulate stuff…you need a bigger house to store it in, then you fill that. It’s a vicious cycle.” Furthermore, tiny houses are immensely affordable and sustainable. Instead of going deeply into mortgage debt and spending long hours on house upkeep, tiny house owners can focus on different interests. “Especially if you’re interested in missions,” he says, “in doing things beyond yourself, it saves you from being a slave to the bank.”

Overall, Carscallen says, the tiny house project was an incredible success that they look forward to repeating in the future. “We launched it not really knowing how it was going to turn out, but the students really liked it…and it was eye-opening for them.”

To learn more about the tiny house project, you can visit their website: http://www.theshedtinyhouse.com or view a time-lapse video of the construction at: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=WqyUmLUT9ig&feature=youtu.be.

In the face of decreased enrollment and budget cuts, President Niels-Erik Andreasen emphasized Andrews University's continual role as a leader in Adventist education at the board briefing held on Monday, June 1, 2015. The report followed a special two-part board meeting, which addressed financial issues in the morning and academic affairs the same afternoon.

The president began by reviewing the following new appointments and changes of roles:

New staff appointments:
- Linette Escarfullery, Customer Relationship Management Administrator
- James Gigante, Video & Course Editor, Adventist Learning Community
- Jonathan Jaeger, Program/Web Developer, ITS Admin Systems
- Eric Koester, Digital Systems Manager, Adventist Digital Library
- Korissa Mattson, Health Enrollment Coordinator, SHP Dean
- Brandon Lowry, Senior Windows Administrator, ITS Servers and Network
- Seth Wiedemann, Desktop Network Administrator, ITS Servers and Network

New/changed faculty appointments:
- Gregory Morrow, Assistant Professor of Public Health, Nutrition & Wellness
- Elizabeth Muhlenbeck, Associate Professor of Management, Marketing & Information Systems
As is customary, Andreasen noted each item that had been addressed by the board, highlighting important details or complications. He described the President’s Report, a summary of the year’s events, and the Provost’s Report, a recounting of triumphs from schools across the University.

Following this was the President’s Council, which reviewed new programs at Andrews and discussed student finance. This was a comprehensive information session, Andreasen noted, “and accounts for more [time] than anything else.” Next was a report from the vice president for University Advancement, David Faehner, regarding institutional development. Faehner reported that last year $13 million was given to Andrews University in major gifts. Andreasen also took this time to note that a new Health and Wellness director has been named: Dominique Wakefield, assistant professor of health & exercise science at La Sierra University.

As was true of last year’s June report, the most pressing concern for the University is low enrollment, and the accompanying financial setbacks. “The long and short of it,” said Andreasen, “is that the applications and admissions numbers for new students and transfer students generally are as good as any year in the recent past. The problem is we still don’t know if these students who are admitted will actually matriculate.” While there’s been an increase in enrollment for graduates and the School of Distance Education, student fees aren’t as high for those programs. “These increases don’t translate readily to increased revenue,” Andreasen noted, “so that’s a challenge.”

Because of last year’s lower than expected enrollment, tuition income fell short, resulting in a year-end budget shortfall of approximately three million dollars. Andreasen emphasized that this was not the fault of University departmental spending, noting that spending actually came in $50,000 under budget.

“We are bracing ourselves for a drop,” Andreasen announced, noting that the administration is taking responsible steps to prevent a second year with a deficit. The board passed a budget for the 2015–16 school year that anticipates a decrease in enrollment of 5 percent instead of the customary 2 percent, translating to budget cuts of nearly $3 million.

“I think enrollment in the near future will be developed through new programs—in physical therapy, in business, in architecture,” said Andreasen. “I think that while we may not get all the undergraduate students back quickly, we may find we can replace them with graduate students and specialized undergraduates.”

Andreasen then noted the departure of University attorney Brent Geraty and the sale of two plots of University-owned land before ending on a note of encouragement, the affirmation of the University’s reputation for academic excellence. The GC Education Department had reached out to him: “They wanted to talk to Andrews about its future engagement with the world church.” Lisa Beardsley, education director, “told us to hang in there. You are needed,” he said. “We don’t really have another Andrews anywhere.” He concluded: “[Our] reputation, because of many, many years of training people here…to do something important in the world…is still how to do education in the church.”

Rachel Williams-Smith, chair of the Andrews University Department of Communication, will be discussing her book “Born Yesterday: The True Story of a Girl Born in the 20th Century, but Raised in the 19th” on Wednesday, June 10, at 6:30 p.m. in the church hall of Sacred Heart of Mary Catholic Church, Dowagiac. Copies will be available for sale at the event, and refreshments will be served.

The book tells the story of Williams-Smith’s upbringing in an isolated southern environment in which her extremely conservative religious family lived as if it were the 1800s. She recounts her journey to normalcy and a new life, and the way that her faith in God helped her overcome familial dysfunction and religious extremism to become a balanced and happy adult. “I am looking forward to a chance to talk to people in the community,” says Williams-Smith, “and my hope is that I can inspire someone to have faith and go on. “

The book recently received the Associate Church Press’s Award of Excellence for a non-fiction work. The book trailer, which can be viewed here, won the Award of Excellence in PR/Marketing Video. Copies of “Born Yesterday” can be purchased at the Adventist Book Center in Berrien Springs, from Parable Christian Bookstore and Forever Books in St. Joseph, Michigan, as well as online from Amazon and Barnes and Noble.

Today, Williams-Smith holds bachelor, master’s and doctoral degrees, and is currently completing a second doctorate. She is married to a local professional tailor, and together they have four children.

At 800 pages, Church and Society: Missiological Challenges for the Seventh-day Adventist Church is a weighty book both literally and intellectually. Produced and published by the Andrews University Department of World Missions, the book aims to use a combination of sociological research and Biblical perspective to “help Christ’s church to understand how this ‘world’ and the people who live in it think, feel, and react to some of the issues they face in their daily lives, and how to bring peace, justice, and compassion to the society that surrounds our homes, churches, and communities.”

With this goal in mind, Church and Society features 31 essays on globally relevant and often “uncomfortable” topics divided into five sections: Lifestyle and Health Issues, Development Issues, Human Rights Issues, Religion and Public Life, and Family and Domestic Issues. The 34 authors, hail from North America, Europe, Africa, and Asia and include church administrators, professors and researchers, doctors, lawyers, and non-profit leaders. They approach their respective topics, which include such pertinent issues as euthanasia, homelessness, prostitution, Christian political involvement, and economic exploitation in a diverse fashion. Some, such as René D. Drumm’s “Interaction and Angst: The Social Experiences of Gay and Lesbian Seventh-day Adventists” or “Domestic Violence in the Pews: Equipping the Church to Recognize and Address Spouse Abuse,” by René D. Drumm, Marciano Popescu, and Laurie Cooper, employ mainly case studies and excerpts from interviews. Others, including Evelyn Kissinger’s “Obesity: A Global Concern” and Héctor Luis Díaz’s “Sociocultural and Biblical Foundations for Working with Immigrants and Refugees,” rely more on statistics and data analysis.

All 31 essays, however, share a common format that splits the text into three sections: description/analysis of the topic, biblical discussion, and missiological application. Each article also includes a series of discussion questions for educators, church leaders, and individual readers, as well as suggestions for further reading and a full bibliography. The essays also share a common conviction that sociological and anthropological research is useful – even necessary – to the directives of a worldwide, mission-minded church. While some will claim that “preaching the simple gospel” is all that is required for effective ministry, general editor Rudi Maier notes that the social sciences “need not call into question a minister’s faith, hope, and commitment,” but rather can be “the mechanisms for determining a better way of doing ministry” that understands individual situations in nuanced and perceptive ways.

“As an editor,” explained Rudi Maier to Adventist Today in a December 2014 interview, “I didn’t have a specific agenda for this book except to help people to understand some of the painful issues people face inside and outside the church…I hope that they will be treated with the same respect and compassions that Jesus gives in response to each one of us and our needs.”

Church and Society is currently available for sale through the Department of World Mission at Andrews University for $49.50, with a discounted rate of $25 per book on orders of 10 or more.

Andrews University class takes advantage of 'tiny houses' trend

Kristin Bien

Most people have bathrooms bigger than 150 square feet. But a growing movement -- called the "tiny house movement" -- has some people living with less. And a local University is taking advantage of the trend through a new architecture class.

More from WSBT.com

Architecture students at Andrews University spent the past two semesters building tiny houses. From the outside they look like very pretty garden sheds but the tiny houses are actually... Houses. One house is finished, the other is still in the works. The houses were over the course of two semesters. The idea is to give students hands on construction experience.

"It is one thing to design a house, put it on paper. But when you actually build something you gain a lot more knowledge and they actually can understand -- those lines, what they mean," says Carey Carscallen, Andrew's University Dean of Architecture, Art and Design.

The tiny house is built on an 8'x18' trailer and includes about 158 square feet of living space.

Students are still working on the other tiny house.

The school invested about $15,000 in each tiny house -- they hope to sell them and then reinvest the money to pay for this project again. There are already people inquiring about buying them.

There are some hurdles for people who want to live in a tiny house. Carscallen says banks don't recognize these types of homes as a true house so financing is difficult. And since most city ordinances require houses to have 1-thousand square feet, they are classified as Rvs and most city's don't allow a person to live in an RV year round.

Vera Vivian Clayton Jones Dunigan passed away on June 22, 2015 at White Oaks Assisted Living in Lawton. She was born in Brice, Missouri, the second daughter of William H. and Mollie Massie Clayton. Her sisters, Zelma Medley Pumphrey, Wilma Atkinson, and Nadine Clayton, all preceded her in death. Vera graduated from Lebanon High School in Missouri, Missouri State College, and Andrews University in Michigan. Her teaching career spanned 34 years in the states of Missouri, Michigan, and Florida. She often said there was never a day she didn't want to go to work! She was married to Shelvey Jones of Windyville, for 22 years until his untimely death at age 49. Her second marriage to Bill Dunigan continued into their retirement to Florida for 27 years until his death. Vera was active in the Seventh-day Adventist Church wherever she lived. Traveling was fun for Vera. Trips to the Pacific NW, Mexico, Hawaii, and England were highlights. The last several years she appreciated the activities at White Oaks Assisted Living and the "pretty little girls who wait on us hand and foot!" Her greatest joy was her friends and family. She is mourned by her six children: Barbara (Chuck) Randall - a member of the Andrews University Board of Trustees - Ronald (Teresa) Jones, Deryl (Shirley Jones), Vivian (Steve) Scott, Randy (Cindy) Jones, and Cathie (Rand) Dunigan Heazlitt. She is also loved by 13 grandchildren, 19 great-grandchildren, a brother-in-law, uncle, nephews, nieces, and many friends. Her life will be celebrated and memories shared at 4 p.m. Saturday, June 27, in the Paw Paw (Michigan) Seventh-day Adventist Church, and also at 4 p.m. Monday, June 29, at the Lebanon (Missouri) Seventh-day Adventist Church, with interment at 3 p.m. in Mount Rose Memorial Park in Lebanon.
