Dear AVLN Friends,

As you may know, when I moved from working at Berrien RESA to working at Andrews University, I haven't had time to teach online or coordinate courses for AVLN. In addition, the AVLN courses are moving to the new Adventist Learning Community. I hope to teach an online course again for you there sometime soon.

In the meantime, you might be interested in a class I'm teaching online for Andrews University this summer:

Social Media and You: Managing Your Digital Footprint

Study best practices, ethical issues and critique a variety of viewpoints on the use of social media. Explore and evaluate your current digital footprint and update your personal and professional use of social media and online tools appropriately. Build a personal learning network to extend your network beyond your university experience. Choose to focus on your field and create a professional online presence to accompany your resume; or focus on sharing your faith online; building a social media presence for your hobby; or building the social media presence for your organization.

Dates: July 6 - 31, 2015
Credit: 1 semester credit
Cost: $150 per credit plus $50 distance fee

Register Online under Seize the Summer

As a teacher, you might find this class useful in preparing to teach your students to be good digital citizens; or to create a social media presence for your school or church.
I wish you the best in your continued service to Adventist education.
