'GREEN SABBATH' PRODUCES ECO-CHRISTIANS

"Green Sabbath was rejuvenating and refreshing after getting into the 'green' mentality. The song that played on my mind was 'How Great Thou Art' especially on our walk to church in the morning," said Marilyn Le Feuvre, Communication leader at Horley Gatwick Adventist church.

As part of an initiative to get church members more focused on caring for our environment, Sabbath, 31 March was dubbed 'Green Sabbath' across the British Isles. Many churches were enthusiastic about getting involved and fully embraced the 'green' – even if it wasn't their colour!

Horley Gatwick church were preparing on the Friday, setting up fruit and water for those walking to church in their green coloured outfits the next morning. They also decided to decorate their church in green to depict the extent to which we should be caring for our environment. Their motto for the day was 'Reduce, Reuse, Recycle and Rejoice!' In addition to their collective 65 miles walked, the church collected clothes for one special 9-year-old boy and for the nearby Gatwick Men's Detention Centre.

On the other side of the M25, the Beckenham Hope Community church members walked to church in their tracksuits and black 'Hope Community SDA Youth' T-shirts with the aim to 'meet at least one unchurched person' during the journey. Pastor Simeon Esson came to church in his tracksuit, along with his congregation, and discussed how we can look after the earth that God blessed us with, basing his message around Revelations 11:18, "It is time to destroy all who have caused destruction on the earth." (NLT)
In Cambridge and Haverhill around 60 people walked and rode to church and back to their cars including one young man who participated in his wheelchair!

Leytonstone church did more than walk in their green 'Leytonstone SDA' T-shirts. They also came together on Saturday evening to combine 'Green Sabbath' with keeping active, a combination that could only lead to Zumba!

Zumba instructor, Giselle De Siun-Morris, led three sessions stating, "I do lots of different things and it's great, this was the best place I've ever been to!" This enthusiasm was seen on the participants' faces as well. Each person, from the age of 4 to 70, thoroughly enjoyed the exercise class, so much so that Leytonstone plan for a repeat session.

"The original concept of Green Sabbath was to promote exercise, fitness, and health, by walking to church, but the community would also benefit by having more parking spaces," states Pastor Colin Stewart – originator of the 'Green Sabbath' initiative. He is delighted with the response but sees it as just the beginning for a celebratory year that includes the Queen's Diamond Jubilee and the staging of the 30th Olympic Games. He says, "Millions of people are already being inspired by the Games to become fit and healthy. Adventists, having such a prominent health message, should lead the change." That is certainly true for Stratford church – the nearest Adventists to the Olympic stadium – who are transforming their building to serve the community during the Olympics – and who recognise that 'on foot' may be their only way to church during the Olympic period.

The Olympic Outreach team are now in the forefront of continuing the strong efforts in promoting fitness and health for ourselves and evangelism as we prepare for the biggest opportunity to use both avenues this summer in the UK. Look out for more information and the next Green Sabbath this summer, and visit the live-uk.org website to see how close members can move towards a 1 million mile goal by the end of the year.

A selection of photos from various 'green' churches can be seen on the BUC website.

NUMBERS MATTER AT THE VITALITY SHOW  [SEC Communications] Also a SECmedia Video Report.

2012 marked the ninth year in a row that the South England Conference's Health Ministries department held a stall at the Vitality Show, at Earl's Court. The stall was manned from Thursday, 22 to Sunday, 25 March by professional health volunteers led by Elsie Staple, South England Conference Health Ministries director. Between them they successfully gave away thousands of pieces of literature and carried out hundreds of health tests.

The stall was set up so that attendees could have blood tests, blood pressure checks, advice on their results and more. One table was simply dedicated to displaying spiritual health books such as Steps to Christ, When God Said Remember and Creation Health. "We're not only thinking about the physical component, we are thinking about the spiritual component as well," commented Elsie.

Gloria Simon, a nurse from Fulham church, assisted in the 'advice' section. She stated, "We meet different people with different illnesses, with different problems," she shared, "working with the NHS gives me a better understanding of what these people need."
The Health Ministries stand sat comfortably among the others at the show, such as Zumba Fitness and Vegan Ice cream. However, Elsie explained, "The most important thing for us is that we meet many people. This show caters for 50-60,000 people and we only give out about 3000 pieces of literature – but our focus is evangelism. Mind, Body, Soul."

The show may already be over for this year but the team is already planning the 2013 exhibition.

A SECmedia video report of the event is also available.

MEN MATTER [Edith Samambwa, Irish Mission Health Ministries Sponsor]

Men matter! Certainly the 110+ men who gathered for the very first Men's Health Weekend hosted by the Irish Mission Health Ministries department discovered. Meeting in Dublin, 30 - 31 March the event was the first of its kind in the British Union Conference. Men from all over the Irish Mission come together to share, learn and be inspired to live healthy, purposeful lives to the glory of God. Beginning Friday evening in Dublin church, Dr Chidi Ngwaba, the South England Conference Men's Ministries director and a Lifestyle and Motivational Speaker, challenged the men to see God's plan for their lives and to realise that this plan is linked to their physical and emotional well-being. 'Prevention' was the buzz word for the evening as he led a discussion on preventing lifestyle diseases.

On Sabbath the many attendees discovered that God's plan is to move them from good men to great men! Meeting at the Maldron Hotel, Tallaght, Dr Ngwaba reminded them that God allows 'stuff' to happen '4' us and not '2' us. He illustrated how pain and difficult circumstances can be the tools used by God to make men great, showing how American President, Abraham Lincoln's life was littered with prior successive failures in the political arena and personal tragedy. He however never let that deter him or make him bitter. "Will you become bitter or better?" was the question Dr Chidi presented during the moving worship service. According to Pastor Tony O'Rourke from Newmarket on Fergus, the meeting was "very encouraging" adding that "Dr Chidi gave a very informative and inspiring presentation." This feeling was echoed by Nana Agyemang from Longford church who also added that "it was an absolutely refreshing weekend, a wonderful convergence of faith, health and well-being."

During the afternoon the men candidly debated cancer and heart disease, parenting and leadership in the home, sexuality, loneliness and stress. Friendships were made, barriers broken and the seed sown for greater dialogue and openness among men and within the church. Irish Mission President, Pastor David Neal, who gave the morning keynote speech, also rendered his services as the day's organist and happily mingled with some of the conference's younger participants. He stated that, "Proverbs 27:17 gives a piece of wisdom that is so true as I saw this last weekend, 'As iron sharpens iron, so one man sharpens another'."

Through the excellent ministry of Dr Ngwaba Pastor Neal saw generations of men worshipping and sharing together in honest discussion. "Old and mature men from the country, mixing and mingling with the rising generation of the church youth – it was beautiful to be a part of." One man decided to dramatically change his life as a result of this event, and praise the Lord for that.

Dr Ngwaba's afternoon presentation provoked many to evaluate their health ethos, and to reflect on issues such as emotional health for men, fellowship of men in the church and with each other, communication with the women in their lives and mentoring. Vuyo Ntwantwa who had come all the way from Cork with his three sons Sipho, Spe and Atini, commented that he had been so blessed and was glad he had brought the boys. Atini, 15 years old and the youngest of the boys remarked that it was "great to hear the testimonies of the older youth and to see their openness about some things considered a taboo to talk about in normal church services."

The weekend culminated in a sumptuous vegan dinner prepared by chef Willy Emira from Dublin church and hosted by the Irish Mission Health Ministries sponsor Edith Samambwa. In the intimate service a heartfelt testimony was heard which perhaps summed up what the weekend had been about. Joe Mhondiwa, the Cork church Men's Ministries leader, told of his 'Best Friend' who had stayed with him through the ups and downs of his spiritual journey until his conversion in 2009. In a moving declaration he stated that he now knows that he 'belongs to God' no matter what happens. As Joe finished off by singing what he said has become his song since January 2012, 'Take my life and let it be consecrated Lord to thee' others in the room joined in, quietly affirming their commitment to God. Dr Ngwaba finished the evening by encouraging all men, young and old to dream big for God and give their all, body and soul to the cause of Christ.

For the Irish Mission Health Ministries sponsor the evening service affirmed why such events are worth the effort and why this was only the first of many future men's events in the Emerald Isle – because men do matter!

INDIA CALLS FOR SEC PRESIDENT [Katie RamharackSingh]

It is a long flight from London to India, but worth every air mile for Pastor Sam Davis, President of the South England Conference. Starting Sabbath, 17 March he led a Youth Week of Prayer and an evening campaign in Narsapur, in the Indian state of Andhra Pradesh.

"I was being driven down the road, toward the Flaiz Memorial Higher Secondary School of Seventh-day Adventists, and I see a big billboard with my face on it!" said Pastor Davis. "I was shocked, but it turns out the organisers of my visit had put up posters and billboards across the towns and streets in the nearby communities to advertise the evening meeting."

Pastor Davis spoke to 1,000 young people, from the age of 5 to 21, in the Flaiz Secondary School each day for their morning worship. Then, in the evenings, he spoke to a mixed group of over 2,500 students and adults that had gathered from the surrounding areas for his campaign themed 'Hope for the World'.

Pastor Christian Ragu, Principal of Flaiz Secondary School, explained that 75 of the children that attended the school were from the nearby orphanage. Now back in England, Pastor Davis reflected that there was a real hunger for the Word in the Hindu people. "People would travel from even an hour away on the rough roads for the campaign, which would finish around 11 pm," he stated, "then approach me afterwards for individual prayer for the needs in their lives."

Hundreds responded to the appeal made on the last night and the challenge now lies with those in Narsapur to follow up with those people that want to dedicate their life to Christ.
"I really had a blessed week," concluded Sam, "Additionally, speaking to the 1,000 young people in India has made me especially aware of the hunger our young people, in the UK, have for the Word of God too."

LUNCH WITH THE QUEEN [SEC Communications]

"Are we seeing the Queen today, Miss?" The questions came from students at Hyland House Adventist School each week leading up to Thursday, 29 March – the day they were to have lunch with the Queen at the beginning of her Diamond Jubilee Tour around the United Kingdom.

Hyland House School had been asked by the Borough of Waltham Forest to join in the royal celebrations that marked the beginning of festivities commemorating Queen Elizabeth II's 60-year reign, by attending a special lunch at Waltham Forest Town Hall.

When the day finally arrived, Mrs Gina Abbequaye, Headteacher of Hyland House School, commented, "The children and staff have been looking forward to this. It's a once in a lifetime opportunity. The children have had history lessons about the Queen and have even designed their packed lunches to proudly represent the school on the day."

Nursery to Year 6 lined up beautifully for their walk from Hyland House School all the way down to Waltham Forest Town Hall, which was already guarded by heavy security who required passports on entry! Fortunately, none of the children or teachers posed a threat to the Queen. They were allowed in and soon made themselves comfortable awaiting the royal arrival.

"He's been on his best behaviour because he is really excited to see the Queen," stated Shomari Williams when asked how her son, Josiah, felt about the day. "Every Thursday he asked me if we were going to see the Queen today…when I finally told him it was next week, he was so excited for the whole week!"

The whole school shared Shomari's excitement. This was evident by the way they waved their flags in celebration as the Queen was driven through the Town Hall's gates. One child was clearly in her element as she exclaimed, "There she is! She's wearing blue! She's coming our way!"

Although the children didn't get to shake the Queen's hand, they were really pleased with their experience of seeing our monarch pass by, only a few metres in front of them. The school even made an impact on one of the policemen at the Town Hall who commented, "Your children were waiting so quietly and patiently, and looked really smart in their uniforms. I was getting impatient and I'm almost 40!"

The school is now looking forward to celebrating the Jubilee Weekend with a 1940s themed party.

RESURRECTION HOPE [Victor Hulbert]

As I drove past the front of Newbold College earlier this week I just had to stop and take a photo. The sun was shining through the spring blossom and the red tulips at the base of the cherry tree just accentuated even more the beauty of the white blossom. Spring is a great time for photography. Everything appears bright and new. The colours are more vivid. Green shoots, catkins, apple blossom – or even the first bluebells that are just starting to appear a few weeks ahead of schedule.

There may be drought ahead, or perhaps the British weather, in its quirkiness, is simply storing up the rain for the Olympic season, but certainly at the moment I've been rejoicing in the warmth and newness of life represented by spring.

This has also been something special for my 90-year-old mother-in-law. She has just recently become a part of our family, moving from Portugal to Bracknell in the midst of winter. Now she finds herself sitting in the arbour in our back garden and supervising my wife as she tends her precious plants. It is also her first time to admire the daffodils and other flowers that make a British spring special. Having a 90-year-old living with you, complete with a pharmacy full of medicines and regular visits to the doctor, brings home that even within the joy represented by the new life of spring, there is also an inevitability of fragility and end of life scenarios. Perhaps that is why the larger Christian community puts some emphasis into Lent, taking a step back to look at ourselves, and into Holy Week, focusing on those events that led up to Jesus' death on a cross, His rest in the grave, and His glorious resurrection. It is those events that break the natural cycle. As the apostle Paul puts it: "Where, O death, is your victory? Where, O death, is your sting?" [1 Corinthians 15:55 NIV]

Springtime reminds me of resurrection – and the theme of resurrection is very strong throughout the writings of the apostle Paul. It was essentially important to him that we do not serve a dead god, a false religion without power. In Romans he identifies Jesus as "appointed the Son of God in power by his resurrection from the dead." [Romans 1:4] He tells the Christians in Corinth who were starting to doubt the resurrection, "And if Christ has not been raised, our preaching is useless and so is your faith." [1 Corinthians 15:14] As I watch the spring buds bursting forth into bloom I am reminded that Paul calls Jesus the "first fruits of those who have fallen asleep." [Vs 20]

The resurrection is more than a celebration. It is a proof. It is a witness. It gives hope. It gives imperative for the Christian. Paul concludes his great chapter on the resurrection: "Thanks be to God! He gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my dear brothers and sisters, stand firm. Let nothing move you. Always give yourselves fully to the work of the Lord, because you know that your labour in the Lord is not in vain." [Vs 57-58]

I saw resurrection in action last Sabbath. Preaching in Stratford church I met a young man whose life has been changed by the power of the Gospel – and by the technology of social media. He wrote to me in December 2011 with questions on belief and doctrine. I replied and we corresponded for about a week. Then he went silent. Last Sabbath he put his hand up in the middle of my sermon and asked to speak. He gave his testimony. Our simple correspondence last December had caused him to change. He emailed me last night. "It was very good to see you last Sabbath. Proof that technology is a very good way to evangelise. Once you had responded to my email I had to take action of faith and attend church. I don't know everything … but at this point I am quite sure this is the right Church."

Resurrection! Life! Joy! With an email like that, spring is not just in the air, it is in every step I take.
