AMBITIOUS REGENERATION PLANS VOTED FOR NEWBOLD COLLEGE
On 10 February 2014 the Newbold College of Higher Education Board of Governors voted to regenerate the College over the next 18 months.

"The regeneration model calls for an estimated increase of 100 full-time equivalent students over the next two academic years (2014/2015 and 2015/2016)", Dr Bertil Wiklander, TED President and Board Chair, announced to a combined Newbold Board and staff meeting last week.

"There will be no significant reduction in the total number of staff, operational costs and appropriations, but intentional staffing realignment for growth and effective marketing and recruitment efforts are needed to achieve ambitious targets", Dr Wiklander added.

"A key initiative includes establishing a Centre for Christian Leadership with opportunities for BUC church members to participate in campus-based and field-based training in evangelism, mission, biblical studies, leadership, health and wellness and preaching", advised Dr Philip Brown, Newbold Principal and Board Secretary.

"The College will be working closely with the BUC and SEC leadership teams to plan continuing professional development opportunities for pastors, elders and other ministry leaders as well as training programmes for lay members and young people who want to strengthen their skills to serve and support their church in local mission and evangelism", Dr Brown added.

The one-year Licence in Theology programme for those who have already completed a degree in another discipline will continue to be offered. The options for a three- or four-year undergraduate Theology degree programme will also continue, as will the postgraduate Theology programme.

The College is also looking to expand its partnerships with Union seminaries in Poland, Hungary, Croatia and Serbia, and to offer field-based Theology degrees in the Baltic region of Europe.

A new model will be developed for the undergraduate Business programme at the College, which will allow for an emphasis in Accounting as well as opportunity for students to complete the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA) professional accounting qualification.

A new model will also be developed for an expanded English for Speakers of Other Languages provision which will afford opportunities for new immigrants within the local community to strengthen their English speaking and listening skills via evening classes.

A new development this summer will be the introduction of a Certificate in Health and Wellness on the Newbold campus during mid-July and early August. Modules include: Health Principles, Fit for Life, Nutrition, Personal Fitness Plan, and Consumer Health.

"We are fortunate to have secured some of the best Adventist health and wellness educators internationally to deliver this programme, including Dr Winston Craig, Dr Jochen Hawlitschek, Dr Fred Hardinge, Dominique Wakefield and Dr Per de Lange", Dr Brown stressed. "These educators will be supported by well-known BUC medical professionals, including Dr Chidi Ngwaba and Dr Christopher Levy."
"The College is committed to continuing to refine its academic programmes and short courses to deliver a more responsive and effective education for all stakeholders, with specific focus on the ministerial education and training needs of the TED's various fields which include the BUC", Dr Brown concluded.

MINISTERS FULLY ENGAGE WITH JESUS' MOTIVE: SALT AND LIGHT

You may note an extra-large smile on your pastor's face this Sabbath. You may also notice a little more spring in the step and energy in the preaching. The reason, pastors and Bible workers from across the UK and Ireland have just returned from three days at a very different Ministerial Council.

While they were energised by two excellent overseas speakers, what really caught the imagination of the entire workforce was a series of reports from various churches and groups that find themselves to be 'salt and light' in their communities. Feeding programmes, planting a community based ministry in a small village, running a centre that reduced local crime by 42%, or even joining in with the community to find yourself studying the Book of Romans with a group of nuns, all these then led to more sharing, ideas, and thoughts on how each local church, allowing for its own strengths and focus, can be a centre of excellence in its own community.

Those who presented the various projects found themselves surrounded by questioning pastors during breaks and through meal times. This was not just sitting through theory and lectures. These were practical ideas that could be taken home.

Naturally there were lectures. While the speakers came from opposite ends of the planet their themes nevertheless gelled into the salt and light motive of the three days, 18-20 February, that the minsters spent at the Hayes Conference Centre, Derbyshire.
In a bold but unusual move, the British Union Conference, organisers of the event, brought in a Communication and PR expert as one of the key speakers. Pastor Garrett Caldwell, Associate Communication director at Adventist world Church headquarters, shared how "We want to build bridges of relationship." If we do this, he stated, "We can then convey love and a picture of God."

This then led into three presentations that demonstrated how our PR presence, the language we speak, our perceived reputation in our communities, our behaviour and our performance, will all either build up or destroy God's reputation. Heads could be seen nodding as practical advice on PR, websites, corporate visual identity and much more challenged ministers to think about how their communities view their church. Practical ideas were given and shared on how to 'improve the view'.

Coming from Australia, Pastor Brendon Pratt may have been jet lagged, but bounced in with enthusiasm as he shared practical answers on how to be a Christian in a consumerist society. While the mantra of the world is that 'Time = money = things = happiness', Brendon clearly showed that not only does this mantra fail, but that the antidote to it is community. The hyper-culture of desire generated by TV ads does not exist in reality, but building relationships with people, getting involved, relearning to cross-generational, turns us from empty consumerists seeking a new thrill, into the caring, fulfilled individuals that God intended us to be.

We could report on the exercise programmes (your minister may have a few stiff muscles), the late night fellowship, the excellent worship teams, or the positive, good-natured leadership of Pastor Llew Edwards who spearheaded the event, but the most important thing to report is the very many ministers who are all saying, "This is one of the best councils I have ever attended." "This council is making me feel good about my Church." "I can see new hope for the future of Adventism in the British Isles."

That is all that BUC President, Pastor Ian Sweeney hoped for. On Thursday morning he smilingly stated, "It was my hope that our pastors could be energised, encouraged and enthused about their ministry as they lead their congregations to be community influencers and changers as salt and light. I believe this has been accomplished."

EXTREME WEATHER – CALL TO CHECK ON NEIGHBOURS AND VULNERABLE

Aberdaron Adventist Campsite on the Llyn Peninsula, North Wales, was in the eye of last week's hurricane force winds with recorded wind speeds of 108 miles per hour. Thankfully, while the area lost power and was out of communication for almost a day, site manager, Les Simpson, reports that all is well on the site. Summer Camp programmes are secure. The more exposed South England Conference Campsite at Chapel Porth on the North Cornish coastline, also survived unscathed, according to local pastor, Chris Peake.

With the exceptional weather since before Christmas communities across the UK have been struggling with rising water levels and high winds. Church members have been helping some of our older members and their neighbours who are finding shopping difficult but we are thankful that we have no reports of any injury or flooding. There were reports of power cuts affecting some of our Welsh and North England members. One member who attends Leamington Spa Adventist Mission found his village surrounded by water and without power, but his wood-burning stove kept the family warm and cozy.

Adventists, by definition, are naturally caring people. Leading by example, BUC Health Ministries director, Sharon Platt-McDonald has been checking on elderly friends to make sure they are safe, and arranging for neighbours or friends to keep an eye on them or to help with shopping if it is too difficult for them to get out.

Have churches opened their doors to those stranded or made homeless by the recent flooding? Pastor Peake reported that the St Austell church had made the offer during previous extreme weather but that while the council noted the offer they already have emergency strategies in place.

Both ADRA-UK director Bert Smit and Elsie Staple, South England Conference Community Services director, emphasised to ministers this week that if local churches want to be involved in disaster relief in their areas they need to prepare beforehand. This includes deciding what a local church can do in the case of an emergency and registering with the local council. "People may need help but we are not here to compete with the big corporates or the emergency services", Elsie stated. She encourages members to join with voluntary groups that are already helping, seeking ways to assist those who are already on the front line. Trying to help independently, while well intentioned, can actually be counter-productive, either duplicating or getting in the way of those teams that are organised to help.

A concert is being organised at the Advent Centre, London, for Saturday evening, 29 March. Money raised will be targeted towards a specific project that the Community Services department has identified.
Meanwhile, perhaps the best help you can give is to be a good neighbour to those near you, using the old but reliable adage, "What would Jesus do?"

TED PRESIDENT TO RETIRE 31 JULY 2014

Dr Bertil Wiklander, President of the Trans-European Division of the Seventh-day Adventist Church (TED) has announced his retirement as of 31 July this year following 19 years as President.

Dr Wiklander announced his decision at a staff devotional on Wednesday, 12 February during two days of leadership training for Union Presidents. Appreciation for his service was expressed by the staff through the TED Executive Secretary, Audrey Andersson, and by Sandra Grice, General Conference Auditing Service (GCAS) Associate Director.

"I have enjoyed my work and the many people I have come to know in various parts of the Division," Dr Wiklander stated, adding, "I will leave my responsibility with much gratitude to God and my colleagues. I will greatly miss the fellowship and friendship within our office, which I think is something very unique and precious."

Pastor Cecil Perry, now retired, knows Dr Wiklander very well having served as British Union and before that as South England Conference President. He reminisces that both in good times and through occasional times of stormy waters that "Dr Wiklander served as President of one of the most diverse Divisions in the world Church. The Trans-European Division shared territory in the 10-40 window of over 4 billion non-Christians."

While the British Union Conference is the biggest unit of the TED and home of its headquarters, Pastor Perry noted that "Dr Wiklander's leadership has focused a lot on those territories that were economically challenged. He was acknowledged as an academic. He will be missed for his scholarly submissions at GC level." He concludes, "Proverbially he ran a tight ship, mapping out its destination and ascertaining the number of crew on board. Issues are dealt with a certain sagacity and unswerving determination."

In a brief statement Dr Wiklander thanked God "especially for the wonderful team I have had around me in the Division office and in the Unions and other Fields within the Division."

Included in that team are two British directors, Pastors Michael Hamilton and Paul Tompkins.

Pastor Hamilton reflects that, "One of the gifts that Dr Wiklander brought to the TED is the ability to chair and direct committees. He has a calm and pleasant disposition which encourages participation and involvement of all members." Pastor Tompkins adds that Dr Wiklander, "has given invaluable leadership to both a complex and changing field. His great desire has been to make God known in 21st century Europe and I consider it a privilege and pleasure to have worked with Bertil and the TED team in this very important and continuing endeavour."

Dr Wiklander now plans to spend more time with his family and working on some book and biblical research projects. Pastor Ted Wilson, President of the worldwide Seventh-day Adventist Church will oversee the process of electing a successor.

Prior to coming to the TED, Dr Wiklander served in his native Sweden as Principal of Ekebyholm School, Union Executive Secretary and President.

It was appropriate that the announcement came during leadership training for the Union Presidents as Dr Wiklander is a keen advocate of growing leaders and providing opportunities for people to try new ideas and to grow. BUC President, Pastor Ian Sweeney was at the training. He concludes, "In the two years or so that I have been able to work closely with Dr Wiklander, I have come to appreciate his passion for mission in seeing the Seventh-day Adventist Church rise to the challenge of making God known in our territory and encouraging our congregations and pastors to be bold enough to do this in creative and imaginative ways. I have also appreciated his chairmanship skills in the gentle yet purposeful way he has led various committees."

'RANDOM ACTS OF KINDNESS' CLUB HITS THE STREETS

Clad in waterproofs and wellies, and sporting huge fluorescent umbrellas, the new Totton 'Random Acts of Kindness' (RAK) club took to the streets to see how they could help their community on Valentine's Day.

Those involved offered shelter to people packing away shopping in their cars, helped those dashing from cars to the doctors' surgery and even assisted parents desperately trying to get buggies into their cars.

As it was Valentine's Day, the group gave away goody bags. 180 goody bags were filled by two children, who had volunteered before the event, and included chocolates, balloons and details of the RAK club scheme.

"One or two people were initially suspicious as we approached their cars", explained Rosemary Lethbridge, pastor of the Totton Community church plant named 'The Watering Hole'. "Once they understood we were there to help they became friendly and, throughout the day, we lost count of the positive comments directed our way."
The church wanted to do something that gave people the opportunity to volunteer for something worthwhile, without having to commit their time on a regular basis. The people who volunteer at the RAK club determine what it is able to offer the community. Their skills, interests and networks will drive the direction of the club.

"At present on the agenda we have fence repair and painting, general clean-ups after the storms, community flower bed repairs and litter picking, as well as organising our huge, annual, community Easter egg hunt", continued Pastor Lethbridge.

The RAK club has been advertised in the local press and the group have launched a logo competition, also designed to attract people's attention. The organisers have stated that the RAK club was not created to replace existing charities, but is instead designed to give people taster sessions that may lead to volunteering in their community on a regular basis.

The Watering Hole church is known for its four-pronged approach to church life. 'Live' - activities that help you get more out of life; 'Love' - yourself and serve others; 'Learn' - more about God in several different ways that suit your learning style and level of commitment to spiritual things; and 'Laugh' - make time in your life for friendship and fun.

The RAK club fits neatly into the 'Love' section and the team is excited about how the new initiative will bring renewed interest and enthusiasm for working together in their community.

LONDON GHANA STARTS YEAR WITH PRAYER AND FASTING

The London Ghana church began 2014 with a four-week long prayer and fasting to whip up the spiritual growth of members into the new year. It has been the practice of the church to go through such a spiritual exercise for the past five years or more. It prepares members for the work of God and also enables them face life's challenges successfully.

According to church pastor, Fergus Owusu-Boateng, such programmes result not only in membership growth but more importantly, prepared members for the spread of the gospel in the City of London and in the location of the church in Plaistow, East London. He acknowledged, for instance, that the number of small groups in the church, the spirit of giving, members' commitment to prayer and Bible study, have all tremendously improved. He is of the view that church members can only develop spiritually when the church takes them through such spiritual exercises.

During the four Sabbaths, Pastor Owusu-Boateng took members through Jesus' Sermon on the Mount best known as the 'Beatitudes', describing it as the best sermon ever preached.

He explained to members the content of the sermon and impressed upon the members to endeavour to put all issues mentioned by Jesus in the sermon into practice. He was of the view that when members develop the desire to do this, the Lord will help them achieve results.

Pastor Owusu-Boateng noted that such beautiful attitudes such as meekness, hunger and thirst for righteousness, merciful, pure in heart, and peace-making could take members higher on the spiritual ladder.

He encouraged members to have prayer partners to continually pray for the worldwide Church and the spiritual growth of members. Members after the programmes paired themselves as prayer partners. Pastor Owusu-Boateng promised the members both support and assistance from the church leadership to ensure the success of the prayer-partnership project.

The last Sabbath saw two newly elected church elders and five deacons being ordained. A Testimony service was also held with members testifying and giving thanks to God for the great things He has done.

'ON YOUR MARKS' YOUTH GUIDE NOW AVAILABLE

'On Your Marks', a new guide to helping church Youth leaders plan for their young people across the UK, is now available for free from the South England Conference (SEC), British Union Conference (BUC) or through the author, Luke Whyte.

Luke Whyte has held various Youth Leadership positions throughout the past 10 years, including working in his local church in Willesden, North London, and with the SEC Teens department, alongside Teens director, Pastor Dejan Stojkovic.

"It was around two or three years ago that I was the Youth leader at my local church," explained Luke. "I was coming to the end of my tenure and I thought to myself that there should be something I can hand over to the next Youth leader, so that they didn't have to start from scratch again. It would mean they could continue some of the good stuff that was happening and also be able to fill the gaps that were identified."

The guide itself was sponsored by the Youth department at the BUC and the Teens department at the SEC and is already being distributed to Youth leaders across the UK.

"I found that a lot of the resources I have tried to use, for Youth leaders, are American", continues Luke. "So, even though they are useful, they aren't specifically geared to the UK context. I think there is a need for resources that are made specifically by those on the ground, working in the same context as us."
In the foreword to the guide, Pastor Nathan Stickland writes, "From time to time, I find myself thumbing my way through a 'how-to' book, not unusually about Youth Ministry. Some would take far too long to read and others lack relevance…This book is written with obvious retrospect and, therefore, will be helpful in great and small ways to all Adventist Youth Ministries workers."

Click here to download an e-copy of 'On Your Marks - A Beginner's Guide to Youth Ministry', free of charge.

ADRA HELPS THE FORGOTTEN PEOPLE

ADRA Uganda is working hard to meet the immediate needs of the many Sudanese refugees. In this kind of crisis there is a risk that some people become 'forgotten'. The ADRA team recently travelled to Boroli Settlement, a smaller camp that nevertheless represents over 14 different tribes, that they feared had been forgotten about by others.

In meeting with the elders, the refugees in Boroli had expressed their fear that ADRA was the same as all the other NGOs that had been there before, just promising a lot but not practically fulfilling their promises. However, ADRA does come back. The next day they came to inform the elders in the settlement of when the distribution would be held, and then two days later they returned to do the actual distribution.

The forgotten households of Boroli Settlement are grateful to ADRA for not forgetting them.

While we suffer from storms and flooding here in the UK, people like the refugees in Boroli are grateful to ADRA supporters like you who continuously remember the needs of others. To find out more about the work and world of ADRA visit www.adra.org.uk.
