SUCCESS FOR UK PATHFINDERS IN USA PATHFINDER BIBLE EXPERIENCE

There were scenes of jubilation at Takoma Adventist Academy, Maryland, as three UK Pathfinder teams came in the first place category in the North American Division finals of the Pathfinder Bible Experience (PBE), on Saturday (Sabbath), 12 April.

Four teams from the UK had travelled to America to compete in the global finals of the PBE, after each winning first place in the UK Union level competition on Sabbath, 1 March. The teams from the Filipino International Community (FIC) church, Walthamstow church and two from the Croydon church lent an international angle to the American competition, accompanied by South England Conference Pathfinder director, Pastor Kevin Johns.

This is only the second year that the UK has entered the tournament. FIC won the UK competition, earning a sponsored trip to the US finals. However, after also coming in first place category, the three other teams were also eligible to attend. This then promoted a slew of fundraising activities by the team members, families and churches. One team member was even given £200 by a generous neighbour!

"It was very fun and exciting, I couldn't even sleep on the plane because I was so excited, this is my first time going to America", enthused Monae Scarlett from Croydon. "If it wasn't for this competition I wouldn't have picked up my Bible as frequently. Starting the competition, I have been able to connect to God more easily than I could have done without the competition and I think my relationship is stronger than it was before."

After months of intense study, the Pathfinders had to display an in-depth knowledge of the book of 2nd Samuel, as well as the companion section in the SDA Bible Commentary. Up against 88 teams from across the USA and Canada, Walthamstow, FIC and Croydon team 1 showed they were strong enough to compete by finishing in the first place category, with Croydon team 2 finishing in the commendable second place category.

As the results were announced, celebrations echoed across the Atlantic, as supporters in London followed the live-streamed event into the night, UK time.

"One of the most joyful things is to hear the Pathfinders say they now enjoy studying the Bible," commented Pastor Johns, "and that the Pathfinder Bible Experience is having an impact on their lives by drawing them closer to God, making them think about their own relationship. Parents have expressed thanks and appreciation because PBE has brought their families back to family worship and back to Bible study!"

As well as studying for the competition, and practising for a musical item they were to perform, the teams and their chaperones were able to explore. They visited places such as the White House, Hope TV Studios, the Ellen G White Estate at Adventist World Church Headquarters,
"I want to encourage churches to plan financially, from now, to help send your Pathfinders to next year's finals in the USA", said Neil Nunes, one of the Croydon church coaches. "This is more than a competition, the aim is to help the young people get close not just to the Word of God, but to the God of the Word and train an army of youth for mission and service by ensuring that they are serious Bible experts."

BUC 'WOMEN OF VIRTUE' PROGRAMME LAUNCH

A weekend programme crossing two locations, Luton and Leamington Spa, saw the launch of a Women's Ministries initiative conceived back in the summer of 2007. Aiming to nurture the holistic development of women, and complete with handbook and resources, the BUC Women of Virtue launch encompassed both a Day of Fellowship and a Sunday seminar.

Founder and director Sharon Platt-McDonald laid the foundation for the programme in 2007 when she presented a PowerPoint presentation one Sabbath afternoon on the Virtuous Woman of Proverbs 31. In that presentation she outlined 13 key principles from the life of the Proverbs 31 woman, depicting her attributes. When elected to serve as BUC Women's Ministries director in 2011 she says, "I spoke to God about my desire to produce a programme for women that would build them up in every aspect of their life. God showed me that I already had the tools to do so and referred me to the presentation I had been using over the years on the purposeful and productive life of the Virtuous Woman of Proverbs 31."

However, Sharon realised that creating such a programme would be a huge task and began praying earnestly for God to show her someone she could work with in the delivery of such a programme. The result? Sandra Golding is now an associate director of the programme."

With a 282 page Women of Virtue Programme manual and accompanying literature such as the Programme Brochure, Spiritual Journey Journal, Gratitude and Payer Diary, Prayer Series, Financial Tips for Women and Theme Song bookmark, a suite of programme products were on display throughout both days.

On Sabbath, 26 April over 600 women attended the Day of Fellowship at Hightown Methodist church, Luton. It was a rich mixture of uplifting music, worship songs, powerful preaching, dynamic presentations, monologues, sketches and special items.

Commencing with a lively Sabbath School led by Thembie Mapingire, women were encouraged to take a comparative look at the Woman of Virtue and the Woman of Vice – both portrayed in the book of Proverbs. Lessons were drawn from both lives.

Guest speaker Dr Deborah Harris, a trainer and educational consultant from Atlanta, USA, presented a reflective and empowering sermon focused on 'It's a Matter of the Heart'. She also shared her personal passion that has developed into an organisation, 'Praying For Our Children'. That prefaced the UK chapter launch of 'Praying for our Children' on the Sabbath afternoon. A very moving exercise invited women to write their prayer request for their children and place it on prayer trees stationed at the front of the auditorium.

Vocal renditions from the Luton Women’s Ministries Choir and Praise team together with music from the Luton Central Church Band provided a rich atmosphere for worship and celebration throughout the day. A flute duet by Hopieann Platt and Marie Garrison added to a feast of musical treats as did Velettia Davis' solo item 'Take me to the King'.

The dramatisation (with accompanying period props) of the scripture reading by Elleni-Jaye Anderson-Grey and Deborah St Cyr was a riveting portrayal of Proverbs 31:10-31 from both the King James Version and the Message Bible paraphrase.

Monologues on Bible women by Catherine Anthony Boldeau were equally inspiring and moving. One depicted the virtuous woman from her mother-in-law's eyes in a humorous portrayal of her character and the other a sombre and reflective piece on Abigail and her abusive husband speaking from the voice of the abused.

A special moment was the unveiling of a commissioned sculpture of the Woman of Virtue, skilfully crafted by Andrea Rashford-Hewitt. This depicted women in various life stages as singles – Godly character, a mother, and an older woman who bore the weight of life's experience etched into her frame.

Equally poignant was the awards in appreciation of women who have made a significant continuation to their church and community. This included the Heather Haworth Award, the Julia Smith Award, the Dr Deborah Harris Award and the Woman of Virtue Award.

On Sunday a smaller but equally enthusiastic number of women gathered at the Woodland Grange Conference Centre, gaining an opportunity for attendees to hear an in-depth outline of the programme, with explanatory guidance for each chapter of the manual and the related seminars which will accompany it.

Attendees were again blessed with humorous but powerful presentations from Dr Harris entitled: 'Oh no, She's Awake!' and 'You are not alone'. Time for reflection allowed for personal application of the messages. Equally enriching was the 'Talk Time' with Dr Harris led by team member Hyacinth Gayle. Questions were answered in an open and engaging manner.

A major highlight was the interactive exhibition which depicted the 13 elements of the programme. It gave women a chance to reflect on their lives as they answered questions using the exhibition workbook.

The Women of Virtue programme is designed to reach churches and communities across the British Isles both as an in-reach and outreach tool. It will equip, nurture and empower women to achieve their full potential through Christ.
Meet some women of virtue, including presenter, Dr Harris, in a brief video report of the event. Also, enjoy memories of the weekend by visiting the Adventist Church photo gallery.

ADRA FUN RUN CLIMAXES ANNUAL APPEAL

Kris Chandler, over 8 months pregnant at the time of the 2013 ADRA Fun Run, returned this year with her husband, Charlie, son, Ethan, and now 11-month-old daughter, Eden, to tackle the course as a family. They were keen to support the Adventist Development and Relief Agency Fun Run 2014 at Crystal Palace Park on Sunday, 27 April.

They were just one of many families that came out together to support ADRA, a charity that aims to improve the lives of people across the globe.

Despite a rainy start to the morning, organiser, Pastor Kirk Thomas, South England Conference (SEC) Personal Ministries director, was optimistic about the numbers that would turn up. "This Fun Run is one of the highlights of the ADRA season of collection", he enthused. "Everybody comes, people on roller-skates, people on bicycles, people walking, jogging, people pushing babies in prams, dog-walking even, it's just fun!"

[Image of the Chandler family getting active together]
Some participants were brave and pushed through the whole 12-mile course, with some even completing a thirteenth 'Golden Mile'. Some were more prepared than others, but made no less effort.

"When I came this morning I honestly thought it was going to be a 5k run, not knowing it was going to be 12 miles!" commented Salisha Ali-Jackman, from Basildon Adventist church. "It's a big shock for me, on my system, I'm aching everywhere but I'll be alright, it was great fun."

A short while after the 10:00 am start, the sun decided to join in the Fun Run, providing great conditions for those taking part. The encouraging change in weather meant that yet more people turned up as the day progressed, bringing the total number of participants to well over 100.

"I'm really happy that so many people have come out to support ADRA and help in their various ways. This is one of the last events for this year's Annual Appeal. It's great seeing people out supporting ADRA whatever the weather", said Sophie Gordon, Volunteering Programmes Officer at ADRA-UK who was participating in the run.

Several supporters had made their way down to the park and were cheering the runners on. One group had even brought an easily accessible picnic, to provide sustenance to friends and family on the run, which caused one jogger to comment, "I hope they bring us food again next year!"

STEALING PAST THE WATCHFUL DRAGONS

"How many of you have read a book by C S Lewis?"

That was the question with which Dr Debbie Higgens opened the Diversity Lecture 'Inclusiveness in the.
Literature of C S Lewis' at Newbold College on Tuesday, 22 April. Almost everyone in the room raised their hands.

Those who hadn't read a Lewis book had seen one of the Narnia films based on the series of children's books written by Lewis. As the current Director of the C S Lewis Study Centre in Oxford, Dr Higgens seemed delighted to have an audience of Lewis fans.

Higgens has spent the last four years as on-site director, living and working at 'The Kilns', the house on the outskirts of Oxford in which Lewis lived for many years. As director, she witnesses on a daily basis the enduring worldwide interest in the Christian witness borne by Lewis in his many writings.

As both the first academic and the first Seventh-day Adventist to hold the post, she is clearly excited about the opportunities her job offers to meet with those interested in the Christian faith to which Lewis converted, describing himself in his autobiography as "the most dejected, reluctant convert in all England."

A former professor of English at Southern Adventist University where she spent 17 years, Dr Higgens has served as a missionary in Costa Rica and lived in many parts of the world as a daughter in a military family. She is well-placed to show that though Lewis never left the shores of the United Kingdom he nevertheless had sympathies with a wide range of people beyond the Oxford dons with whom he spent much time while teaching at the University.

Higgens told her audience that Lewis believed that basic to all Christian discipleship was putting on the mind of Christ – and it was that mind, she believed, which was the source of his creativity in a variety of genres. In The Screwtape Letters, which show how evil is at work in the world, he imagined conversations with a junior representative of the Devil. In Mere Christianity, which has been key to many a conversion, he gave a vigorous defence of Christian faith. His own experience of losing his wife to cancer after just a few years of marriage in middle age enabled him to write A Grief Observed.

Lewis encouraged many British people with messages of Christian hope during the darkest days of World War II. He explained faith to children through his Narnia Chronicles. His books are still read in huge numbers around the world by those wanting to strengthen their faith. Dr Higgens told her audience that alongside his apologetic works, Lewis believed in the value of fantasy as a means of sharing Christian faith believing that stories can "steal past the watchful dragons" of the inhibitions which prevent people from coming to recognise the potency of faith.

Dr Higgens described Lewis' tolerance and open-mindedness using a quotation in which he had described faith as a hallway where there are many doors into many rooms. "When you have reached your own room, be kind to those in other rooms or still out in the hallway", he said. It was by adopting this spirit that Lewis succeeded, and continues to succeed, in attracting many people away from agnosticism to a living Christian faith.

Watch the C S Lewis Diversity Lecture on YouTube. Also, enjoy a November 2013 BUC News video report with Dr Higgens reflecting on the 50th anniversary of the death of C S Lewis.

SMILES, FREE HUGS AND PRAYERS IN DUBLIN
YOUTH IMPACT

As the Dublin City of Hope outreach project gathers momentum, young people from the churches around Dublin descended on the city for a youth impact event with the theme: You are not alone. The next 48 hours would be filled with numerous fun, high energy projects. According to one of the organisers, Cristina Dima, they were designed to "make God known, cheer up lives, and make friends."

The activities for the event started on Sabbath afternoon 19 April with a group of young adults visiting a nursing home in the north side of Dublin. The young people sang favourite Christian songs and hymns to the delight and joy of the residents. As the young people departed they gave roses and small cards with Bible promises to the residents. Elida Leite, one of the impact coordinators, said, "We really enjoyed our time with them. The elderly residents were happy to have us and we'll definitely visit them again."
Later that day, an enthusiastic group of around 70 young people excitedly descended on the centre of Dublin. In front of the main gate of St Stephen's Green Park, with their green and orange boldly printed T-shirts, they offered 'Free Hugs' and the message that 'You are not alone'. For more than two hours, the group opened their arms and warmly hugged hundreds of surprised and delighted Dubliners and even tourists. One hug recipient happily commented, "This is the best thing that happened to me today. Thank you very much." It was amazing to see how a simple hug could bring the most beautiful smile onto people's faces and send a message of hope that they are not alone.

The event also opened a wonderful opportunity to hand out hundreds of Celebrations magazines promoting a healthy lifestyle, and You are not alone flyers with the Adventist and City of Hope logos. Some people even expressed interest to join the Free Hugs event in the future. A girl living in Dublin sent a message expressing disappointment that she was not able to join the Free Hugs that day. She wrote on the event Facebook page, "Are you going to do more of this? I hope I'll be able to make it next time." She found out about the Free Hugs events after coming across a YouTube video created after the first event in September last year.

The weekend's activities ended on Sunday afternoon, 20 April with a group who went out distributing Neighbourhood Prayer Watch cards and more Celebrations magazines near the Ranelagh Road Adventist church. The beautifully designed prayer cards invited people from the community to 'pray, relax, let go and let God take over' with details of how to send their prayer requests and get a free Bible.

Pastor Ben Pontanar, activities coordinator reflected that, "These events were meant to send a reassuring and comforting message to the people of Dublin: You are not alone. The activities were simple and non-threatening. Nevertheless we believe lives have been touched." Cristina Dima enthusiastically agrees: "The impact events demonstrated the love of God in many creative ways and we have certainly made Him known."
The weekend is over, but Dublin is not resting. The churches are gearing up for the next big City of Hope event: Ten days of life-enhancing presentations in the downtown Ballsbridge Hotel, led by Mark Finley, Michael Hasel, and three other evangelistic teams from the United States. This all begins on Sabbath, 17 May.

MELODIC SURPRISE FROM AREA 8 PASTORS AT DAY OF FELLOWSHIP

The pastors of SEC Area 8, which covers Cambridgeshire, Essex, Suffolk and Norfolk, surprised their combined congregations with a vocal rendition of the hymn, 'Marching to Zion' at the Area 8 Day of Fellowship, on Sabbath, 26 April 2014.

Held at the Trinity Park Conference Centre, Ipswich, almost 1,000 church members came together to celebrate a day of diversity and church community. Organising the day was the new Area 8 coordinator, Pastor Colin Stewart, selected for the position after the previous coordinator, Pastor Bertie de Nysschen, accepted a pastoral position back in his homeland of South Africa.

Near the end of the day it was announced that another Area 8 pastor, Théo Rios, along with his family, would also be moving away from the UK. He is returning to his native Brazil and, as expressed by his colleagues and congregations, his dedication and pastoral care will be truly missed.

Dr Laurence Turner, head of the Theology Department at Newbold College of Higher Education, led the morning Bible study programme and delivered the sermon during the main family service.

"The morning study was really inspiring, what stood out for me was the way Laurence went into the main scripture, focusing on what contemporary society was like in Jesus' day", said Patricia Mulenga. "He broke it down for even the children to understand. It made me stop and think about our churches today and their similarities to the stance of the Pharisees on Scripture. It was really interesting discussing how Jesus met people where they are, even those that might seem unreachable to us."

During the main service, Dr Turner delved into the Gospel of Matthew, chapter 5. He talked about what it really means when the Bible is described as 'inspired' and then explained how the Word of God is 'God-breathed'. In the same way that the Bible was formed with the breath of His mouth, so were mankind, the heavens and the earth.

"What I'm going to remember from Pastor Turner's sermon is simple and something we need to be reminded of; the Word of God remains the Word of God and through the Word of God we are saved", commented Jean-Claude Balisson, from Colchester church.

Every church in the area got involved in the afternoon programme with a Bible quiz and a concert. Teams were formed from each church as questions tested them on their knowledge of the Bible. Competitors were given strict rules that no Bibles or phones were allowed!

Although well represented by father Laszlo Graholy, and daughter Hanna, who sang a beautiful duet during the concert, Colchester church had to relinquish the trophy, awarded to them as the 2013 winners of the Area 8 Bible Challenge. This year's winners: Chelmsford church!
