PERSONAL MINISTRIES LEADERS 'GO FORWARD' IN NEC

Hundreds of eager evangelists packed the Britannia Country House Hotel in Didsbury from Friday, 23 till Sunday 25 January, for the 'Go Forward' North England Conference Personal Ministries Retreat. British Union Conference President, Pastor Ian Sweeney, joined with NEC President Pastor Lorance Johnson and NEC Personal Ministries and Evangelism director, Pastor Michael Simpson, to help aid local church Personal Ministries leaders in 'moving their individual churches forward in evangelism'.

The weekend was split into three parts: reflecting on the story of the journey so far, then looking at what we do now to evangelise, and concluding with what we can do to further our movement for the future.

One of the most encouraging features of the weekend was that there was a high percentage of young Adventists from all over the north, many of whom took leading roles in the running of the event and also in presenting. Some are also currently serving as Personal Ministries leaders in their church. One young speaker, Naison Chitiyo led out in the Sabbath morning devotion, explaining that the Holy Spirit doesn't work through methods but instead through men.

In the main service the Wednesfield and Leicester youth performed a play, 'Pioneer stories' that took Adventists back to their roots, the thought process being unless you understand your past how can you then move forward. Dressed up as martyr pioneers of the past, the play was based on the Great Advent Movement, the Mount of Olives, and the story and journey of Ellen G White. Creative props were used throughout, made and put together by the youth who were aged from 11 to 17.

It was a dynamic performance, everyone in the audience was moved and interested. The message wasn't just a look back at historical events, it was to empower the people of today, to enlighten them on what God has called them to do. The youth involvement in the play was to emphasise that the Church started with young people, as seen when you think of the ages of the Adventist pioneers of old, and will continue with young people.

Moving from the past to the present, Pastor Simpson led out in a talk on the NEC 'Mission in Motion' for 2015 holding on to the theme of 'Go Forward'. Pastor Sweeney then took everyone to the book of Jeremiah, stating that whenever Jeremiah preached, he had a serious response (Jeremiah 36:21-23). This included plots on his life, public beatings, heckling, and being barred from preaching. Even his sermon manuscripts were burnt by the king. Pastor Sweeney noted that Jeremiah's preaching may have modern-day resonance. Preaching God's Word can have consequences – not all of them pleasant.

Pastor Sweeney then gave some but less frequently quoted counsel from church co-founder, Ellen G White. He noted her advice to move into the city to follow the work of evangelism. She encouraged that "families that know the present truths are to set up in the cities and bring light to people who have no light." [Christian Service p.180] Pastor Sweeney emphasised that "we need people to move into the cities who will be and do like Jeremiah, live and proclaim God's Word." The key to Ellen G White's counsel is mission, he noted. "Some of us live our Christian lives selfishly, while Ellen G White was all about mission. If all we are doing is preparing for a persecution without proclaiming God's Word to people who are in darkness, we are selfishly running from people who aren't even chasing us." Pastor Sweeney concluded, "Be open to God's Word as He reveals it."

Sabbath afternoon looked to the future as several breakout sessions and workshops focused on evangelism. The first section was, 'How to gain Bible studies and how to do a Bible study'. Under the leadership of Danella Taylor, the idea was expressed that you can't have one rigid method of working, you need to understand who you're trying to reach when you evangelise. "It's about having a cultural intelligence so we can become all things to all men."

Other presentations focused on 'Secrets of Success', and 'Power House', where the group looked at the idea that the source of their energy comes from God. The importance of good fellowship, bridge-building evangelism and social activities were discussed, as well as outreach activities such as Sabbath School in the park.

The final workshop raised the paradox that the word 'friendship' is attractive and positive to the general public, but the word 'evangelism' sounds frightening. Yet at its best, 'friendship is evangelism'. Pastor Simpson pointed out that "We need to stop thinking about how many souls we can win, and start seeing people as friends and making strong unconditional friendships with them and witnessing to them in love rather than in vain then praying they will join the faith." He added, "We need to stop throwing tracks aimlessly at strangers in the street and start our evangelism journey witnessing to friends and family first, neighbours, work colleagues, making strong friendship circles and bonds where we can witness sincerely guided by the Holy Spirit."

Sunday saw further talks and presentations of events and programmes that are already taking place to aid the work of evangelism. The weekend retreat was spiritually led, reverent and guided by the Holy Spirit throughout. It was powerful with a fantastic atmosphere, great bonds and friendships were formed and the churches in the north all formed together and made plans to go forward on the same mission for God.

A selection of photos from the weekend can be found by visiting the Adventist Church picture gallery.

MEET EBOLA VACCINE VOLUNTEER – VELI KALLO

Veli Kallo is not your average man. If he sees a cause that he believes in he will get involved. Most recently that involvement meant volunteering to participate in the testing of an Ebola vaccine during trials at the University of Oxford.

A member of Newbold church in Binfield, Veli has been involved in research and development projects since 1995, the final year of his Business Administration and Religion degrees at Newbold College. His first overseas project was in Turkey back in 1995, working on the ancient sea level rise issues. International travel soon became a part of his life including a project in Azerbaijan to redevelop the city centre of Baku, then projects in Brazil and Tanzania.

It was the Tanzania project that, for Veli, reinforced the importance of vaccinations. He says, "I left for Tanzania with just three hours prior notice to board a plane on a charity project and I came to realise that it is far better to be well prepared for Africa as many people contract serious illnesses such as malaria, Ebola, Lassa fever, and yellow fever."

His travelling companion of the trip returned home ill. He suspected he had contracted Zaire Ebola. Thankfully it wasn't, but the scare had his neighbours "running for cover and quite aggressive as my friend was seriously ill on his return and dying." In the end it was septicaemia and septic shock but fortunately, his friend made a full recovery.

Veli learnt his lesson and would now strongly advise against travelling without appropriate immunisation and antimalarial tablets to Africa and Asia. Yet it is a big step to leap from regulated and tested immunisations for travel purposes to being a 'guinea pig' for a new drug that will potentially help stop the spread of the deadly Ebola virus.

Part of the answer is that Veli has a passion to make the planet a better place. He says, "I have been enlisted for a development fund which plans to stimulate economic growth in Africa and Asia by various means of structured funding. That job involves lots of travel in rural Africa to fund farmers and to get in touch with cattle herders. The funds want to modernise the farming and food industries nearer to the level where they are in the Americas and more developed parts of Asia."

Clearly the plan has currently been affected by the Ebola outbreak in West Africa, and something has to be done to assist in economically challenged countries like Sierra Leone. According to a World Bank report, "full-year 2014 growth in Sierra Leone fell by more than half to 4.0 per cent from 11.3 per cent expected before the crisis, with large reductions in Guinea and Liberia as well."

Volunteering to help resolve the health crisis is clearly also a method of helping pull people out of poverty. That is one motivation to volunteer. The other is Christian compassion. Veli reflects, "As Adventists we share a long tradition of charity." But he pushes the focus away from himself noting that Christ's first coming and the establishment of the Christian Church made provision of schools and hospitals to great masses of people rather than the elites. He says, "Even in the Early Church in the City of Antioch, ancient Rome's third largest city – and among the filthiest of cities with huge numbers of poor – Christians came to be noticed as people who care for the masses. This is just following Jesus' mission command when He was with us here – tens of thousands place names and schools and hospitals still bear names of the Christian missions that set them up."

"I could call it a duty of a Christian to help his or her neighbour", Veli explains, but he is equally gracious to other groups. "I would refuse to say that charitable activities are a monopoly of the Christian Church nowadays: there are both secular charities that do excellent work as well as charities of other religions such as Islamic Relief. Indeed, charity 'zakat' is one of the Five Pillars of Islam, although Christians historically are much more generous donors."

Veli is self-effacing. Reticent to be in the limelight, but explained that he was willing to share his story with BUC News readers as he believes the work being done by the University of Oxford is vitally important.

He says, "The experimental monovalent Zaire Ebola vaccine which I have been involved is administered at Churchill Hospital at the University of Oxford's Jenner Institute. Physically it meant a small amount of fasting and thirst as they require both blood and urine samples and travelling by train to the centre takes time, so you can't drink too much as you need to keep your urine until you get through hospital doors! At the hospital they then take various blood samples and investigate liver and kidney function among other things." With the first part of the trial completed the testing now moves to Liberia. If the programme is a success, Veli will be delighted – but even if things don't fully work out he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he is a small part of a very large team who are trying to make a difference.

RETURN HEALTH SCREENING VISIT REQUESTED BY SHOPPING CENTRE

Dr Dina Borges and the Bournemouth Seventh-day Adventist church Medical Outreach team recently ran a second Health Screening event in a socially deprived area of the city.

Boscombe is a small community located to the east of Bournemouth and is associated with both a high rate of crime and drug use and a low level of educational achievement within the local population. In the summer of 2014, Dr Borges, Director of Health and Community Ministry and her Medical Outreach team, along with the support of Bournemouth Council, provided health-screening services to the community in Boscombe. The health-screening took place in a vacant retail unit within the Sovereign Shopping Centre. [See BUC News article, Bournemouth Adventists become 'centre of influence'.]

The event was such a success, and with such a high degree of positive feedback from the local community that the church was contacted by the senior management of the Sovereign Shopping Centre and asked if it was willing to return to the centre and repeat the service.

Delighted to respond Dr Borges and her team headed back to the centre for a post-Christmas screening on the weekend of 24-25 January – an ideal time when people are more motivated to make health changes. Hosted in another vacant retail unit, the centre publicised the screening for two weeks prior to the event – both in the windows of the unit, on its website, its Facebook page and Twitter feed.

During the 2 days over 150 members of the public were screened and 10 were referred for immediate medical follow-up primarily related to cardiovascular and diabetes issues. The team was supported during the two days by both a lady and a gentleman who had themselves been screened by the team in 2014 and who, after follow-up, have started to attend the local church. Two volunteers also joined the team from the Basingstoke Adventist church to observe the way in which the event was organised and run.
The church and Dr Borges are now in new consultations with the management of the centre with a view to running a screening event on a quarterly basis. They are also looking at the feasibility of running a series of health-related lectures in the centre throughout the coming year.

CELEBRATIONS FOR YOUNG AND OLD AT ILFORD CENTRAL

Ilford Central church members started the year in celebration mode. At one end of the spectrum they rejoiced in two of their young members who publicly affirmed their dedication to God, at the other end they celebrated the faithful life of their oldest member, 95-year-old Enis Gibson.

Sade Burnett and Joseph Okochi made the first Sabbath of the New Year, 3 January, a special day in their lives. "There is a certain warmth about our community, a sure sense of compassion and togetherness in Christ", Joseph explained. "With it being a new year, I wanted to carry that warmth with me, better still to be a part of it. For there is no greater resolution than this, seeing the world through new lenses, walking with Christ."

The two were immersed during a beautiful Family Worship Service. Pastor Harrison Mburani officiated as other elders participated and led the programme.

Sade summarised her journey saying, "Growing up in an Adventist home, my parents set a great example for me. I made a resolution in 2014 that I would try and become closer to God above anything else so started attending church more regularly and having Bible studies. After a while it felt like the right time to get baptised."
Proud parent Mrs K Burnett exclaimed that "it was a beautiful day!" with Sade's father emphasising that "Karen and I are truly proud of her and we're continuously praying for her."

Joseph's mother, Mrs U Okochi, sang a special item just before her son was immersed in the water, reflected "I'm happy Joseph realizes that life without Christ will create a vacuum" whilst dad, Mr F Okochi added "Joseph has chosen a closer walk with Christ, Amen!"

But church family life covers the full spectrum, and while members rejoiced in new life in Christ, they also celebrated the faithful life of their long-time friend, Enis Gibson. She celebrated her 95th birthday with family and friends at her home on Monday, 5 January. Amidst the phone calls, gifts, cards, flowers and personal visits, local elder, Alan Rodney, stated "we were all blessed to spend this time with Sister Gibson, her strong faith and commitment to her church family is an inspiration to us all."

Even though Enis is no longer able to attend church services, she is still very much a part of Ilford Central's family. Pastor Mburani added "I was glad to spend some time with Sister Gibson as she narrated some childhood memories of how her parents met, falling in love at first sight, and never ending it until the end. She talked about her work as a nurse, how she is greatly known in the West Indies for her charitable work and loved by her Ilford family. She also said she's ready for the soon coming Saviour."

Praising God for continued health the 'birthday girl' herself fittingly responded "I would like to thank my church family for the wonderful gifts, I am looking forward to the coming of the Lord when we shall spend eternity in His presence."

[Ilford Central Communications]
The importance of follow-up cannot be emphasised enough for members of the small Irvine church family. During the Commonwealth Games in Scotland last summer, the Irvine church, under the banner, 'Common-Health and Well-being', held a health expo in the centre of town.

This 'Expo' was well received by the public and, as a follow-up programme for those who showed more than a passing interest, a four-night series of Health Seminars was conducted in the local church. This attracted both an audience and more interest during the week starting Monday, 19 January.

Invitations were sent out and poster adverts were displayed in the locality and people came to hear good advice about how to take better care of themselves. That advice was expertly and lovingly given by Winston and Jacqueline Brown.

Interest was expressed in knowing of any future programmes and many nice new friendships were made.

'DONATE YOUR BIRTHDAY!' It is not yet the end of the month but statistics show that 92 per cent of New Year resolutions have already failed! Of course, as an avid ADRA supporter, we are sure you are the exception! Yet as the month of January draws to a close it is just possible that you may have made (and broken) a New Year resolution.

Here at the Adventist Development and Relief Agency's UK office, we've also made a few resolutions ourselves, and some staff members have decided to take up one of our fundraising initiatives and donate their birthday to ADRA-UK!
Sophie Gordon, our Volunteering Programmes Officer, is one of them. She has decided to host a movie night at her home, with snacks and drinks – charging her friends, family, and even her young nieces, a small fee to join in as a fun way to raise funds for ADRA-UK.

Imagine if Sophie's idea was multiplied a thousand times across the UK! What a great way to raise awareness and to fundraise for ADRA-UK at the same time! So, this year why not resolve to undertake one fundraising activity for ADRA-UK?

Interested? Visit our website to find out how you can help support the work of ADRA-UK with an alternative way to celebrate your birthday this year!

[Fabrice Baker-Livingstone]
Various workshops took place including 'Returning to Work', facilitated by Pauline Stephens from Plumstead church. This workshop resulted in two of our guests obtaining appointments for interviews. Malika Bediako, SEC Women's Ministries director and Daniel Cudjoe from Wood Green church had one-to-one interviews with some of the guests to assist them in finding suitable accommodation when the shelter closed.

While volunteers enjoyed the days of helpful service, it is the response from the guests that brought them real satisfaction. During an interactive evaluation exercise they said that it was a "very good place to go to over the Christmas period especially when everything is closed." Another added, "It was amazing. They kitted us up with life-saving stuff, clothes, food, etc. and I was made to feel so welcome." Others stated, "The environment was peaceful and pleasant; the shelter was very good as from day one", "We are happy to be here", "It's a nice place for eating and sleeping", "Is a good thing."

When asked what our guests enjoyed the most, the replies were: "The food was perfect and the clothes etc. so helpful", "The friendly staff", "The prayers", "Food and clothes", "Movie room", "Correct and honest staff", "I like meeting different people", "Great food", "Nice and necessary gifts."

Our guests commented daily on how good the food was. This is thanks to a variety of chefs and cooks including Stephen Cooper, Health & Community Ministries director of the Trans-European Division, with his wife and team; Earl Ramharacksingh, with his wife and team from the South England Conference, Eglantine Baptiste, Eunice Whyte, Claudette Jeffers and Eutella Simon. Thanks also to Godwin Benjamin, Advent Centre manager for organising the evening meals.

While only running for a short period the shelter affords the Community Ministries department an enhanced opportunity to serve our friends and guests that we see every Sunday on the Embankment under Waterloo Bridge. Joining in on the voluntary action this year were a number of pastoral families including Pastors Sam Davis, Terry Messenger, Emmanuel Osei, and Steve Thomas. They joined with their colleagues from the South England
Conference, Community Ministries teams, and many volunteers who contributed in so many ways. SEC Community Services director, Elsie Staple says, "We thank God for you and your willingness to support this ministry." Adding, "I would like to also thank Anthony Opoku-Mensah and family, Nikisha Brown and The Ambassadors who provided musical items in the evening. Thanks also to Winston Bryan for the set-up and operation of the technical equipment, including the movie room and PA for the karaoke."

Many thanks to Hovis, Forest Gate for the loaves of bread they donated via Stratford church, Daren Bullock for the donation of bread also, Plan Zheroes for their donation of cakes from Emporium, Laundryheap for their laundry service, Central London Portuguese-speaking church for the beautiful toiletry baskets they created for each one of our guests, Central London church for their donation of gifts for our guests, and to the individual members, churches, neighbours and passers-by who donated financially.

Planning for next year we need more male volunteers. This will help us provide sufficient sleeping rooms for the men – one of the biggest challenges this past year. There is also a need for more laptops as there was always a queue for the use of this service.

SPIRITUAL ATMOSPHERE AT NEWBOLD MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

Newbold's recent Student Satisfaction Survey highlighted the strength of spiritual life on campus, and for one student it was this atmosphere that cemented her decision to study at the College.

Zarish Mushtaq, a Londoner in her first year of a BA Theology degree, decided to attend an Adventist higher education institution and considered Newbold because her uncle – whom she looks up to and admires – graduated with a Master of Theology from Newbold in 2007.
"I visited the College to find out more about what student life was like, and had the opportunity to attend classes, social, spiritual, and sporting activities. What had the most impact on me was 'The Experience', a student-led evening worship programme", she said. Zarish had visited Newbold in April 2014 as part of the College's 'Visit Us' programme for prospective students. "Helen Pearson, the presenter for the evening, spoke about Newbold graduates leaving the College and going their own way with a broader experience and knowledge not only about themselves and other people but also about God. She encouraged us not to fear being different but to be brave and look for ways to positively impact the communities that we find ourselves in", Zarish explained. "It was as I listened to these words that I envisioned myself leaving Newbold to face the world with such determination, and decided in my heart: that will be me."

With one semester under her belt, Zarish has found that the fullness of the spiritual life at Newbold is still a highlight of her experience as a student. A member of the College Choir and the Campus Ministries team, Zarish feels that being a Theology student and playing an active role in Campus Ministries allows her to have the best of both worlds. "During the week I find that I am already using what I’ve learnt in class to contribute to the planning of JUMP Church (a student-run church service on campus)", she explained. "The experience I gain from attending the various spiritual events on campus is both enriching and building the confidence I'll need in the future. I feel empowered by being part of meeting other people's spiritual needs. I am witnessing the strength of faith by being a part of their spiritual journey, and through this my own faith has been strengthened and I have grown in my relationship with the Lord."

Zarish's best advice for anyone who is contemplating studying at Newbold would be to take advantage of the campus visit programme as she did. "It was not only helpful in my decision-making process but also eliminated any doubts I had", she explained. "You just have to see this place for yourself! I did, and now all I do is look forward to the day that I step out on the path that God is leading me down, to find a way to make a real difference in the wider community."
