New Book on the Call to Ministry to be Released at Convention

New Book on the Call to Ministry will be given away at no charge to all pastors who attend the CALLED Pastors Convention. This book, edited by Nikolaus Satelmajer, is designed for ministers-pastors, chaplains, specialized ministries leaders (such as youth, family life, etc.), professors, teachers, and administrators. From the introduction of the book:

"Ministry covers so many responsibilities and functions that it is nearly impossible to address them all in one book. We will discuss several aspects of the seven core qualities that the NAD Ministerial department has identified as benchmarks. These benchmarks are critical for an effective ministry. You can find them listed in this book, right after the introduction.

We diligently searched throughout North America for contributors. Some writers have extensive experience while others are just embarking on their ministry. Some are pastors in a multi-church district, while others are pastors in a multi-pastor church. They are as diverse as our church is diverse. The writers also represent a broad spectrum of ministries to reflect what ministers in North America are doing.

Our God does not change and our mission is always the same, but the way we accomplish the mission does change. Ministers are constantly challenged to meet the needs of the community and congregation. Our prayer is that this book will help our colleagues find and experience fulfillment in ministry while meeting the challenges faced in our ever-changing world."

Editor's note: Pastors may still register at the regular rate until March 31.
