unChristian

Ever wondered what people really think of Christians? Here is an interesting perspective on how Christians are viewed.

Attrition of Clergy Children

Martin Weber serves as the Communication Director for the Mid-America Union. His research on the attrition of adult children of Adventist clergy is based upon twenty-one thousand data cells of raw research from Adventist pastoral couples with adult children. From the data, 40 attrition factors emerged — 11 of them, he found to be extreme.

Read the summary of his findings.

COR Value: Change

In this issue:

- unChristian
- Attrition of Clergy Children
- COR Value: Change
- 10 (Unexpected) Church Trends

In other news:

COR Summit - Seattle

As the gathering in Seattle draws closer check out the RSVP list and schedule for the COR summit!

Follow us on Facebook and Twitter

A Part of the CYE

COR is a ministry of the Center for Youth Evangelism
CORs are committed to change that leads to improved youth and young adult ministry. Elements of Change include evaluating programs and processes and experimenting with new ideas.

Digma.com is a valuable resource when experimenting with new ideas and looking for effective programming elements.

Right here at your fingertips is a growing library of short, thought-provoking videos that delve into the most important questions we ask as human beings. Whether or not you find yourself agreeing with every answer we offer, you will find yourself challenged to think new lines of thought. This website is designed so that you can easily share digma videos with your friends and family.

10 (Unexpected) Church Trends

Sam Ranier discusses ten trends that will surface in the church before 2012.

Click here for full article.

Thank you to Andrews University Chaplain Timothy Nixon for bringing this article to our attention.