In This Issue

In this issue, FOCUS frames the presidential inauguration of Richard Leshner in some choice words and thoughtful images. It is not an easy thing to do, because, as with many important events, the total impact of the occasion was much greater than the listing of its separate elements would suggest. The weekend was something to be felt and not merely watched or read about. Planned by a committee chaired by board member Elsie Buck, the inauguration did much to establish a high tone and new spirit on campus. Certainly it shall be remembered as one of the year's high points for the university community.

In addition to the regular departments of campus and alumni news, this issue also takes a quick look at three faculty/staff members—representative of many more—whose spare time activities help to make them the interesting people we meet in the office or classroom.

This curved staircase graces the art department building constructed during the Depression at a cost of $17,000—$3,000 below estimate. The three-story wooden structure was Science Hall from its construction in 1931 until 1974 when the new Science Complex was completed. The photo was taken by Gek-bee Siow of Berrien Springs for an Introduction to Photography class.

Making Memories

One after another, droll stories and amusing incidents chuckled up out of Percy Christian, president of EMC from 1950 to 1955, and Horace Shaw, known in Berrien Springs as Uncle Sam, who was a professor of speech during Dr. Christian's presidency.

The occasion? A visit by the two old friends to the public relations building on campus, the building that was Dr. Christian's home. It was this building that got their conversation going—reminiscing about students and teachers, dinners and parties, socials held in the basement family room that now houses a darkroom.

If you went to EMC in those years, you can imagine what the stories were. You could share in the memories of these two men.

And if you attended EMC or Andrews at some other time, you have a different set of memories, people by favorite teachers and special friends acted out against a backdrop of great events and private ones.

Memories. Just the stuff that life is made of—pictures of dreams, shadows of deeds.

But those memories are some of the most important things you take with you when you graduate. And do you remember who made the whole college experience possible for you? Do you remember who helped you make those memories?

More than likely it was your parents or grandparents, perhaps your brother or sister, aunt or uncle. You may have been one of the many students who received a scholarship named after an alumnus, an alumnus who was thankful for his memories and wanted to help another student make some memories.

Perhaps you have continued that tradition by joining the hundreds and hundreds of alumni who annually donate thousands of dollars to Andrews University.

If you are, allow me to say thank you, on behalf of the current Andrews students who are earning a great education, and making some great memories.

Campus Update

Fall Enrollment Up to 3,034

Andrews University's fall enrollment stands at 3,034, the second highest ever, according to university president Dr. Richard Leshner. The official report lists 2,006 students as undergraduates and 1,028 students taking graduate-level work.

Dr. Leshner said that this year's fall enrollment report shows a gain of 156 students from the same time last year. He also reported that all of the university's six schools show an increase in the number of students since last autumn and enrollment in the Theological Seminary and College of Technology are fall quarter records. Also, the first year freshman class, with 478 students, is the second largest ever.

Andrews' highest enrollment, 3,083 students, came in the fall of 1981.

Dr. Leshner said, "We have 3,034 students. Of course, some of these students are part-time. Our full-time equivalent (FTE) figure stands at 2,538. This also is up from last year's figure of 2,397, of which we are very pleased."

Dr. Leshner continued, "I feel that Andrews continues to offer students educational programs that will benefit them in career fields they have chosen and for other areas of life as well."

By schools, the College of Arts and Sciences has 1,201 students; College of Technology, 506; School of Graduate Studies, 329; School of Business, 302; School of Education, 257; and Theological Seminary, 439.

Among undergraduates, there are 650 first and second year freshmen, 383 sophomores, 322 juniors, 463 seniors and 188 students in various other categories. Among graduate students, there are 768 students taking master's degree programs, 128 in doctoral degree programs and 132 others, Dr. Leshner said.

In addition to the 3,034 students described above, there are 20 students involved in special work and study programs around the world, while another 310 undergraduate students are enrolled in programs leading to an Andrews degree offered at three affiliated foreign colleges—the Adventist Seminary of West Africa in Nigeria, Helderberg College in South Africa and Newbold College in England. This adds to an overall total of 3,364 students involved in educational activities related to Andrews University this fall, Dr. Leshner said.

ASI Holds Convention on Campus

Adventist-Laymen's Services and Industries (ASI) held its annual convention at Andrews in September, according to Kenneth H. Livesay, executive secretary and treasurer of ASI.

The purpose of the convention was twofold, Mr. Livesay said. The first was fellowship, the sharing of common concerns and solutions to common problems. The second was spiritual growth of members.

In Mr. Livesay's words, "ASI is an association of concerned laypeople who want to proclaim the gospel in their work, to share their convictions in the marketplace."

Half of the seminars at the convention dealt with professional concerns, the other half with spiritual ones. Speakers at the convention included Ron Halvorsen, pastor of the Takoma Park Church in Maryland; Terry Carson, who presented the Hialeah (Florida) Hospital report; Gerald von Pahlen Fedoroff, an attorney; Allan Buller of Worthington Foods, Inc. (Worthington, Ohio); Henry Martin of Auto Martin, Inc., a Mercedes-Benz dealer from Oregon; Mark Finley, director of the North American Division Evangelism Institute in Chicago; and Charles E. Bradford, vice president for the North American Division of the General Conference.

Mr. Livesay said ASI has nearly 600 dues-paying member businesses worldwide and another 300 that participate in ASI activities on a less formal basis. Approximately 800 people came to Andrews for the convocation. Requirements for membership are a desire to share the gospel in the marketplace and a minimum of two employees. Examples of the types of business persons or businesses that are members of ASI are physicians, construction firms, car dealers, private schools, health care institutions, dentists, chiropractors, funeral homes and "mom & pop" stores.

Mr. Livesay pointed out, "We don't force religion on anybody, but the result of the witness of ASI members is probably hundreds of baptisms each year. From millionaires to gas station operators these entrepreneurs have one thing in common, a desire to lift up Jesus in everything they do."

Speech and Hearing Clinic Serves Local Community

Nearly 1,500 people who attended the 1984 Berrien County Youth Fair took advantage of hearing screening conducted by the Andrews Speech and Hearing Clinic, according to Roy Hartbauer, director of the clinic and professor of communicative disorders.

Of those tested nearly 80 were found to have significant hearing problems, Dr. Hartbauer said. Nearly all are getting follow-up evaluations done at the clinic to determine the exact nature of their problems and what should be done to remedy them.

Dr. Hartbauer said that the screening would not have been possible except for the loan of a trailer by Gyl Kasewurm, a former student of speech and hearing pathology at Andrews.

Nearly five percent of those tested had hearing problems. This corresponds to the national average, Dr. Hartbauer said. "Though we did nearly 20 tests per hour, and we had seven people working, we couldn't keep up with the demand."

According to Dr. Hartbauer, the Speech and Hearing Clinic at Andrews provides complete audiological diagnostic evaluations, therapy, hearing aid dispensing and orientation, lip reading and sign language instruction.

Dr. Hartbauer is a recognized expert in the field and has published a number of books for professionals who deal with hearing and speech impaired individuals. They include: "Pastoral Care of the Handicapped," "Aural Habitation: A Total Approach," "Counseling in Communicative Disorders" and "Take the Words Right Out of My Heart." Dr. Hartbauer also teaches a class at the seminary in voice and diction for pastors.

Quarter of Alumni Contribute to Andrews

One out of every four Andrews alumni supported his or her alma mater with unrestricted contributions last year—up from one in 10 four years ago.

Last year, 25.7 percent of Andrews' alumni contributed $207,390 to the university for unrestricted use. For increasing alumni support, Andrews received a check in October for $35,675 from the Business Executives Challenge to Alumni (BECA) fund.

The increase is due largely to incentives from the five-year, $2 million BECA campaign. The challenge program was formed in 1979 by Adventist business people who wanted to see the level of alumni participation increase from its then 6.5 percent to at least the national average of 24 percent for private colleges.

Eleven Adventist colleges are awarded the challenge money for acquiring new donors and exceeding the previous year's fund-raising totals to a certain limit. Goals set for each college according to its alumni's pattern of giving, and decreases annually as individual schools establish a better base of support.

Goals for Andrews for 1984-85 call for $220,000 to come from 26.9 percent of the alumni. At stake is a $26,000 challenge grant from BECA. (See the alumni news section of this issue of FOCUS for more information on BECA.)

Academy Students Receive Honors

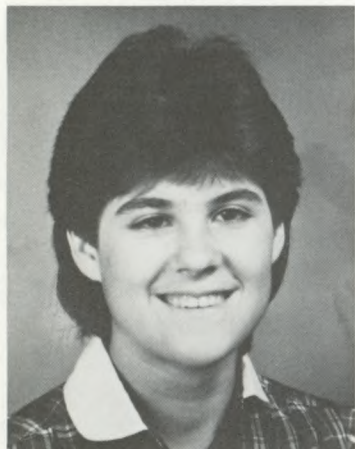

Drew A. Johnson and Lauriellen Stankavich, seniors at Andrews Academy, have been designated Commended Students in the 1985 Merit Program, according to Richard T. Orrison, principal.

According to Dr. Orrison, these students placed in the top five percent of the more than one million students who participated in the 30th annual competition. They have received a letter of commendation from the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), sponsors of the competition.

An officer of the corporation stated, "The exceptionally high test performance of these young people, named as commended students in the highly competitive Merit Program, are deserving of recognition in their communities. They are a credit to their schools and their communities and a valuable resource in a nation that values excellence."

Participants entered the current Merit Program by taking the PSAT/NMSQT tests in the fall of 1983 when most of them were juniors. NMSC announced the names of the 15,000 semifinalists for the 5,500 merit scholarships in September. The 35,000 commended students nationwide scored slightly below the level required for semifinalist standing, Dr. Orrison said.

Bogdanovich Named Officer for Industries

The Andrews Industries Management Committee (AIMCO) met in July and appointed Michael Bogdanovich chief executive officer of Andrews Industries responsible for day-to-day operations, according to Herbert Pritchard, chairman of the committee and a member of the Andrews University Board of Trustees.

Mr. Bogdanovich has been on the Andrews faculty since 1979. Also, Norman Trubey was named controller/treasurer and Sandra Chilson was hired as the accountant.

Andrews Industries is comprised of six independent businesses: Apple Valley Market, College Wood Products, University Printers, Berrien Bindery, Electronic Design Company and Cum Laude Motel.

The committee, which met for the first time in April this year, addressed business matters such as marketing, productivity, financing expansion and modernization of the university-owned businesses.

At the meeting the philosophy of operations, objectives, performance standards and marketing plans for all six businesses and the home office were discussed, Mr. Pritchard said.

Originally proposed as a corporation by the Andrews Board of Trustees Executive Committee in September 1983, the purpose of AIMCO is "to manage and direct the business activities of entities owned by Andrews University." AIMCO now acts as the director of Andrews Industries.

The purpose behind the university's business operations is to provide as many work opportunities for students and their spouses as possible, Mr. Pritchard said. "It is a new day for the university's industries. We expect great things and Mr. Bogdanovich and Mr. Trubey are doing their best to see the goals realized," said Mr. Pritchard.

Freshman Receives Chemistry Scholarship

Roger H. Pak, a freshman chemistry major and graduate of Westmont High School, Westmont, Ill., has been awarded a $5,000 Dow Chemical Company Foundation Undergraduate Scholarship for the current school year, according to Dr. Robert A. Wilkins, chairman of the chemistry department.

To continue to receive this award for future years, Mr. Pak must maintain a 3.0 grade point average in credited courses and continue studying at Andrews toward a career in chemistry, Dr. Wilkins said.

Mr. Pak had an outstanding high school record and ACT scores, Dr. Wilkins said. He also said that Mr. Pak was valedictorian of his class, a National Merit Finalist, an Illinois State Scholar and participated in the Argonne National Laboratory Program studying heterogeneous catalysis on zeolites. In addition he was a student of the year, American Legion Award winner and president of the National Honor Society at Westmont High School.

Dr. Wilkins explained that Andrews is one of 20 colleges and universities nationwide to be awarded the scholarships in 1984. The program actually provided $24,000: $6,000 per year for four years to each institution. Of this amount $5,000 is designated for a scholarship and $1,000 for the discretionary use of the chemistry department to assist the educational process.

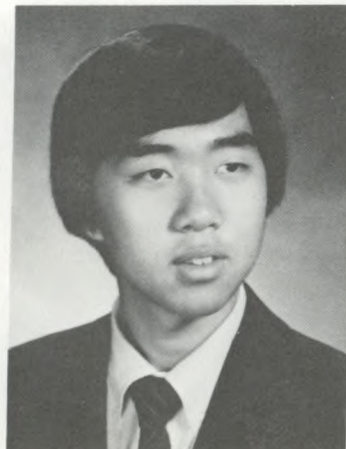

"Andrews is honored to be involved in such a scholarship program," Dr. Wilkins said. "With this award we have been named among some of the top chemistry departments in the country."

The scholarship is a result of the Dow Company Foundation's recognition that schools which award bachelor's degrees make an important contribution to the pool of qualified chemists and graduate chemistry students, Dr. Wilkins pointed out. He also noted that Andrews has received such scholarship money in the past. In the last five years graduates of the chemistry program here have entered notable graduate programs at schools such as Purdue, Notre Dame, Michigan State, Cal Tech and others.

Navy Reserve Chaplains Meet on Campus

Andrews hosted members of Surfiant Rel 113 (Surface Fleet Atlantic Religious 113), a regular U.S. Navy drill unit of reserve chaplains as they visited the seminary in October, according to Gerhard Hasel, dean of the seminary.

Dr. Hasel said contact with the group came through seminary students, David Girardin and Mario Ceballos, who are reserve chaplains. Pastor Ceballos explained the purpose of the group's visit to Andrews: "Adventists haven't been very visible in the armed forces in the past due to the church's position on non-combatancy. But now we have chaplains and enlisted men in every branch of the service. The armed services are recognizing our particular views and doctrines and seeking to provide ministries that meet the needs of enlisted Adventists."

Roger H. Pak

The chaplains heard presentations on the Adventist perspective on service in the armed forces. C. Mervyn Maxwell, chairman of the department of church history, spoke on the development of the church's non-combatant alternative in military service. Robert Johnston, professor of New Testament theology, spoke on "War and Peace, A Theological Perspective." Miroslav Kis, assistant professor of ethics and former member of the Yugoslavian Army, explored the ethics of military service for Adventist Christians.

The final presentation concerned counseling of the non-combatant and was presented by Commander H. Eslinger, Adventist chaplain at the Great Lakes Naval Base in Illinois.

The chaplains meet regularly at Fort Custer in Battle Creek on Fridays and Saturdays for paperwork and seminars. The seminarians usually join them on Friday and have conducted Sabbath worship services for the group on several Saturdays. Among the chaplains most of the major denominations were represented, including Jewish, Catholic and Protestant. All of the chaplains are also full-time pastors of churches in Michigan. In addition, one student from the University of Notre Dame, a Catholic priest, was part of the group.

Industrial Management Program Continues

The new industrial management program offered at Andrews during the 1983-84 academic year is beginning to prove itself in the quality of graduates it produces, according to Wes Shultz, dean of the College of Technology.

One student has already completed the program and is employed as manager of a new industry at San Pasqual Academy, Escondido, Calif. Two other students will complete the program this school year. After they have completed their internship quarter, job placement in an industry located near an academy is virtually guaranteed, Dr. Shultz said.

According to Dr. Shultz, the industrial management program is a 1 + 1 arrangement. A student may receive a certificate after one year at Andrews which will enable him to step into a supervisory position. The second year leads to an associate of technology degree that equips the graduate to fill a managerial position.

Study has been given to adding two more years to the program which would concentrate on business classes and lead to a bachelor of technology (B.T.) degree. The B.T. degree would prepare students for managerial positions at any level and in any size industry.

Dr. Shultz pointed out that the best feature of the program is its flexibility. A student can take as much or as little of the program as he feels he needs. Credit may be assigned for work experience the student has had before beginning the program. This can reduce the amount of time spent in the classroom.

A student entering the industrial management program with no prior work experience or college credit can expect to spend a minimum of seven quarters in the program. This includes six academic quarters and one internship quarter.

"We feel we are producing a new breed of managers, people ready to successfully take charge of any situation that comes their way. We're looking for 'people people.' The key to good management is knowing how to lead people," Dr. Shultz said.

"We've been told that we could easily place 20 to 25 graduates each year. This program could open up a new way for academies to provide students with jobs, and for entrepreneurs to expand their businesses," Dr. Shultz said.

Persons interested in the industrial management program can call toll-free, 800-253-2874 from anywhere in the country; in Michigan, call 800-632-2248; or contact the dean of the College of Technology at Andrews at 616-471-3413.

■ Administrative secretary Ruth Merkel has earned the Certified Professional Secretary (CPS) designation this year, according to the Institute for Certifying Secretaries, a department of Professional Secretaries International. She is among 1,138 secretaries in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Jamaica, Malaysia and South Africa to be so designated. Mrs. Merkel has worked for Andrews for more than eight years and is secretary to Richard W. Schwarz, vice president for academic administration.

The CPS rating is achieved by passing a two-day, six-part examination administered by the institute and by fulfilling work and educational requirements. As the recognized standard of measurement of secretarial proficiency, the CPS examination includes six parts: behavioral science in business, business law, economics and management, accounting, communication applications and office administration and technology.

■ Promotions and new appointments to the Andrews faculty and staff include the following for this academic year: Bjornar Storfjell, assistant professor of archaeology and history of antiquity at the seminary and curator of the Horn Archaeological Museum, has been appointed seminary librarian. Mr. Storfjell has been part of the seminary faculty since 1981 where he taught Old Testament classes.

Teaching faculty appointments include: Raoul Burchette, instructor in mathematics; Don L. Dockerty, assistant professor of accounting; Jacques Doukhan, associate professor of Old Testament interpretation; John F. Duge, associate professor of health education; Renee DuPree, instructor of nursing; Pamela Sue Dutcher, instructor of communicative disorders; Keith R. Gaden, associate professor of physical therapy; Barbara Gatewood, elementary school music teacher; Elias G. Gomez, director of the Institute of Hispanic Ministry and associate professor of Hispanic ministry and church leadership; Roger Dudley, director of the Institute of Church Ministry; Randall G. Jacobsen, instructor of automotive technology; Loretta Johns, assistant professor of business education; Alvin M. Kelly, assistant professor of management; Marcia Kilsby, instructor of medical technology and James R. Massena, assistant to the director of the computing center and senior programming analyst.

Other faculty appointments include Keith Mattingly, assistant professor of religion; Michael McBride, assistant professor of church administration and pastoral counseling; James R. Newkirk, assistant professor of technology education; Ray Paden, instructor of information and computer science; Jon K. Paulien, assistant professor of theology; Norm R. Perry, associate professor of business law; Agniel Samson, visiting professor of church history and world missions; Carolyn Scorpio, grade six elementary school teacher; Morris L. Taylor, professor of music; W. Daniel Weston, assistant professor of engineering technology and Cleon White, mathematics instructor at the academy.

Three faculty members recently received promotions in academic rank. They were Karen Cooker to assistant professor of accounting, Teresa M. Regester, to assistant professor of nursing, and John C. Banks, promoted from assistant professor to associate professor of anatomy and physical therapy.

Dorothy Heidtke: Dressing Up Dreams

by Lynn Oliver

Thirty years ago, a friend of Dorothy Heidtke's was busy with wedding plans. When Mrs. Heidtke inquired how she could help, her friend replied, "Make my wedding dress."

Three decades and more than 300 dresses later, Mrs. Heidtke is still creating perfect wedding dresses for brides-to-be.

"I got into it to save girls money," says the secretary to the director of the James White Library. "Besides, it's always a lot of fun."

Usually a girl will come to Mrs. Heidtke with a magazine picture of the dress she wants, but some have no ideas.

"I think the girls who come to me want their dress to be representative of our church's standards. So many girls tell me that the wedding dresses in stores have extremely low necklines."

As the wedding-dress maker, Mrs. Heidtke often becomes personally acquainted with the family of the bride, and witnesses those poignant events that make some weddings so memorable.

She recalls a wedding a few years back in which the bride's parents—particularly the father—took a keen interest in all aspects of the wedding plans. The father was especially intrigued with the dress Mrs. Heidtke was making and wanted to know about each step. While driving his daughter back to Andrews after Christmas break he was involved in a serious car accident. As a result he was paralyzed from the waist down. At the wedding however, he insisted on escorting his daughter down the aisle, which he did in his wheelchair.

Mrs. Heidtke usually allows three to four weeks to create a wedding dress. She prefers to begin the dress several months before the wedding to prevent last-minute pressures. However, girls coming to her only two weeks before a wedding still have been able to have a custom-made dress.

Her husband, Harold, professor of biology at Andrews, also is involved in the process. He takes pictures of the bride-to-be in her completed gown at the final fitting. The photos are placed in a picture album of the girls for whom Mrs. Heidtke has made dresses.

Merry Culver Gottschall '80, had her wedding dress sewn by Mrs. Heidtke in 1981. "I've always liked to design dresses, and Mrs. Heidtke was able to take my design and turn it into a dress. I've received a lot of compliments on it," says Mrs. Gottschall.

For more than 300 young ladies, Dorothy Heidtke has helped make one of their most treasured dreams come true, and earned a special place in their memories.

Robert Schwab: Mountain Man

by Eugene Hamlin

Robert Schwab wants to climb all 68 mountains in the contiguous United States that are higher than 14,000 feet.

"I've climbed 20 so far," he says, "so I have a ways to go." Mountains loom as a challenge to him. "When I don't have a goal to work toward, life is uninteresting," he says.

Mountaineering provides a diversion from his work. He teaches business management at Andrews. "Our most successful climbs have been well-organized, so in that regard there is a similarity between my climbing and my profession."

In 1979, Dr. Schwab and two friends spent nearly 24 hours on Mt. Hood in Oregon. "On that climb we felt that the Lord was with us," he says. At 4 a.m. they started their climb up the sheer north face. Mid-morning found them resting after crossing a difficult ice field. Without warning a giant boulder the size of an automobile rolled directly toward their resting area.

"Whooze, it came down right between me and my partner, and there was only 50 feet between us," Dr. Schwab says.

By sundown they reached the summit, and with darkness settling in they chose the easier south face for their descent. It was no easy matter on a moonless night. Fog rolled in and obscured familiar landmarks.

The lead man became disoriented, and they wandered off course. "It took us till about three in the morning to sort out what had happened," Dr. Schwab recalls.

He admits that mountaineering can be dangerous. "You really don't want those kinds of things to happen," he says, "but inevitably they will happen from time to time."

Dr. Schwab has never been seriously injured while practicing his hobby, but he was on a mountain once when a man was killed. A rope team had slipped. The lead man fell over to his death. Dr. Schwab saw the team bringing up the body.

"Climbing is not as safe as we might wish it were. It has danger. But if you use your head and are reasonable in your approach to climbing, you can have a good experience."

Reaching the summits of mountains more than 14,000 feet high has a religious dimension for Robert Schwab. "Of course we're not saying that we are climbing up to where God is," he says, "but we perceive how grand and glorious even this sinful world is. It is amazing how beautiful it is. It kind of makes you wonder what heaven might be like."

Miroslav Kis: Minister and Craftsman

by T. Lynn Caldwell

The study of God is one of the oldest disciplines known to man. For Miroslav Kis, assistant professor of Christian ethics in the seminary, the discipline of theology is tied with another age-old discipline—that of measuring time. Dr. Kis is a teacher by profession and a watchmaker by trade.

In the early 1960s young Miroslav Kis faced an important crossroad in his life. By law in his native Yugoslavia, his education could continue only if he attended school on Saturday. Resolving to remain faithful to his Sabbath convictions, he pursued his only alternative—trade school. Since he excelled in math and science Miroslav was tested and then accepted to study watchmaking and repair.

"The training was very detailed," he says, "much more so than one would find in America. I was expected to learn how to work on many different types of timepieces, from tower clocks to ring watches. I used to climb up steeples and work on huge church clocks with my car tools."

After trade school Miroslav opened a watch-repair business of his own. He took great pride in his craft. "Sometimes I would be offered a repair job that I knew might take weeks to complete. Even though I knew I would lose money on it I would take the job anyway. Watchmakers often do that because of our love for our trade."

His pride in his work was evident in other ways. "Once I was called to work on a church clock that had not run consistently for some time. While examining the clock for damage, I found a screw that had been put in the wrong place. The moment I removed the screw the clock began to run again on its own." With the problem apparently solved, Miroslav wanted to make sure it would be permanent. Thus he refused payment for repairs on the church clock until six months later, when he was sure it would continue to work properly.

After owning his own business for several years Miroslav accepted a call to the ministry. Now, as a professor in the seminary, he pursues his former trade during his spare time. And because it was once his means of livelihood, it is now more than a hobby for him.

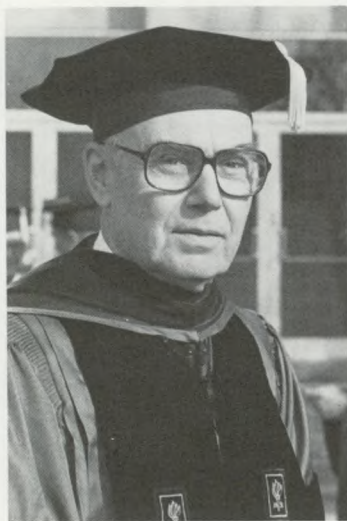

"Working on watches relaxes me," he says. "It gives me a feeling of accomplishment. I know there is no problem that I cannot solve in watchmaking, whereas in ethics there are many that go unsolved."

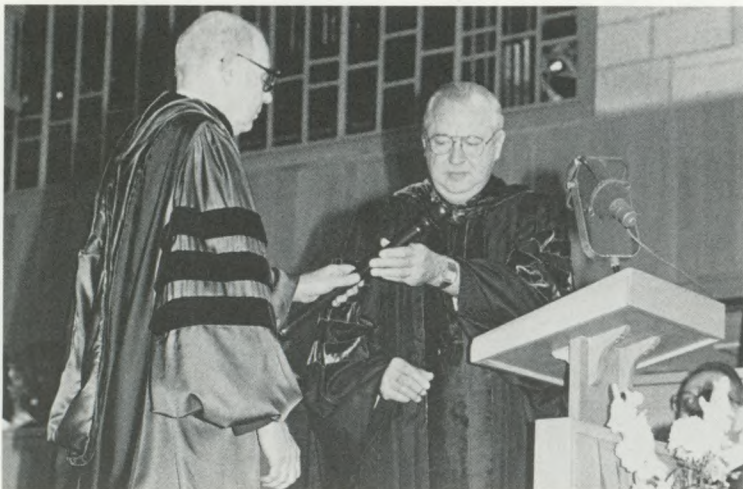

Dr. Kis likes to work with his hands. That is why he is skilled in carpentry also. "I think it is important for teachers to have practical skills," he says. And so Miroslav Kis is a minister who practices what he preaches.

Ceremony and celebration are signs of a cohesive community. On the weekend of October 19-22, 1984, Andrews University came together to reaffirm its own identity and mission in a series of impressive ceremonies and simple celebrations. The occasion was the formal installation and Inauguration of the fourth president of the University, W. Richard Leshar. On the following pages FOCUS attempts to capture, in a collage of scenes and statements, some of the excitement and significance of that special weekend.

"The primary mission of this university is to educate students and this is principally carried forward by its faculty in the classroom. Yet it is the president who sets the tone, the climate, the spirit for the instruction that takes place. We look to you for leadership—leadership that will encourage; leadership that will foster an open and honest search for truth in all fields of knowledge."

Among the many university trustees who participated in the inauguration were R. Ellsworth McKee (left), and G. Ralph Thompson, who spoke for church on Sabbath.

CONSTANTINE ART EXHIBIT

Homecoming Weekend will feature an art exhibit by Greg Constantine, 1985 Honored Alumnus and Chairman of the Art Department. Constantine's latest paintings and drawings will be on display in the Art Center Gallery all day Friday and Sunday morning.

STUDENT MOVEMENT CELEBRATES 70TH ANNIVERSARY

The Alumni Board is planning a reunion of former Student Movement editors and advisors including Friday meetings, tours and production of an historical slide program. Former editors and advisors will receive a personal letter and invitation during February. In addition, the Student Movement staff plans to produce a 70th anniversary magazine issue and will be contacting former Student Movement staff for information. We welcome your suggestions, stories, information and ideas on these projects.

HERITAGE ROOM FEATURES HISTORICAL EXHIBITS

The Heritage Room staff extends a warm invitation to returning alumni to reminisce with photographs and memorabilia from honored class years - both on-campus and in the Berrien Springs area. A recently acquired window and other items from an Interurban railroad car will be on display. A local collector and Interurban historian may be available for informal discussions on Friday if enough interest is indicated.

DEPARTMENT OF BEHAVIORAL SCIENCE 20TH ANNIVERSARY

A one-day conference featuring presentations by former faculty and students on "Careers Of Behavioral Science's Department Graduates" will be held Friday, April 25. Information and registration available upon request.

STEEN HOUSE-HONORS HOUSE OPEN

The former residence of President Thomas W. Steen, 1935-1937, is being refurbished by the Andrews Honor Society and will be open during Homecoming Weekend as interest is indicated.

ISSUES IN ADVENTIST HISTORY

A panel presentation by leading church historians on Seventh-day Adventist denominational history is being planned by the History and Political Science Department. The Sabbath afternoon panel will be followed by an open discussion involving the audience.

FRIESTAD FAREWELL

Miss Arlene Friestad, who is retiring after 30 years as Lamson Hall residence dean, will be honored at the Gala Banquet Thursday evening and featured during "A Tribute to Arlene Friestad" on Sabbath afternoon. A special Alumni board committee is planning these events and a letter-writing campaign to former Lamson Hall residents. (See also "Friestad" notice in this section.)

Thelma A. (Chew) Smith, '25 (Dp.), '27 (B.A.) has spent her professional lifetime as a missionary, Bible instructor and teacher in China, Hong Kong and Taiwan. What makes her unique was her choice to dedicate her life to serving the Chinese people when her husband was murdered shortly after their arrival in China. A book entitled In Spite of Danger was published on Thelma's life in 1969. Though currently retired and living in Angwin, California, she returned to Taiwan for a teaching term in 1981.

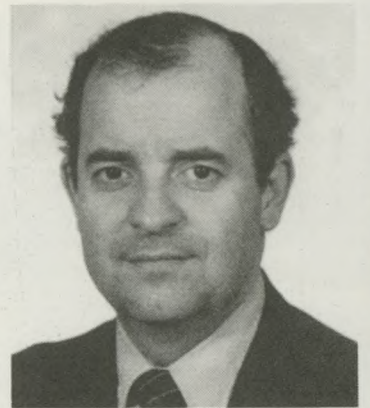

Dr. Steven P. Vitrano, '45 (B.A.), '58 (M.A.) has served as pastor-evangelist, missionary-evangelist and religious educator. He was featured in Who's Who in Religion, 1975-76. He has had several books, as well as many articles, published. Vitrano's latest work, a lectionary for Adventist ministers based upon an Adventist Christian year, will soon be published in Ministry Magazine. He is currently teaching at the Andrews University Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary.

Bruno Steinweg, '33 (B. Th.), '48 (M.A.) has served as pastor/evangelist, religious educator and college mission and union administrator in the Lake Union Conference and South American Division. He prepared the Sabbath School lessons and teacher's helps on "Christ Our Righteousness," first quarter 1974. He is spending his retirement teaching Theology at Central Union American College.

Virginia (Duffie) Steinweg, '35 (B.A.) has served as a teacher in Greek, church music and English. She has served as choir director, organist and pianist. In 1979 her book on the life of M.L. Andreasen, Without Fear or Favor, was published. Virginia served as Associate Editor of the Student Movement, which is celebrating its 70th anniversary this year. Although retired, she teaches Greek and theological English at Central Union American College.

Gregory J. Constantine, '60 (B.A.) is an internationally recognized artist. He has had five one-man shows in New York and seven European tours. He is the author and illustrator of Vincent Van Gogh Visits New York, published in 1983. His latest book, Leonardo Visits Los Angeles, is due for release in 1985. Constantine is Chairman of the Art Department at Andrews University.

Dr. Fritz Guy, '55 (M.A.), '61 (B.D.) served the Andrews University Seminary as professor of theology from 1977 to 1984. Prior to 1977 he spent 16 years at Loma Linda University where he taught and was Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. Guy has published numerous articles, as a member of noted professional organizations and has contributed to the Westminster Dictionary of Church History. He is currently associate pastor of the Loma Linda Church of Seventh Day Adventists.

Dr. Phyllis J. (Brown) Acosta, '55 (B.A.) has served as nutrition educator and consultant. She has numerous publications in the nutrition field and was named Florida Outstanding Dietician in 1984. Since 1959 she has been actively involved in developing methods of nutrition support for infants, children and adults with inherited diseases of metabolism. She is currently Professor and Head of the Department of Nutrition and Food Sciences at Florida State University, Tallahassee.

W. Richard Lesher, James L. Fisher, Richard W. Schwarz

"This is truly your day, O God, and we rejoice in it. We remember that in the past you have sent the right leader at the right hour and we believe that this is still true now. There is joy and gratitude in our hearts. Dr. Lesher has already won our affection and our confidence. We have felt his dedication to your service and he has already shown that he will be a man whose word will not need to be questioned."

Daniel A. Augsburg
Professor of Historical Theology
Prayer of Inauguration

"We are here today to rededicate ourselves to the historic and spiritual roots of Andrews University and to announce our commitment to a progressive spirit of learning and new frontiers. All of this is personified by this extraordinary and tested fourth president of Andrews University, Dr. W. Richard Lesher."

"In higher education, for reasons that are understandable, too many of us have taken the more comfortable but less effective role of manager rather than leader. Yes, management is important, but our good future will almost exclusively depend on leadership, not management."

"I love the admonition . . . 'Ready! Fire! Aim!' The effective corporation acts. It moves more like a skeet shooter than a rifleman. Most of the shots hit, but some miss. We learn from our mistakes and we can continue and we forget them."

"People who are members of an excellent organization are almost poetically committed to the institution. They do not have to count, weigh and measure it. Their commitment goes beyond facts and figures and is without regard to adversity. While members of this kind of community are often argumentative among themselves—for conflict is the essence of any healthy organization, particularly a university—in effect the institution and the individual are one."

James L. Fisher
President, Council for Advancement and Support of Education
Inaugural Address

"As Notre Dame's Theodore Hesburgh has said, 'Any president who is not heard outside the campus is not worth being heard inside.'"

James L. Fisher

"In time, you [Dr. Leshner] will have traveled to the fringes of the earth in response to requests for the university's services. But I would caution you not to attempt to do this in your early years in office. Your effectiveness off campus will depend much on your effectiveness on campus."

Charles B. Hirsch

"Finally, as the glow of this occasion fades away and the realities of the responsibilities form into focus, we want you to know that along with the authority and the prerogatives of the office invested in you go also our heart-felt prayers and cordial assurance to work with you in whatever way that will best serve the future growth and the development of Andrews University. May the Lord bless you."

Charles B. Hirsch
Chairman, Board of Trustees
Inaugural Charge to the President

Dr. Leshner met with the press prior to the inauguration service.

Andrews Alumni

Faculty Research Highlighted at Homecoming

Alumni are invited to participate in a research progress tour of selected faculty research projects during Homecoming Weekend.

Faculty will explain the purpose of their projects and the current status of their findings. Research will include those studies which are university-funded, as well as those receiving support from outside sources.

This tour will enable alumni to be informed on the latest discoveries being made at Andrews University. Dates, times, and locations will be provided to alumni indicating research tours on their preregistration form.

Member of Class of 1917 Still Waterskiing

She jogs two miles a day when she's home and has worked as a volunteer on 28 Maranatha projects. She holds several church offices and is a volunteer at the local hospital in her area—and whenever her friends invite her to go waterskiing, she won't be left behind. Sound like the energetic college student that lives next door to you? Guess again. Arabella Williams, at 87, is believed to be the oldest woman water-skier.

"I thank God for my many blessings—especially my health. And I am happy wherever I am," she says with a shy smile.

Mrs. Williams (BA '17) has been all over spreading this happiness. She and her husband worked as missionaries in Peru and later in Brazil where they raised three children and she delivered hundreds more as a midwife. After her husband's death she returned to Andrews University to teach in the modern language department. "I wanted to settle someplace where my children could have a good Christian education," she said. Her children are Wandier Moore, Maureen (Moore) Carpenter and Ennis Moore.

Her work for the church also includes nine years at the General Conference office developing parent education programs for use at campmeetings and two years as a teacher at Pacific Union College.

Remarried and widowed again, she lives in Escondido, Calif. During the past 20 years there she has put in thousands of hours as a volunteer "Pink Lady" at Palmar Memorial.

Working with Maranatha Flights International, Mrs. Williams has painted siding in the Yukon Territory, helped put roofs on two buildings in Mexico, helped build a medical launch for use on the Amazon River in Brazil and climbed ladders to tile ceilings in North Dakota. "I'm in good shape so I'm able to help carpenters and painters," she said in an interview with Modern Maturity magazine. "When that's done, there's always plenty of cleanup work to do."

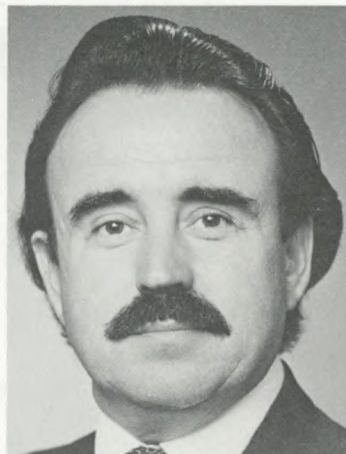

Looking ahead, Mrs. Williams plans to "keep doing everything I'm doing now and come back to Andrews campus for the 70th reunion of the class of 1917."

Phonathon 1985

Faculty in more than half of the academic departments at Andrews are calling former students during the second quarter Phonathon. Participation in the Departmental Incentive Program, started during 1984, credits budgets of qualifying departments with a percentage of both the dollars raised and the BECA challenge money.

The faculty and the alumni association identify the personal contact with alumni as the primary benefit of this program. In a few minutes conversation the caller can answer questions regarding Andrews' and the departments' current programs, and provide information on homecoming and other alumni activities. In addition, the alumni can provide updated personal, family and professional information for their records.

Have you heard from an Andrews' faculty member? If not, perhaps we don't have your correct telephone number. We don't want to miss talking with you this year. Will you send your number to the alumni office soon?

Conrad A. Reichert

Reichert Heads Alumni Chapter Committee

Conrad A. Reichert, '64, '67, recently agreed to a request by the alumni board to become chairman of a committee to develop and promote alumni chapter organization and activities.

Dr. Reichert's work in promoting Andrews University alumni chapters will be directed toward facilitating communications and contacts between alumni and promoting the interests of the alumni within their own ranks.

Two chapters—Hong Kong and Loma Linda, Calif.—have reported chapter organization and election of officers this year.

The constitution of the Andrews Alumni Association provides (1) that each chapter shall elect a president and secretary; (2) that the chapter presidents shall serve on the Board of Directors as associate officers; (3) that the full board shall convene at the Annual Session, including chapter presidents or their designated representatives.

Article VI of the bylaws further states that any alumnus or alumna of Andrews University may take the initiative in organizing a local alumni chapter with the approval of the executive secretary and president of the association with the consent of the board of directors.

Guidelines spell out the structure of each alumni chapter.

The annual session of the board will convene in 1985 during homecoming weekend, April 25-28. A "Handbook for Alumni Chapters" is available from the alumni office upon request. This booklet, a printout of area alumni and other information, will be sent to the 1985 officers reported by the chapters.

After his graduation from Andrews, Dr. Reichert taught in the church school system in the Ohio Conference, at Union Springs Academy in New York, at Cornell University and at Andrews University. He received a Ph.D. in psychology from Cornell University in 1970 and since that time has been engaged in teaching, research and professional consultation in the field of mental health.

Dr. Reichert has written more than 40 publications, is a member of several professional associations in the area of mental health, and has served as an officer in several of these associations. In 1980 he established the firm Conrad Reichert and Associates in St. Joseph, Michigan, which provides mental health consultation to the courts, business, industry and the health professions.

HOMECOMING Featured Speakers

H. M. S. Richards Jr. (MA '60), Director-Speaker of the Voice of Prophecy

Leo Van Dolson (BD '65), Associate Director of the General Conference Sabbath School Department and Editor of the Adult Sabbath School Lesson Quarterly

Pioneer Memorial Church
April 27, 1985

"By virtue of being Andrews alumni," says Dr. Reichert, "these individuals are business, professional, spiritual and thought leaders around the world. I believe that the establishment of a network linking Andrews alumni would result in the enhancement of their business, professional, personal and spiritual lives."

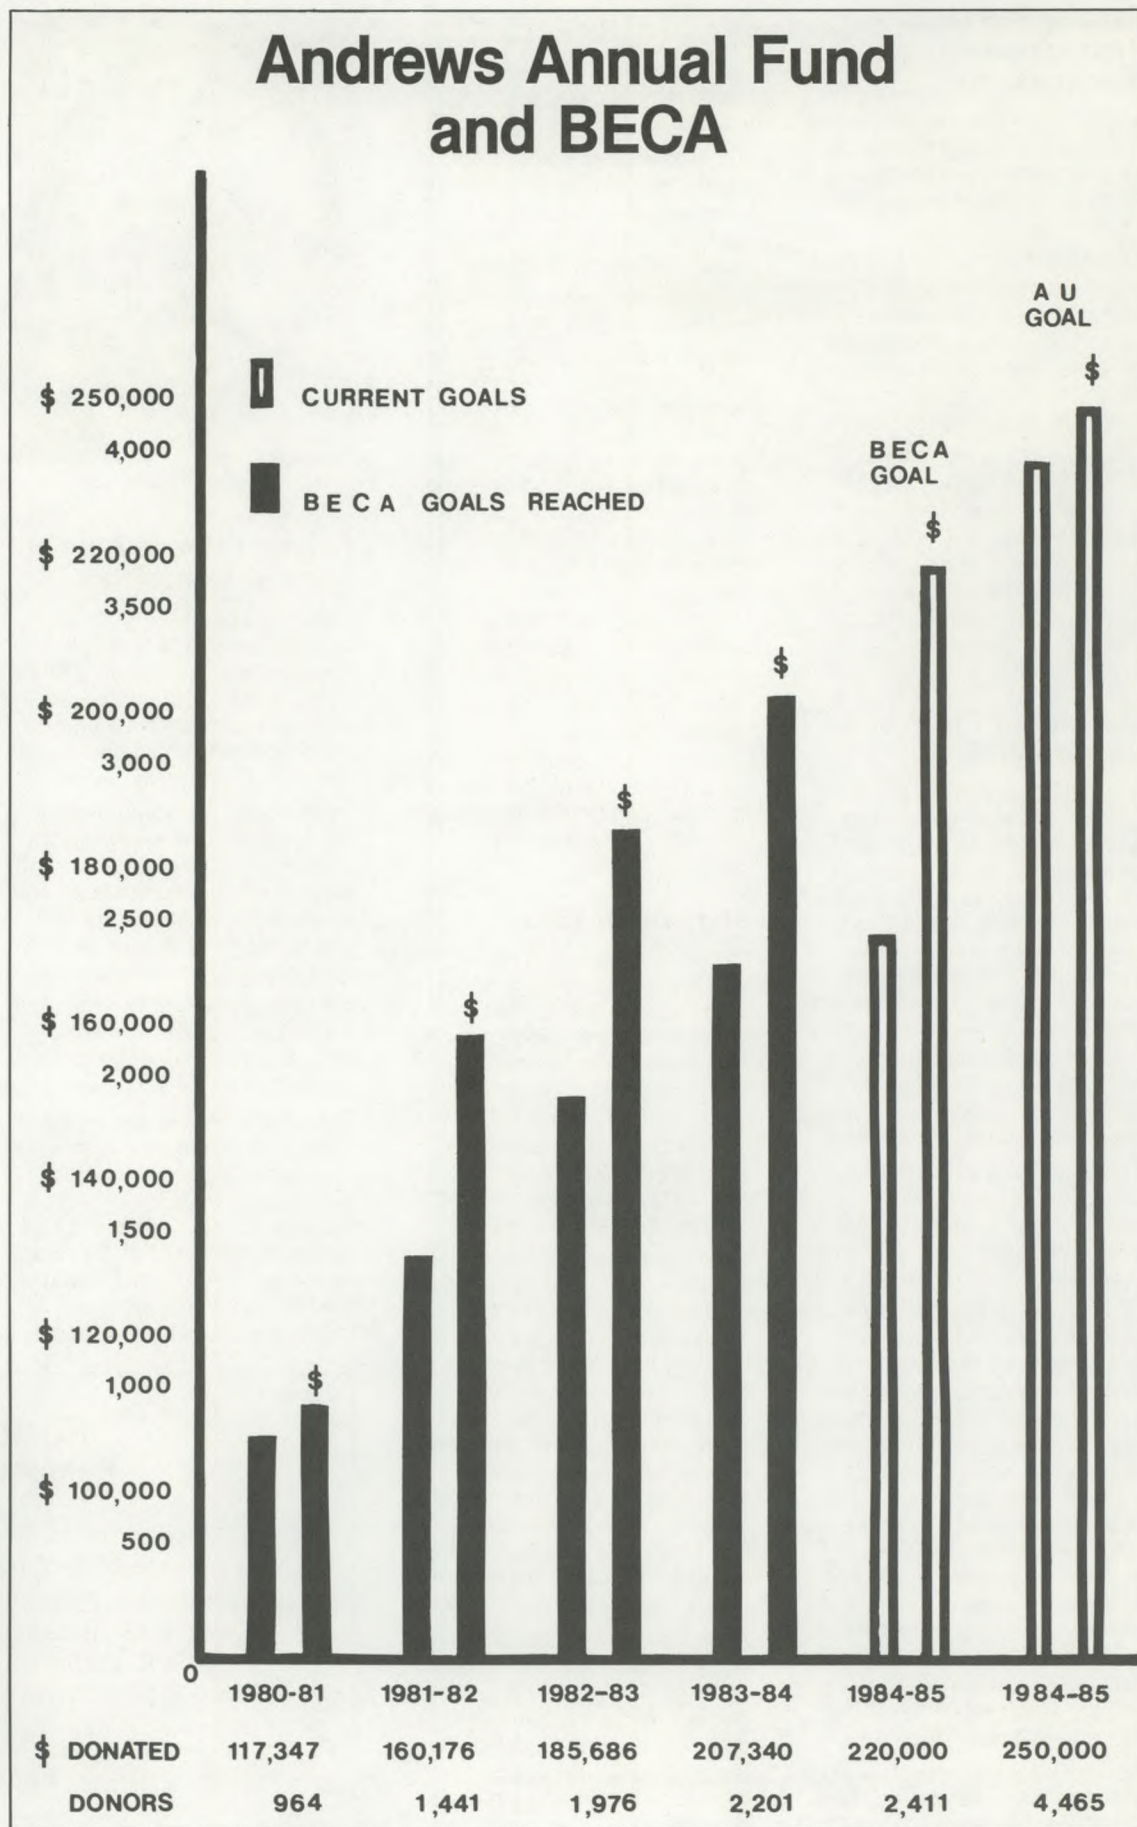

Benefits of BECA

- More than doubled the number of alumni making unrestricted gifts to the annual fund.
- Improved alumni records and recordkeeping systems. In October 1984 more than 9,000 current telephone numbers were obtained for the 1985 Phonathon by matching names and addresses through a telemarketing service.
- Increased faculty participation. The Phonathon Departmental Incentive program makes it possible for faculty to personally contact all former students with phone numbers.
- $100,000 in BECA challenge money awarded in 1983 and 1984 is providing:
 - $30,000 to match money raised by departments and combined with grants from Whirlpool Foundation and Zenith Corporation to purchase 70-100 microcomputers for use in academic departments and learning resource centers.
 - $10,500 to qualifying departments in the 1984 Phonathon for equipment budgets.
 - $50,000 to refurbish the Student Lounge in the Campus Center.
 - $9,500 to be assigned to other capital projects.

Meet old friends—on Homecoming Weekend, April 26-28, 1985.

Advancement

Recent Grants Total Nearly $40,000

Grants and other funds awarded to Andrews in recent months are earmarked for research, equipment purchases, scholarships and special projects, according to Albin Grohar, director of foundation research at Andrews.

For the third year, the Sage Foundation of Detroit, Michigan, awarded Andrews $10,000 for scholarships to be given to students whose grade point average is 3.5 or above.

Household International of Prospect Heights, Illinois, has made a $10,000 gift from its higher education program in response to the university's plan to continue to implement a free enterprise lecture series.

Features of the series at Andrews this year are a lecture by John Gavin, president of Ace Hardware in February, and the Midwest Honors Conference to be held on campus in April, according to Malcolm Russell, associate professor of history and economics, and coordinator of the series.

The physics department received $9,000 from Research Corporation of Tucson, Arizona, for further research on glassy semiconductors. Clark Rowland, professor of physics, said this research, begun in 1982 with a grant of $3,100 from Research Corporation, will be of significance to solar energy technology.

The Horn Archaeological Museum just received a grant from the Michigan Council for the Humanities in Lansing to implement a public exhibit and series of lectures titled "Sign, Symbol and Script." The exhibit, scheduled to be open from January 2 to March 17, 1985, deals with the origins of writing and the alphabet.

The James White Library received two grants recently. The Michigan Library Network awarded $2,600 to aid the library to continue its efforts in placing bibliographic entries into a computer program.

Also, the United States Department of Education provided a grant of $890 from its Library Resources program for the purchase of periodicals and bibliographic items.

The Presser Foundation provided a $500 scholarship to be matched by the university. The scholarship was awarded to Edwin Disla, a senior voice major from the Dominican Republic.

The Andrews music department has received a $1,000 memorial donation in the name of Rowland Pitts (class of '22). The memorial, an unrestricted donation from friends, relatives and music colleagues, will be used for new sound equipment in the music building. Specific items will include a laser disk player, as well as a turntable, amplifier and cassette tape deck.

Memorial Scholarship Endowed by Moores

An endowed scholarship of $5,000 has been set up by Ennis and Marceil Moore, longtime residents of Berrien Springs, Mich. The Ennis Valentine Moore and Arabella Moore Williams Memorial Scholarship was created by the Moores as a tribute to his parents. The scholarship was opened in 1978 with a gift of $275, "because I wanted to honor my parents with something that would live on as long as time lasts," said Mr. Moore. The scholarship fund was completed this past summer.

Mr. Moore is a self-employed piano tuner. Mrs. Moore BS '54 worked for 21 years as a nurse. Arabella Moore Williams is an alumnus of the class of 1917 and served on the Andrews faculty from 1938 to 1947. (see page 00).

The scholarship is unrestricted; a needy and worthy student will be identified as a recipient by the financial aid office on campus.

Seminary Receives Videotape Equipment

Two videotape units, complete with cameras, recorders and monitors mounted on portable equipment stands, were donated to the Theological Seminary through the contributions of Merton and Albert Parfitt, in behalf of the James Parfitt family of New London, Wis.; Dr. Gilbert and Betty Turner of Upland, Calif.; and Mrs. C. Roy Smith Sr., of Berrien Springs, Mich. The portable video recorders and cameras are Panasonic models. The color monitor televisions are 19-inch RCA models. The cost to purchase this equipment was $5,500.

According to Steven Vitano, professor of preaching and field education at the seminary, much of the training of the church and ministry department is skills training, such as preaching, evangelism, counseling and other areas of pastoral ministry such as weddings, funerals, committees and board meetings. He pointed out that in many skilled disciplines videotape has revolutionized teaching methods. Videotaping allows students to see themselves and evaluate their performances more objectively.

Letters

It was a real pleasure for my wife and me to attend the 40 year class reunion of our 1944 class, but it was a little startling to find that my name had been changed on that occasion. There were only nine of us there for the picture and I gave my name to the photographer, I believe. Don't recall seeing Carl Smith there—don't know what he'd think of tagging his name as me! Anyway, just wanted to let someone know that we read FOCUS and look at the pictures too. We do enjoy your good magazine and all the news it has.

Ross E. Hughes
Blountville, Tennessee

Greetings from the South Pacific. At Fulton College, Fiji, we regularly receive a copy of FOCUS from Andrews University. I for one greatly enjoy the contents of each issue . . . I am wondering if graduates in affiliated institutions are placed on the mailing list for FOCUS? If not, could this be considered?

D. B. Foster
Head of Theology Department
Fulton College

The alumni office says the 1984 graduates of Andrews affiliates have been placed on the FOCUS mailing list, and all future graduates will be also. Graduates before 1984 are urged to send us their names and addresses if they are not currently receiving the magazine. The Editor.

. . . I received the winter 1984 edition of FOCUS and noticed what seems to be an omission of Avondale College among the institutions listed on page 25. Avondale College offers by extension the master of arts in religion and has done so since 1980. We have been very appreciative of the good graces of Andrews University in this respect as it provides a service to this part of the world.

Arthur J. Ferch
School of Religious Studies
Avondale College

Thank you for drawing our attention to our omission of Avondale in the list of extension programs offered by Andrews. We are pleased to be of service to the constituents of Avondale College. The Editor.

I always read with interest news of Andrews University's progress, especially those involving former professors, friends and acquaintances and the music department. Thanks for keeping me informed. I enjoy the articles and photography too (so does my husband who is not an Andrews graduate).

Travel Tours

Biology Tour South Pacific

The Andrews biology department will sponsor a South Pacific tour Aug. 28 to Dec. 11, 1985. The group of 16 must be formed and final reservations made by March. It is recommended that application be made immediately, according to Dennis Woodland, professor of botany and one of the tour directors.

Up to 12 college credits may be earned during the 13 weeks of travel and study in Hawaii, Australia, New Zealand and Tahiti.

During these springtime weeks in Australia the group will visit the Great Barrier Reef, tropical rain forests, central deserts including Ayre's Rock, Perth in S.W. Australia, Adelaide, Melbourne, Canberra and the Sydney and Brisbane areas. Both north and south islands of New Zealand, where unique botany and birds are found, will be included in the tour.

By utilizing modest facilities and camping in modern campgrounds the costs will be held as low as possible. Besides air travel from the west coast of North America, 8 to 10,000 miles of surface travel is planned by rental vehicles. Total fees including transportation, lodging, side trips and tuition will be about $4,300. The cost of food will be on an individual basis and should be quite nominal (about $400), Woodland said.

Dr. Woodland and Dr. Asa Thoresen, also of the biology department, will lead the tour. Courses offered will be ornithology, five credits; biogeography, five credits, and two credits are available for special projects. Tuition charges are a flat rate of $1,100 (included in the $4,300 quoted above). For application write Biology Department, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104 or call (616) 471-3243.

Ogden to Lead Scandinavian Tour

Copenhagen, Stockholm, Oslo and Helsinki are major stops on the Scandinavian Holiday tour this year, July 29 to August 21.

Visits to famous museums such as the Royal Copenhagen Porcelain Museum, shopping for Scandinavian handcrafts, and hiking in the fjord region of Norway are highlights of the trip.

Jointly sponsored by the Andrews University and Union College Alumni Associations, the 24-day tour will be led by veteran tour guides Merlene Ogden, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Andrews, and David Bauer, formerly vice president of public relations and development at Andrews, now vice president of Hinsdale Hospital in Chicago.

Cost of the tour is $2,495 per person. For more information, write to Merlene Ogden, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104, or call A-1 Travel: in Michigan, 616-473-3300; nationwide, 800-468-6868.

Study Tour Planned For Holy Land

"This tour assures every participant of an authentic experience in the lands of the Bible," says W. John Hackwell, field representative of the Institute of Archaeology at Andrews University and one of the leaders of a study tour of Jordan, Israel and Egypt scheduled for July 31 through August 2, 1985.

Stops on the "In the Footsteps of the Exodus" tour include Petra, Jericho, Ein Gedi, Qumran, Caesarea, Hebron, Jerusalem, Galilee, Cairo, Luxor, the Valley of the Kings and more.

"The tour is designed with General Conference delegates, pastors and students in mind, and immediately follows the Biblical Archaeology Conference at Andrews from July 8 to 11," says Lawrence T. Geraty, director of the institute and also a leader of the tour, "but Andrews alumni are also welcome."

Cost for the three-week tour is $1995. Participants may choose to take the tour for five hours of graduate credit, available at regular tuition rates.

For a brochure and reservations, write to W. John Hackwell, Institute of Archaeology, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104, or call 616-471-3273.

Announcements

Psychologists and Counselors Wanted

The development of a network to share expertise, professional referrals and educational resources is one of the goals of the yet unformed Adventist Association of Psychologists and Counselors, according to Wilfred Futcher, professor of research and statistical methodology at Andrews.

Says Futcher, "There is an increasing need for a roster of Adventist psychologists and counselors from which potential educators and health care providers may be available for the growing psychological needs in Adventist health systems, universities and colleges."

Other purposes include developing resource networks for sharing expertise, professional referrals, and an increased opportunity for supportive sharing among colleagues. It is expected that the association may have an annual meeting where members could meet and share philosophies, practical experiences and research. From these meetings the association might eventually publish presentations and short papers in a newsletter.

Counselors, psychologists and graduate students are invited to send their names, addresses and brief vitas to: Adventist Psychologists and Counselors, Educational and Counseling Psychology, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104.

Biblical Archaeology Conference Scheduled For July

Biblical chronology, evangelism and archaeology, and the Dead Sea Scrolls are among the topics to be presented at the 1985 Biblical Archaeology Conference sponsored by the Institute of Archaeology on the Andrews University campus, July 8 to 11, 1985.

"Topics and speakers for this conference have been selected to bring you up to date with the cutting edge of research in biblical archaeology," says Lawrence T. Geraty, director of the institute.

Speakers include William Shea,

Kenneth L. Vine, Larry G. Herr, Keith Schoville, Abraham Terian, James K. Hoffmeier, Siegfried Horn, E. R. Thiele, W. John Hackwell and Dr. Geraty. The preregistration fee is $59. For reservation information, write to W. John Hackwell, the Institute of Archaeology, Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104, or call Mr. Hackwell at 616-471-3273.

Singers Sought for G.C. Session Choir

Experienced choir singers are needed for the choir which will sing for services on the second weekend of the General Conference Session, July 4 to 6 in New Orleans, according to Harold Lickey, Oliver Beltz professor of sacred music at Andrews.

Individuals or groups may apply to Dr. Lickey at Andrews University, Berrien Springs, MI 49104, or call 616-471-3121. Applicants should include a resume of choral experience.

History of Writing On Display at Museum

What do hand-colored pages from a medieval Bible, a Japanese scroll and an American Army poster have in common? All three help tell the history of writing in "Sign, Symbol & Script: An Exhibition on the Origins of Writing and the Alphabet." This exhibition will be on display at the Horn Archaeological Museum on the Andrews University campus from January 2 through March 17, according to Lawrence T. Geraty, director of the museum. "Sign, Symbol, Script," was produced by the department of Hebrew and Semitic studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisc., and the Milwaukee Public Museum with grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Wisconsin Humanities Council and other contributors. Following its display at the Horn Archaeological Museum the exhibit will travel to the Denver Museum of Natural History and the Maryland Science Center before completing its national tour on Oct. 20, 1985 under the management of the Association of Science-Technology Centers.

Before making a gift, other sources of funding—corporations, foundations and friends of the college—often want to know how many of the alumni are supporting their alma mater.

After all, it's the graduates who benefit the most from a college. And if they don't believe in their alma mater, why should anyone else?

Without your annual gifts, many Adventist young people would find it difficult to obtain a Christian education. And your college might go out of business.

When you contribute, others do too!
