A new model for the wind quintet of the future, The City of Tomorrow (COT) was recently awarded First Prize in the wind division of the 2011 Fischoff National Chamber Music Competition. As strong advocates for the expansion and quality of wind quintet repertoire and performance, the COT gave the North American premiere of Italian composer Franco Donatoni’s quintet “Blow” at Northwestern University in December, 2010. They also champion the four quintets of George Perle, the works of David Maslanka, David Lang, and Lee Hyla in addition to breathing new life into 20th century classics. The COT experiments with lecture-concert formats to bring audiences closer to understanding lesser-known works. The City of Tomorrow is a touring group based in Chicago, Washington, D.C., and Portland, Oregon.

The City of Tomorrow musicians include: Lauren Cook, the newest clarinetist of the United States Navy Band; horn player Leander Star who created his own music school in Evanston, Illinois; Amanda Swain, bassoonist and winner of the 2010 Meg Quigley Vivaldi Competition; flutist Elise Blatchford who tours Latin America regularly with the YOA Orchestra of the Americas; and Andrew Nogal who has been spotted playing oboe (and oboe d'amore and bass oboe) with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra on their MusicNOW concerts as well as new music group Ensemble Dal Niente.

Their program will include Samuel Barber's Summer Music, Woodwind Quintet No. 4 by George Perle, Pavane pour une infante defunte by Joseph-Maurice Ravel, Elliott Carter's Woodwind Quintet and Quintet for Winds No. 3 by David Maslanka.

"...It might not be a city at all, but a vaporous landscape, the valleys all flooded with the dolorous chords of unwritten songs, the mountain tops cold and forbidding, waiting for the climbers of the future to seek them out." ~ Billy Collins

Chart-topping Christian singer Francesca Battistelli stands out among other artists with her soulful pop-tinged sensibilities and a rich, beautifully nuanced voice. Her creative spirit shines in the relatable lyrics she pens. The goal of her music is to bring something authentic to the scene that Christians and non-Christians alike listen to.
