Shorty after the devastating earthquake of 2010, Maranatha provided One-Day buildings for education, worship and emergency housing in Haiti. Many of the buildings are now used as school facilities in the city of Port-au-Prince. Maranatha is now working on a more permanent solution for the island nation’s needs. One-Day School classrooms with strong metal walls will provide much-needed infrastructure for years to come.

Maranatha has begun an initiative to build 100 One-Day classrooms in areas affected by the earthquake. The project is funded by ADRA and will provide classroom space for more than 4,000 children per shift of school.

Maranatha crews are busy preparing the foundations for a 28-building elementary school campus to be located at the Adventist University in Port-au-Prince.

For news from Haiti’s frontline – watch this clip from the recent Maranatha Convention.

Maranatha’s first volunteer project in Uganda is just days away. The prep team is busy getting things ready for the group near Kampala, Uganda. Volunteers will build more than 20 One-Day School classrooms, plus bathrooms and part of the girl’s dorm at Bugema Adventist University.

The advance team has moved 50,000 pounds of steel out of three large shipping containers, and raised scaffolding for the upcoming construction.

This project begins on November 2. Keep the volunteers in your thoughts and prayers for the next couple of weeks as they work, play, and pray.

There are a few more opportunities yet this year to volunteer on a Maranatha project.

Berkshire Mission group organizes at least one mission trip with Maranatha each year. This November they’ll be travelling to the beautiful island of Guanaja, off the coast of Honduras. Many tourists travel to the Bay islands for site-seeing, diving and resort relaxation. Guanaja doesn’t have as many tourists as nearby Roatan, but lots of breath-taking natural beauty. The group will be building a One-Day Church and completing it with block walls, near an Education and Evangelism Center built there by Maranatha volunteers in 1999. Workers are needed. So if you are ready to mix concrete and lay block on an island paradise, call Maranatha right away. The project will take place November 22 - December 1.

Maranatha is providing two great opportunities to volunteer during the Christmas/New Year holidays. Our Christmas Family Project has been popular for many years. Bring your family to Nicaragua December 21 - January 2, to help build six One-Day School classrooms and paint the Chinandega Adventist School campus.

We also have a Christmas Open Team Project December 22 - January 2. All volunteers are welcome on this project (as space allows). The group will build a library, paint and do other landscape and repair work at the large Choluteca school in Honduras.
If you are interested in any of these projects, please send an email to volunteer@maranatha.org or call us at (916) 774-7700. We are happy to help find the best project for you.

As a young boy in a remote part of Ethiopia, Adu Worku was trained by his father to be a subsistence farmer. While a teenager Adu suffered an accident that crushed his father’s hopes. However, the injury set Adu on a different path—one that would eventually lead him to an Adventist school where he would start first grade at the age of eighteen.

Watch Adu tell his story at Bound for the Kingdom, an online review of this year’s Maranatha Convention. You will also find video clips of other captivating stories told throughout the weekend.
