Colorado Flooding — Survivors will need your ongoing assistance. The flood waters are still hampering transportation, and washouts and mud slides will be making some roads impassable for months. People won't be able to return to their homes until roads are repaired which could take as long as a year in some places. The flooding response has been the largest rescue effort since Hurricane Katrina.

Emergency supplies are being positioned near the flood areas for distribution as soon as access is available. At this time, Adventist Community Services Disaster Response (ACS DR) has been unable to do a complete assessment because of communication difficulties, still-standing water and mud and the unknown factors in much of the hard-hit areas that will need the most help and materials. Most of the thousands who have to be evacuated are still being sheltered by friends, family and the government. Once the water has receded a bit more, it will be possible to set up collection and distribution centers, working in cooperation with the city, county and state for donation management. So far, there is one ACS center which has been set up in Loveland (more). Others will be opened as travel becomes possible. Check the ACS website, the NAD ACS DR Facebook page, and the Rocky Mountain Conference website for the latest news about churches and Adventist families, and for information about needed donations and daily updates about locations.

The greatest need is always for financial donations which enable ACS to make large bulk purchases for needs specific to the affected area and that are logistically available via roads open for travel.

Download a church bulletin/information flyer in English in color or black and white. A Spanish translation will be available soon, also linked on the ACS website. Print them out and make them available in local stores and offices as well as at church, for people who may want to help.

Read an update from Rocky Mountain Conference about local churches and members affected by the flooding.

A new Adventist Community Services video is now available. It tells about the work of ACS all over the Division following recent disasters. It will also be used for the ACS Offering appeal in December. This is an excellent time to share it with others on your website and Facebook page, to let others know how ACS responds and is available at times of disasters. Watch it at the ACS Colorado information page.

On September 15, I had the privilege of attending the meeting of the Board of Directors of the SDA Church in Canada in Oshawa, Ontario. The work in Canada is thriving and there is a positive sense of unity. One illustration of this was the report presented by Mark Haynal, president of Canadian University College. He gave an outstanding report where he described his experience and that of several college students as they presented evangelistic meetings in the Dominican Republic.

During the same visit, I was given a tour of the new offices of ADRA Canada in Newcastle, Ontario. The building will house the activities there for years to come.

On September 17, I was in Lincoln, Neb., to chair the Board of Christian Record Services for the Blind. A very exciting new initiative for Blind Veterans was discussed. This new ministry will provide "talking books" for military veterans who have been blinded. God is blessing this 'faith' ministry in many ways. — Dan Jackson, president, North American Division

REACH: Revival and Transformation
Revival happens with a spirit of prayer, Bible study and warm Christian fellowship

Praying down Chicago's crime rate wasn't the result of just a once-a-week prayer meeting. When, in January 2012, some pastors of the Chicago, Ill. area were trying to learn what God was calling them to do, they spent 10 nights in prayer together via teleconference. God seemed to tell them that if they wanted to be agents of transformation, first, they needed to be transformed. Since then, they've been meeting via teleconference every night to pray for the 12 most violent precincts of Chicago. They pray not only that people won't be killed, but they also worship and claim Scripture for their salvation.

For a year it seemed like nothing was happening, and January 2013 was a terrible month for homicides, but they kept praying. Suddenly, in February 2013, homicides dropped, and continued to be so low in March and April that local media began to ask, "Why the dramatic drop in homicides?" and surprisingly identified prayer as a possible reason. That's when they learned that a local Baptist pastor and congregation had also been praying for fewer homicides. There were 36 fewer murders in March 2013 – a 69% drop compared to March 2012.

What if this prayer ministry were to spread? Read more in the September 2013 Lake Union Herald, p. 13.

Massive amounts of rain have caused extensive flooding along the Front Range of Colorado. Boulder and adjacent communities have fared the worst, but there has also been flooding in many communities. Estes Park, Lewisville, Longmont, Loveland, and Aurora are some of the hardest hit.

According to Craig Carr, ministerial director for the Rocky Mountain Conference, three members of the Boulder Seventh-day Adventist Church have lost their homes; one couple from Lyons, and an individual who lives in Jamestown. Both Lyons and Jamestown were completely cut off from emergency access because of roads being washed out by floodwaters.

There was minor damage at the Boulder Church. There is also some reported damage in the basement at the Estes Park Seventh-day Adventist Church, but the extent is not yet known.

Blake Jones, pastor of the Twin Peaks Adventist Church in Lewisville shared that the flooding began in their area during prayer meeting last Wednesday evening. Approximately 20 members had gathered for prayer meeting when water started flooding into the church and filling the basement.

The head elder called a phone tree alerting members, and within minutes there were about 50 people at the church building a makeshift dam to divert the river of water that was flooding the church.

Before they could divert all the water, about two inches had accumulated in the basement of the church. One member with an industrial shop-vacuum was able to get most of the standing water out of the basement, while other members rushed to rent carpet cleaners. They were told that they would be added to a list, since there were over 800 calls in ahead of them.

On Friday, with many of the roads impassable because of flooding, Jones headed out to see if it was even possible to drive to the church. He spotted a restoration company van parked on the side of the road. He spoke to the driver and told him about the Twin Peaks church basement. The driver said, "It’s the weekend, and this is the Lord’s house, so I’ll come set up some fans and a dehumidifier for you right now." Because of that little miracle, the Twin Peaks church basement is back to normal already and won’t even need to report an insurance claim.

"If we hadn’t had a good attendance at our prayer meeting,” says Jones, "we would have certainly had the entire basement flooded!” He continues, "But that prayer meeting turned into the fastest ‘church work bee’ in history! I’m so thankful for all the members who showed up to help us avoid a major calamity.”

Please continue to pray for the thousands that have been impacted by this disaster.

God in Shoes, a ministry for women by women affiliated with the Seventh Day Adventist Church, will host a week-long slate of activities starting today in Grand Island.

“God in Shoes is a ministry to underprivileged women and their families to encourage women in the many roles they deal with and to educate and empower them to cope even better with their lot in life,” said Sue Carlson of Topeka, Kan., women’s ministry leader for the Kansas-Nebraska Conference.

“People are stressed out and money is short and life can be downright depressing. We want to be the hands and feet of Jesus to give hope, encouragement, and to empower those in need in whatever ways we can.”

Mary Gallagher is the Grand Island Seventh day Adventist Women’s Ministry Leader. Carlson is in Grand Island this week to help local church members with the activities, which start today with a free Family Fun Day at Stolley Park.

From noon to 6 p.m., families can take part in games, races, face painting, and entertainment including a bouncy house, clowns and piñatas. A free picnic lunch including grilled hot dogs and watermelon will be served.

The group will also host four seminars Monday through Thursday evenings at the Fonner Park Cafe. There is no charge to attend.

“This is a a time to learn tools to help (women) with their daily lives whether it’s parenting, healthier living, finances, self-defense, etc.,” Carlson said. “The topics vary from community to community. A meal is provided for the whole family and so is childcare for toddlers through fifth grade during the seminar times so parents can actually listen and learn from the seminars. Seminars are presented in Spanish as well through the use of simultaneous translation through headsets for anyone who requests that.”

In addition to a free meal, each evening the group will give away baby gift baskets to mothers with children under 1 year of age, while supplies last.

The Grand Island seminar schedule includes:

“Help Your Kids Make the Grade in School,” presented by Regina Harvey, principal of the Platte Valley Adventist School in Grand Island, 5 to 8 p.m., Monday.

“Live Longer, Stronger, Healthier & Happier,” presented by Sarah Fil, physician’s assistant, 5 to 8 p.m. Tuesday.

“Raise Happy, Positive Children,” presented by Buffy Halvorsen, marriage and family counselor, 5 to 8 p.m., Wednesday.
p.m. Wednesday.

“Make Your Money S.t.r.e.t.c.h.” presented by Shelly Jaquez, who describes herself as a “financially savvy mom,” 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday.

The week will wrap up with a free spa day for women from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday in the Fonner Park Cafe.

“This is their time to relax and be pampered and know they are important too,” Carlson said. “Facials, massages, manicures, a spa gift bag and a new pair of shoes go into making this a day for them to feel treasured and valuable.”

Childcare will be provided for toddlers through fifth grade. A finger food buffet will be served as well.

In addition to the Family Fun Day and the seminars, God in Shoes Ministries also works with local agencies and helps them increase the good work they are already doing by collecting non-perishable foods to give to local community pantries to distribute to needy area families, Carlson said.

“Community service projects such as painting at a local shelter are also included in the work we do. We’ll be painting three rooms at Hope Harbor this coming Monday and Tuesday mornings,” she said. “And food collected locally will be distributed to local food banks.”

For more information, email Carlson at scarlson@ks-ne.org.
Castle Rock Adventist Hospital opened in August 2013 in Castle Rock, Colo., and was designed and built by Orlando, Fla.-based HuntBrady Architects. Hospital leaders applied their faith-based mission to features such as a large community garden, a locavore-driven restaurant, an outdoor demonstration kitchen, environmentally friendly and sustainable architecture, and a hospital planned around evidence-based design principles to positively impact the healing environment. The four-story, 219,000-square-foot hospital was the second phase in a master plan developed by the architect and followed a 25,000-square-foot emergency and imaging department that opened in 2012. The new hospital joins the ED/imaging wing and is designed to blend with its western locale and mountain views.
Wythe County expo to focus on health and liberty

By MILLIE ROTHROCK Staff | Posted: Thursday, September 12, 2013 6:00 am

The Seventh-day Adventist Church is sponsoring an expo this weekend that members hope will help the community learn about two issues: living a healthy life and religious liberty.

“It’s designed to help the community learn more about how to have a healthy life and what religious liberty is and what is happening around the world regarding religious liberty,” said Chaplain Jim Cox.

He estimates that 69 percent of the world’s population lives in areas without religious freedom.

“That would be awful, wouldn’t it?” he said.

The free Religious Liberty and Health Expo will be held Friday and Saturday at the Wytheville Meeting Center. It kicks off Friday, when various health tests will be offered to participants, including diabetes screening, blood pressure checks, a three-minute cardiac test and a bone density test.

Information will also be available about eye health, diet, depression, dentistry and pediatrics.

Exhibitors include Wythe Eye Associates, Wythe County Community Hospital and Circle Home Care/Hospice of Southwest Virginia.

Lectures on health and religious liberty begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday and continue on Saturday. The Folk Mountain Gospel group will provide music.

Lecturers include Charles Cleveland, who will speak on “Outsmarting Diabetes,” Friday at 7:15 p.m. Next, at 8:15 p.m. Lincoln Steed, editor of Liberty magazine, will discuss liberation theology.

Lectures on diet, nutrition and religious liberty continue on Saturday.

“In this world health is very important and the SDA Church is a believer in helping people have better health,” Cox said. “We also are seeing religious liberties as well as other liberties slowly disappearing and we believe Lincoln Stead can enlighten us a great deal on that subject.”

Church wants to help meet needs

By Cathy Spaulding

Muskogee’s Seventh-day Adventist Church now has three times the space — and a more convenient location — to help the community.

The church opened its new Community Service Center on Tuesday in a shopping center at the corner of York and Hancock streets.

“We like to help people in the community with their needs,” said center director Mary Juarez. The center offers used clothing of all sizes, plus small appliances, toys and household items.

The center will be open 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesdays and 9 a.m. to noon Wednesdays.

“We also expect to give food to the needy in a few weeks,” Juarez said, adding that a food pantry will be set up in a separate room.

“The location is really a gift from God,” pastor Perry Flerchinger said.

The congregation had operated a community center at its church, 170 N. Country Club Road, until June, Flerchinger said. The church opened a school in the room where the center was located.

“I said ‘let’s pray about a new location’ and God opened doors for us,” he said. “The new location is perfect as an outreach to the community. It’s bigger in size and this miraculous location even has washer and dryer hook-ups.”

Church volunteer Anna Carter said she welcomes the opportunity to wash and dry donated clothing at the center.

“Everything is laundered,” Carter said as she removed lint from a throw blanket. “We get some clothes that would be real nice, but it would be wrinkled.”

Carter said the center is “one of the best projects there is.”

“We give to the community,” she said.

Juarez said many of the clothes and other items came from the center’s previous site. But the church also got plenty of donations for the new location. She showed a stack of 13 boxes full of clothing, personal products and toys.

“The son of one of the volunteers knew we needed items,” Juarez said. “He sorted items and made sure they were clean.”

Volunteer Kathy Jones said the new center has space for exercise classes, cooking classes or seminars. She said she sees the center ministering to people’s physical, spiritual and emotional needs. The clothing and other donations, plus exercise classes, could help physical needs, she said.

“And we always pray for the people who come by so they would receive a blessing,” Flerchinger said, adding that the center also offers books and Christian literature.

“The emotional aspect is that they’re a happier person if we help them out,” Jones said.

“Then they’ll go on to help others,” Flerchinger said.

The center also will offer help to people affected by disasters such as floods and tornados, Jones said. She said several members were trained to work with disaster victims.

“We will work with FEMA and the American Red Cross to make sure donations are distributed,” she said. The Muskogee church also will work with larger Seventh-Day Adventist bodies to help with disaster relief through the state and nation, she said.

Upgrades turn up the volume on Adventist radio ministry

The new high-frequency curtain antenna at Adventist World Radio’s flagship studio in Guam will broaden the ministry’s reach in Asia. The antenna is part of a $2.9 million studio upgrade dedicated last week. [photos: AWR]

Sep 10, 2013 – Silver Spring, Maryland, United States ANN staff, with reporting by Shelley Nolan Freesland

A multi-million dollar upgrade dedicated last week at Adventist World Radio’s flagship studio in Guam will broaden the scope of the radio ministry’s outreach across Asia, administrators say.

The $2.9 million upgrade features a new radio tower and a high-frequency curtain antenna designed for even greater long-distance transmission. The antenna allows Adventist World Radio to transmit simultaneous broadcasts, reaching listeners in multiple countries during their respective peak listening times. It also gives the radio ministry arm of the Seventh-day Adventist Church options to shift scheduling.

“God wants us to ask for miracles. He wants us to ask for something extraordinary. As we stand here today underneath all of this infrastructure, we can truly say that this is an answer to prayer,” Adventist world church President Ted N. C. Wilson said at the dedication ceremony.

The first phase of the update, which was completed last year, included the relocation of one of the existing towers to accommodate the new antenna. The second phase involved pouring 820 pounds of concrete to ground the new 229-foot radio tower.

AWR officials called the update “crucial,” allowing listeners in key countries such as China and North Korea to receive better-quality signals and tune in to prime time broadcasts simultaneously. Previously, the studio was only able to broadcast during prime time in one country or time zone at a time.

The governor of Guam, Eddie Baza Calvo, spoke at the ceremony and recognized the significance of the Adventist Church’s radio ministry. “What greater mission can any human being or any enterprise have than to spread the good news?” he said.

Adventist world church
President Ted N. C. Wilson speaks at the dedication ceremony in Guam last week.

Wilson’s father, the late Neal C. Wilson, was instrumental in establishing Adventist World Radio during his administration and cut the ribbon when the studio was first dedicated in 1987.

The dedication ceremony was held directly on the antenna field at the base of the newest tower, giving attendees a first-hand look at the results of the two-year project. Typically, such a project would take five years to complete, AWR officials said.

Brook Powers, chief engineer for AWR Guam, said he “saw the hand of God leading in this project,” which he said hinged on a small team of workers, “an incredible amount of equipment and a whole lot of blessings from God.”

AWR President Dowell Chow expressed appreciation for the construction team and the “many generous donors” who contributed to the project. “We thank them many times over for the passion and commitment they continue to show for AWR’s ministry and for carrying the voice of hope to the hardest-to-reach people of the world,” he said.

The studio in Guam currently offers programs on health, family and spiritual life in 34 languages across Asia, reaching a potential audience of 3.5 billion in countries such as China, North Korea, Myanmar and Vietnam, where traditional outreach is difficult. The studio has operated for 26 years.

Worldwide, AWR broadcasts programs in nearly 100 languages through shortwave and AM/FM radio, on demand and through podcasts.

“Surprised by Love” is a 10-part DVD Bible study series by Elizabeth Talbot based on her book by the same title. In this series you will meet Jesus in a more intimate way than ever before as you learn what the Bible reveals, from Genesis to Revelation, about His amazing role as our Go’el (Kinsman-Redeemer).

This series is perfect, not only for your women's ministries group, but also for women in your community. All women need to know that Someone loves with unconditionally with a forever love.

“Surprised by Love” is available from your Adventist Book Center and from AdventSource. There is a Leader's kit which includes a Study Guide (workbook), a Leader's Guide that makes giving Bible studies amazingly easy, and two DVDs containing all ten sermons.
