Beneath the Shadow

I was recently at a funeral for a young woman. The mood was somber, but the scene was beautiful—glowing taper candles, dozens of flowers, hundreds of loved ones packed into the church to celebrate her life and to mourn her death. But that day the most beautiful sight in the church was the Easter cross. Easter had passed a couple of days before, but the cross remained on the platform, and there it stood: still draped in the royal purple, surrounded by resurrection lilies. And so we mourned the loss of a daughter, sister, mother, friend, while literally beneath the shadow of an empty cross, the sign of the Living Savior.

We’ve labeled one day in the year “Easter” and on it we remember the resurrection of Christ from the darkness of the grave. On that day the Lord of Life tore through the blank, heavy curtain of death—and in so doing, opened the way for those who trust in Him to follow. Jesus said to the mourning Martha, “I am the resurrection and the life.” Jesus is our resurrection and our life. Jesus is the One.
