Dear Center for Adventist Research,

According to calculations, later this year the world’s population will surpass 7 billion. Imagine, 7 billion people!

Of those, nearly 5 billion do not know God’s saving grace. In fact, some 3 billion may not have even heard of Jesus!

What inspires you? What gives you hope? Imagine never knowing that God loves you!

Thanks to you, for 74 years Quiet Hour Ministries has been sharing the saving grace of Jesus Christ with the world. Your support has enabled us to share the gospel in more than 135 countries!

This year, Quiet Hour Ministries will send 209 evangelism teams, consisting of 461 volunteers, to 16 countries around the globe. What does this mean for you? It means that your support of our 2011 summer evangelism drive will make it possible for more than 125,000 people to be reached!

Now is the time to share Christ.
There is an urgent need around the world for the gospel. Millions of people are looking for answers. They want to know about Jesus!

Every week we hear more stories of tragedy. There are earthquakes, wars, diseases and poverty. But you can give the world hope!

You can reach 25 people for just $40. Your donation will support our evangelism teams as they share the good news with children of God throughout the world. It will provide medical care for impoverished children of God. It will give them a Bible to read the truth for themselves in their own language. Just $40 will reach 25 people who have never heard the gospel of saving grace!

Anna is a teacher in Baqua City. During our recent evangelistic series there, she asked two of our mission volunteers to come talk about Jesus in her public school classroom. Even though this was illegal, the boys managed to tell the students about creation and salvation in their classroom, opening up dialogues that will hopefully lead them to Jesus. Against the principal’s orders, Anna witnessed to hundreds of students and then decided to take off a day of work to be baptized. Because of Anna, countless students and teachers have the opportunity to find out about Jesus.

Huy, a pastor who moved to the United States from Vietnam when he was very young, wanted nothing to do with his old country. But when a young pastor from Vietnam came and asked him to be one of the first United States pastors to come to Vietnam, he decided to answer God’s call. Miraculously his tickets were provided, his sermon was approved by the government, and because of his unique testimony, hundreds of Vietnamese attended his meetings. People came on ferries, busses and motorcycles from all over to hear the gospel. Church members told him that this was the first time their church had felt alive in more than 25 years, and because of him 19 people were publicly baptized, and many more have expressed an interest. One government official even asked to be baptized privately, and God has continued to open doors in Vietnam for Quiet Hour Ministries ever since.

Aida grew up in a predominately Muslim country, and to her father’s great disappointment she was a mother by the time she was fourteen. When she found out about the evangelistic meetings that were taking place in her city at a movie theater, she decided to attend since no one would worry about a Muslim girl attending a theater. After coming to every meeting, the evangelistic leaders were surprised when she did not decide to become baptized. Later, she asked to be privately baptized, and she and her mother now share the Christian faith and are teaching it to her young daughter. Aida is living in a place where it is dangerous not to be a Muslim, and she is still sharing the gospel in her daily life because of the miraculous salvation story she heard at a movie theater.
