Pianist Constance Kaita Plays
The beat of fine music and good conversation continues with the “Concerts for Peace” series. Attracting an entire spectrum of guests from around the New York City area and our neighbors in Greenwich Village, these concerts are becoming an event that people are looking forward to each month, offering an opportunity to hear World-Class great music at no charge to our guests in the community.

Last week alone, produced two extraordinary evenings, the first night featuring The University of Arkansas Pine Bluff Vesper Choir on Monday evening March 23, that filled the 1881 Landmark Sanctuary of Historic Manhattan Seventh-day Adventist Church with outstanding Gospel Music.

Two days later on Thursday evening, March 26, another audience and many visitors who where there at the beginning of the week, enjoyed the visiting ensemble from Jerusalem, Israel Atar Trio, consisting of piano, cello and violin. They played music inspired by Biblical themes, and the incredible compositions from Gershwin’s Porgy & Bess and other exciting pieces of music that form this popular Israeli’s groups repertoire.

Once again, community attendees ranged from all across the New York City area, including a representative from the Office of Cultural Affairs Consulate of Israel. These concerts provide a place where conversations can begin that bring people together from a wide range of backgrounds and faith traditions, to enjoy fine music while at the same time helping to raise needed funds for local non-profit groups helping underserved New Yorkers.

In the last few weeks alone, several thousands of dollars have been donated via these concerts to support a remarkable mix of local community groups that in turn support families who want help to provide their children with the opportunity to attend safe schools, and another organization working out of Brooklyn, NY who help support low income women and their children who are helped to transition from homelessness into housing of their very own, and funds will be donated this week via these REACH-NYC concerts to a nearby local New York City Public elementary school where 42% of the enrolled students are homeless and living in shelters. Teachers in that school will now be able to provide emergency funding to mothers and their children who lack food and other essentials.

REACH-NYC is fortunate to announce another "Concerts for Peace" evening of great music, played by the powerful and gifted pianist, Constance Kaita, who will perform works by Tchaikovsky, Bach, Clementi, Carl Vine and Chopin. Kaita will perform on Saturday evening, April 11, 2015 at 7:30 PM in the 1881 Landmark Sanctuary of Historic Manhattan Seventh-day Adventist Church, 232 West 11th Street, NYC. Plan to be in attendance at this evening of great classical music.

Please scroll down to see the official invitation for an evening with Pianist Constance Kaita. Invite your friends to this wonderful opportunity to enjoy fine music in New York City’s newest venue to relax and be inspired!

May God continue to bless you with peace.

Best regards - Tony Romeo, Executive Pastor / REACH-NYC
