Paul C. Heubach Appointed University Church Pastor

The new pastor of the University Church is Paul C. Heubach, professor of applied theology in the School of Religion. The announcement was made to both worship services at the church on January 16.

Pastor Heubach comes to P.C. Heubach, Loma Linda University, in 1963 from Walla Walla College where he was pastor of that college and head of the department of theology for 11 years. Prior to that time he was on the Faculty of La Sierra College and was on the staff of the First Congregational Church of the White Memorial Church.

Pastor Heubach received his BA degree from Pacific Union College in 1953. The BDA Theological Seminary at Andrews University, Michigan, granted him the Master of Arts degree in 1964.

He has taken additional graduate work at the Universities of Chicago and the University of Southern California. Pastor Heubach replaces Charles W. Yeiel who became the pastor of the University Medical Center last October.

The people of India will continue to use the four-point system, a plus or minus attached to the average instead of putting the average itself. Likewise, a grade of B+ carries a value of 3.3 in comparison to the past 3.0, as in the past. Likewise, a grade of B is proportionately adjusted to 2.7 instead of 3.0.

"We feel this new system will reflect more precisely the distinction between grades," Dr. Cleveland states.

New Medical Curriculum Development For Gradual Inclusion in Schedule

For their first medical students, the School of Medicine has adopted a new medical curriculum for the School of Medicine beginning February 1, 1965. The new curriculum will replace the old system as in the past. Likewise, a grade of B+ carries a value of 3.3 in comparison to the past 3.0, as in the past. Likewise, a grade of B is proportionately adjusted to 2.7 instead of 3.0.

These Are Not Dark Days

"Do not let us speak of darker days; let us speak of a new dawn. These are not dark days; these are great days — the great days our country has ever lived and we must all strive to have been allowed each of us according to our stations, to play a part in making these days memorable in the history of our race." — Address to the graduates of Harrof School, December 29, 1941.

"These are great days." In those four words the spirit of America is summed up. A year earlier he had promised his countrymen "marching through blood, toil, tears, and sweat." Was he wrong about one or the other of his judgments of the times?

It is not, for Winston Churchill had grasped what many have feared under the shadow of the clouds that MEN AND WOMEN RISE TO CRISIS — that we find buried deep down inside us a spark put there by the Creator that is fanned into flame by supreme challenge.

In the history of every country, every race, every institution are periods of crisis, periods of the call to sacrifice, periods fraught with personal decision that set the course of history. From the leadership of Sir Winston Churchill, and from those who followed him not down the path, but up the path, we find one common denominator, a total dedication to the task at hand. A total dedication to the "blood, toil, tears, and sweat" of those "great days" in the world's history given by King and Princesses, by commoner and lord, by rich and poor, by the powerful and the weak. And with this total dedication.

May the loss of this leader, whose eulogies will be among the finest ever given in this earth's history, be not loss but gain. May we in this time of business, take a moment away from our spirit of "business as usual" and find for ourselves that "these are great days" requiring great sacrifice by all alike.

Perhaps a spirit of pervading dedication to the Cause at hand would then make it possible for those who build in that moment he betrays America. ... We seek no do

The Dimensions of Medicine and Religion

Dr. Provensa probed the University of Chicago professor's thoughts in this area of discussion by asking him to explain how psychology and medicine are different, or are not different, and if they could.

If psychologists are different in religion, it is because they try hard to leave God out of their thinking. Even when we are at the conscious level of decision making, there are many other influences working simultaneouly.

The real dynamics of psychology show a multifaceted man. There is the contribution to healing which may be made by psychology, and there is justification by Divine acceptance granting the power of life or death. If "psychologists 'psychologize' everything away, then they fail to grasp the idea that "bible, family, man, as a closed machine (the body), but that we include a subtle, spiritual dimension that is not palpable, visible, but it is there."

In an earlier work (before the publication of "Systematic Theology") you mentioned that only a priest can make a complete psychiatrist. I wonder how your concept of autonomy for religion and medicine will affect this statement?

The Deacon: The real doctrine makes every man a priest or minister for every other man. It seems to me that at this moment in time there is more danger from the psychological approach of Dr. Provensa than from the physician who enters the world of theology. Psychology is the "name" which in ways perhaps unspoken imparts to his priestly man can be a complete psychiatrist. I often does not."

A physician can, without creating conflict, exert a priestly influence which may be of potential value to the patient rest, elevation, self-actualization, or achieve other basically religious purposes.
