Guest Editorial

By W. H. Holbrook

From the Oral Institute

Albert Shepard, PhD, acclaimed expert in motivational research, recently ticked off five deep-seated psychological needs of Americans to a group of Seventh-day Adventist public relations specialists.

1. A need to feel that we are being overlaid. High pressure advertising has caused words to lose their integrity. There is a common un-consciousness expressed in what he's really trying to foster. There is an inquiring cry for plain, old-fashioned honesty.

2. Growth of self-satisfaction. People feel like objects to be used. There is a marked decrease in love and increase in advertising.

3. This is a switch society. People are madly switching from one thing to the next in a desperate attempt to fill a void in their lives.

4. The growth of terminalism. Trinities come from bad conclusions. People are splitting their lives with double standards of conduct and paying for it with tension.

5. This is an Age of Boredom. There is nothing more to anticipate—nothing to look forward to—but still there is a desperate search for something new. There is a hunger on the part of the people of our country for something by which to steer their lives. They want to stop drifting.

Then Dr. Shepard jabbed his finger at the after-speech cluster of ministers and said, "My organization has severe interests which diverge from those of much of the general population—of people who are picking all the trends in America today and yet seem to be a happy, wholesome group of people. How are they meeting these needs? I know, I've found them in your literature."

He didn't say that he had found them in our lives. Of course, we have the answers in our literature but the world isn't going to listen unless we really live our faith.

Cultural Desert - - - Or Oasis?

Time was when Loma Linda was described by urban dwellers as "the farm," tentatively salvaged from the desert by Colorado River water. Certainly there was little thought that the area one day would experience a cultural explosion.

A decade of progressive growth has brought an increase of love and a decrease of love advertising.

But the farm has since become land sold by the square foot and planners talk of pedestrian shopping malls.

Meanwhile, the population surge stimulating these developments has also made possible a flowering of cultural interest in the Inland Empire.

In a reporter's article, for example, describes the Riverside-San Bernardino-Rodinals area as embracing a "cultural pocket" in inland southern California.

By word community association, as well as by universities and four colleges, the interests of area residents are served by an array of associations, as well as by three universities and four colleges, with high potential for leadership, and with high promise for en- couraging in such performance ac- tivities at the university level as athletics, creative writing, dance, drama, and music."

Thomas Stauffer, cellist and anor at the University of California at Riverside, will give a recital in Burden Hall Sunday, March 27. He is the son of J. Paul Stauffer, PhD, dean of the Graduate School, and Lee Mae Stauffer, who will be his accom- panist for the program.

Thomas Stauffer Concert March 27 at Burden Hall

Thomas Stauffer, cellist, and Lee Mae Stauffer, pianist, will be presented in concert Sunday, March 27, at 8 p.m., in Burden Hall. The recital is open to the public without charge.

Mr. Stauffer is principal cellist of the University Orchestra, University of California at Riv- erdale, and last year was the first recipient of the Highlander Award, presented by the University Orchestra; the University of California at Riv- erdale, and last year was the first recipient of the Highlander Award, presented by the University Orchestra.

Mr. Stauffer also performed with the Napa Symphony Orchestra, and the Pacific Union College Orchestra; as well as with several chamber music groups in the San Francisco area.

Fruits of Much Research

CONDITIONALIST FAITH, as encyclopedic as it is, nevertheless is an amazing distillation of information drawn from millions of original sources during the author's eighteen years of research in the Atlantic. Volume I, now in production, will complete the report of that search with a review of what from Pomfret describes as "the most significant inter- nationalization of the Christian community of the last 700 years, the century between 900 B.C. and 600 A.D."

These volumes will surely stand for years as definitive works and their publication is im- portant, in the tradition of Frye, even more, in the four-volume work pertaining to prophecy and Christian development. The Prophetic Faith of our Fathers, they believe, is concerned with the fact that although in certain denominations only a few Adventists differ from their physiology in some other ecumenical denomination, their minds are not necessarily "unorthodox." Our contentment is in harmony in those beliefs with the expectation of an end to the present system.

After five years of faculty service, Dr. Reynolds went to Sonora, Mexico, where he established and, at one time, was president of the Sonora Adventist University. He was recruited to the Loma Linda faculty in 1943, serving continuously thereafter until his retirement.

Because of a feeling that his work in Mexico had been cut short, Dr. Reynolds devoted much time and means toward a better understanding between that country and the United States.

He was one of the founders and, at one time, the president of the Mexico-Pan American League. He was honored by the Mexican government for his services. Dr. Reynolds is survived by his wife and three daughters: Virginia, Feuna, India, wife of

R. Frank Hurst, MD, of the University of PA College of Medicine.

The annual Walter E. Macpherson Women’s Assembly dinner and a separate dinner honoring the Class of 1938 were scheduled for Friday evening in Los Angleles. The occasion was presided over by Floyd L. Johnson, MD ‘38, at the Gurof dinner at the Ambassador Hotel and Outlook by telephone through Thursday.

The convention banquet in the Biltmore Bowl featured a special program to be announced later. Dr. Charles Bell, an electrical engineer, was the guest speaker.

More than 800 alumni and guests were in attendance at the banquet and were presented with a Lifetime Membership Award.
